4892 Serjeant G. Withers, 20th Hussars.

For conspicuous gallantry and resource. He stationed the night listening posts, and also a day advanced post daily about 300 yards in front of the line, and exhibited the greatest coolness and devotion in the performance of his duties.

8251 Lance-Corporal F. T. Wood, 3rd Battalion, Royal West Surrey Regiment (formerly 2nd Battalion).

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Lance-Corporal Wood and Privates Barrett and Swan collected wounded under very heavy shell and rifle fire, repeatedly and without any orders going out over the trenches to look for more.

24530 Serjeant J. Wood, 8th Siege Battery, Royal Garrison Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry on several occasions as telephonist, notably on one occasion when he went out fearlessly under a heavy fire to repair telephone wires which had been cut by shell fire.

B/3308 Private N. Wood, 6th Battalion, Rifle Brigade (formerly 9th Battalion).

For conspicuous bravery in assisting to dress, under a fierce bombardment, the wounds of a comrade, who was bleeding to death. Private Wood returned to his place on the parapet without it being known that he had received severe wounds from the same shell which injured his comrade.

B/2867 Corporal P. Wooding, 8th Battalion, Rifle Brigade.

For conspicuous gallantry; he assisted to maintain telephone communications intact under heavy shell fire. He also helped his officer to run out the wires and relay the line when Headquarters were changed, and continued to send messages in circumstances of great danger and difficulty.

1724 Private A. G. Woodley, 17th (County of London) Battalion, The London Regiment (Poplar and Stepney Rifles), T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry; he displayed great skill in the maintenance of the communications, and on several occasions carried messages to detached companies under heavy fire.

12602 Lance-Corporal A. Woodroffe, 1st Battalion, Royal Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry; he tended, bound up, and brought in, single-handed, a wounded comrade, under heavy shell fire

44090 Serjeant J. Worthington, 78th Field Company, Royal Engineers.

For consistent good work in exposed and dangerous situations for a period of three months.

2006 Private A. Wright, 1st/6th Battalion, Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry; after the enemy had exploded two mines, he repaired a telephone wire under heavy shell fire. He has repeatedly shown great courage.

3038 Serjeant F. V. Wright, Royal Flying Corps.

For conspicuous devotion, great initiative and energy, and thoroughly good and valuable work throughout the campaign.

1229 Company Quartermaster-Serjeant H. Wright, 6th Divisional Cyclist Company, Army Cyclist Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry throughout the campaign, especially on one occasion when he showed the greatest bravery and devotion in the performance of his duties, and offered a fine example to all ranks.

58275 Gunner S. Wright, 5 C Reserve Brigade, Royal Field Artillery (formerly 104th Battery, 22nd Brigade).

For conspicuous bravery and determination. He was absolutely fearless under fire, and unflinching in his efforts to repair telephone wires. He voluntarily went out and brought in a wounded comrade, who was lying exposed to heavy rifle fire, and was himself wounded as he reached a place of comparative safety.

49285 Gunner J. Wrigley, 34th Trench Mortar Battery, Royal Garrison Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry whilst in charge of mortars in trenches. Gunner Wrigley has never failed to show courage and zeal under exceptionally severe conditions.

---

983 Lance-Corporal A. J. Yates, 9th (County of London) Battalion, The London Regiment (Queen Victoria's Rifles), T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry in rescuing wounded soldiers from the brigade headquarters, which were on fire.

1373 Acting Serjeant G. Yates, 2nd Battalion, Monmouthshire Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry and good work. On one occasion especially his bravery and determination was of the greatest assistance in keeping the men steady under heavy shell fire. He has on all occasions set a fine example to the men, and thus greatly helped his officers.