The Speech of the Lords Commissioners to both Houses of Parliament, on Thursday, February 1, 1816.

My Lords, and Gentlemen,

WE are commanded by His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, to express to you His deep regret at the continuance of His Majesty's lamented indisposition.

The Prince Regent directs us to acquaint you, that He has had the greatest satisfaction in calling you together, under circumstances which enable Him to announce to you the restoration of Peace throughout Europe.

The splendid and decisive successes obtained by His Majesty's arms, and those of His Allies, had led, at an early period of the campaign, to the re-establishment of the authority of His Most Christian Majesty in the capital of His dominions; and it has been since that time His Royal Highness's most earnest endeavour to promote such arrangements as appeared to Him best calculated to provide for the lasting repose and security of Europe.

In the adjustment of these arrangements it was natural to expect that many difficulties would occur; but the Prince Regent trusts it will be found that, by moderation and firmness, they have been effectually surmounted.

To the intimate union which has happily subsisted between the Allied Powers, the nations of the Continent have twice owed their deliverance. His Royal Highness has no doubt that you will be sensible of the great importance of maintaining in its full force that Alliance, from which so many advantages have already been derived, and which affords the best prospect of the continuance of peace.

The Prince Regent has directed copies of the several Treaties and Conventions which have been concluded to be laid before you.

The extraordinary situation in which the Powers of Europe have been placed, from the circumstances which have attended the French revolution, and more especially in consequence of the events of last year, has induced the Allies to adopt precautionary measures, which they consider as indispensably necessary for the general security.

As His Royal Highness has concurred in these measures, from a full conviction of their justice and sound policy, He relies confidently on your co-operation in such proceedings as may be necessary for carrying them into effect.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

The Prince Regent has directed the estimates for the present year to be laid before you.

His Royal Highness is happy to inform you, that the manufactures, commerce, and revenue of the United Kingdom are in a flourishing condition.

The great exertions which you enabled Him to make, in the course of the last year, afforded the means of bringing the contest in which we were engaged to so glorious and speedy a termination.

The Prince Regent laments the heavy pressure upon the country which such exertions could not fail to produce; and His Royal Highness has commanded us to assure you, that you may rely on every disposition, on his part, to concur in such measures of economy as may be found consistent with the security of the country, and with that station which we occupy in Europe.

My Lords, and Gentlemen,

The negotiations which the Prince Regent announced to you, at the end of the last session of Parliament, as being in progress, with a view to a commercial arrangement between this country and the United States of America, have been brought to a satisfactory issue. His Royal Highness has given orders that a copy of the Treaty which has been concluded shall be laid before you; and He confidently trusts, that the stipulations of it will prove advantageous to the interests of both countries, and cement the good understanding which so happily subsists between them.

The Prince Regent has commanded us to inform you, that the hostilities in which we have been involved in the island of Ceylon, and on the continent of India, have been attended with decisive success.

Those in Ceylon have terminated in an arrangement highly honourable to the British character, and which cannot fail to augment the security and internal prosperity of that valuable possession.

The operations in India have led to an armistice, which gives reason to hope that a peace may have been concluded on terms advantageous to our interests in that part of the world.

At the close of a contest so extensive and momentous as that in which we have been so long engaged in Europe, and which has exalted the character and military renown of the British nation beyond all former example, the Prince Regent cannot but feel, that under Providence He is indebted for the success which has attended His exertions, to the wisdom and firmness of Parliament, and to the perseverance and public spirit of His Majesty's people.

It will be the Prince Regent's constant endeavour to maintain, by the justice and moderation of His conduct, the high character which this country has acquired amongst the nations of the world: And His Royal Highness has directed us to express His sincere and earnest hope, that the same union amongst ourselves, which has enabled us to surmount so many dangers, and has brought this eventful struggle to so auspicious an issue, may now animate us in peace, and induce us cordially to co-operate in all those measures which may best manifest our gratitude for the Divine protection, and most effectually promote the prosperity and happiness of our country.

At the Court at Brighton, the 30th day of January 1816,

PRESENT,

His Royal Highness the PRINCE REGENT in Council.

HIS Royal Highness the Prince Regent having been pleased, in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty, to appoint His Grace Charles Duke of Richmond to be Lord Lieutenant of the county of Sussex, His Grace, this day, took the oaths appointed to be taken thereupon, instead of the oaths of allegiance and supremacy.
