THE following Addresses have been presented to His Royal Highness the Prince Leopold of Saxe Cobourg; which Addresses His Royal Highness was pleased to receive very graciously:

To His Serene Highness the Prince Leopold of Saxe Cobourg.

May it please your Serene Highness,

IN this period of general affliction, We, the Mayor, Sheriffs, Citizens, and Commonalty of the ancient and loyal City of Lincoln, beg leave to offer your Serene Highness the expression of our particular condolence, on the melancholy event which has recently deprived your Serene Highness and the nation of one so deservedly dear to both.

In the death of Her Royal Highness your illustrious consort, we are sensible, as we ought to be, how much the country has to deplore in the loss of so amiable and so excellent a Princess.

We feel this great calamity most acutely for ourselves, and whilst we see with admiration the tender and affectionate attachment which has so eminently marked your character throughout the whole of this trying scene, we find our sorrows increased in the contemplation of those which your Serene Highness has thus been called upon to sustain.

It is our humble and earnest prayer, that your Serene Highness may derive from the consolations of Religion, that peace and tranquillity of mind which we are well aware no other source can supply; and we cannot conclude without assuring your Serene Highness that the respect and esteem with which your conduct has on all occasions inspired us, since your Serene Highness first became known to this country, will never fail to excite within us the most ardent wishes for the happiness and prosperity of your future life.

The common seal of the Corporation of the City of Lincoln was hereunto affixed, by an order of Common Council, the 11th day of December in the year of our Lord 1817,

Bell, Town Clerk.

[Transmitted by the Mayor, and presented by Sir Robert Gardiner.]

To His Serene Highness Leopold, Prince of Saxe Cobourg.

WE, the Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen, and Inhabitants of the Borough of Newark-upon-Trent, in the County of Nottingham, with feelings of unfeigned sorrow, seek permission to offer our heartfelt condolence on the irreparable loss your Serene Highness has so recently sustained.

Be assured we deeply participate in the common calamity which hath deprived your Serene Highness of an amiable and virtuous consort, and the nation of a beloved and lamented Princess; but although the hand of death hath unexpectedly torn her from us, yet it may afford some consolation to your Serene Highness to know, that she will ever live in the recollection of a grateful people, and her virtues be the admiration of future ages.

But whilst we thus offer our sentiments of condolence, we entreat your Serene Highness to accept them as a testimony of personal respect and esteem, not less from a sense of those amiable qualities which adorn the character of your Serene Highness, than from that exemplary conduct which has ensured to your Serene Highness the sincere attachment of the British people.

Permit us to add, that although the fondest hopes and expectations of your Serene Highness and the nation have been thus prematurely blighted, there is, in addition to the consolations to be derived from religion, the soothing and gratifying reflection, that every moment of your Serene Highness's life, since the auspicious union which has been so fatally dissolved, exemplified the most affectionate and devoted attachment to the beloved object of our lamentation.

[Transmitted by the Mayor, and presented by Sir Robert Gardiner.]

To His Serene Highness Leopold, Prince of Saxe Cobourg, &c. &c. &c.

The humble Address of the Free Burgesses of the Borough of Alnwick, in the County of Northumberland.

AT a time when every feeling is absorbed in those of sorrow, and the great national calamity felt in every corner of the British empire, we, the Aldermen and Free Burgesses of Alnwick, in Common Guild assembled, participating in the general grief, feel it our duty, no less than our inclination, humbly to offer to your Serene Highness the tribute of our unfeigned sympathy.

Misfortune is common to man; we cannot, however, but regard yours as one which peculiarly designates the inscrutable decrees of the Majesty of Heaven. Loving and beloved; reigning in the hearts of the British people; revered at home, and respected abroad; viewed in prospection as the Mistress of England's happiest period, the hand of death has smitten your beloved consort; blasted our brightest prospects, and destroyed our fondest anticipations; bereft her royal father of a parent's hope, her husband of the fondest, "happiest wife."

Though we are fully sensible of the poignancy of your Highness's affliction, which has at once destroyed your earthly hopes, and blighted the fairest prospects that ever dawned upon a people; though we acknowledge "our anticipated joys to be turned into mourning," and the smile of gladness into the gloom of despair, yet our hope and trust is, that that Being, "who is the Ruler of Princes," and who has promised to comfort those that mourn, will enable you to bear your eventful deprivation with fortitude, and teach us resignation to a dispensation of His Providence, equally awful and sudden. Permit us to close this our address of sincere condolence, by assuring your Serene Highness of our most affectionate and dutiful regard.

Given under our common seal, at Alnwick aforesaid, this 22d day of December, in the 58th year of His Majesty's reign, and in the year of our Lord 1817,
