The Ruby Ring was placed by the Archbishop on the fourth finger of the King's right hand, and the Dean brought from the Altar the two Sceptres with the Cross and Dove, and delivered them to the Archbishop.

Bernard-Edward Duke of Norfolk, as Lord of the Manor of Worksop, then presented His Majesty with a Pair of Gloves, richly embroidered with the arms of Howard, which His Majesty put on; and the Archbishop delivered the Sceptre with the Cross into His Majesty's right hand, and the Sceptre with the Dove into his left hand; the Lord of the Manor of Worksop supporting His Majesty's right arm, and holding the Sceptre, as occasion required.

The Peers then put on their coronets, the Bishops their caps, and the Kings of Arms their crowns. The acclamations ceasing, the Archbishop pronounced the Exhortation, and the Choirs sang the Anthem, "The King shall rejoice in thy strength," &c.

The Archbishop then presented the Bible to the King, and His Majesty having returned the same to the Archbishop, it was replaced on the Altar.

The Archbishop having pronounced the Benediction; the King kissed the Archbishops and Bishops, who knelt before him. The "Te Deum" was then sung, during which the King removed to his chair, on the east side of the Throne; and, at the conclusion, His Majesty was inthroned by the Bishops and Peers, and the Archbishop pronounced the Exhortation; whereupon the Archbishop advanced to the steps of the Throne, and, ascending, knelt before the King, and for himself and the other Lords Spiritual, pronounced the words of Homage, the Archbishop of York and the Bishops kneeling around him, and, for themselves, repeating after him. Then His Royal Highness touched the Crown upon His Majesty's head, and having kissed His Majesty's left cheek, as did the rest of the Dukes of the Blood Royal, retired.

Then the Duke of Norfolk advanced in like manner to the Throne, and being followed by the rest of the Dukes, took off his coronet, knelt before the King, and, for himself and the other Dukes, who also took off their coronets and knelt with him and about him, pronounced the words of Homage, the rest of the same Degree, for themselves, repeating after him. After which His Grace touched the Crown upon His Majesty's head, and kissed His Majesty's left cheek, as did the rest of the Dukes after him, and retired.

The Marquess of Winchester advanced with the rest of the Marquesses: The Earl of Denbigh with the rest of the Earls: The Lord Viscount Hereford with the rest of the Viscounts: and the Lord Audley with the rest of the Barons, and each Degree severally and respectively did their Homage in like manner and retired.

During this part of the Solemnity, the Sceptre with the Cross was held on the King's right hand by the Duke of Norfolk, as Lord of the Manor of Worksop, and the Sceptre with the Dove by the Duke of Rudand: the Treasurer of His Majesty's Household throwing about the Medals of the Coronation, as His Majesty's Princely Largesse or Donative.

The Peers who bore the Regalia, on advancing to do their Homage, severally delivered the same to the Deputy Lord Great Chamberlain, by whom they were returned after the Homage had been performed.

After the Homage, the Bishop of Salisbury, who read the Epistle, and the Bishop of St. David's, who read the Gospel, received from the Altar, by the hands of the Archbishop, the Patina and the Chalice, which they carried into St. Edward's Chapel, and brought from thence the Bread upon the Patina and the Wine in the Chalice. His Majesty, attended as before, having descended into the Area, passed through the door on the south side of the Altar into St. Edward's Chapel; and the Noblemen who had carried the Regalia received them from the Dean of Westminster as they passed by the Altar.

The King being come into the Chapel, and standing before the Altar, delivered the Sceptres to the Archbishop, who laid them upon the Altar. The rest of the Regalia were then delivered to the Dean, and by him laid on the Altar.

Then The King was disrobed of His Dalmatic Robe of State, and arrayed in His Royal Robe of Purple Velvet, the Archbishop delivering the Sceptre with the Cross into His right hand, and the Orb into His left. The Dean then delivered the Sceptre with the Dove to the Duke of Rutland who had before carried it, and who was to bear it in the returning Procession.
