Lord Chamberlain's-Office, July 4, 1832.

OTICE is hereby given, that His Majesty's Levee next week will be on Wednesday, as usual, instead of Monday the 9th instant, as announced in the last Gazette.

Whitehall, July 10, 1832.

HE following Addresses to the King, having been transmitted to the Right Honourable Viscount Melbourne, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, have been by him presented to His Majesty, who was pleased to receive the same very graciously:

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

May it please your Majesty,

WE, your Majesty's faithful and loyal subjects, the Provost and College of Eton, desirous of testifying with the nation in general our dutiful and sincere attachment to your Majesty, and also, if we may be allowed to mix our private with our public feelings, cherishing the warmest gratitude for the repeated marks of peculiar favour and protection, with which your Majesty has graciously condescended to honour the establishment of our pious Founder, King Henry the Sixth, beg leave humbly to express our grief and indignation at the late atrocious outrage committed against your sacred person, and while we acknowledge the protecting care of that Providence, which watched over your s fety, we desire to offer our heartfelt congratulations upon your Majesty's happy deliverance from the threatened danger.

We should be wanting to our sense of duty if, on such an occasion, we withheld the declaration of our unfeigned abhorrence of the many previous insults with which, by misguided and evil-minded men, your Majesty and your beloved Consort, so deservedly the object of the veneration and love of a grateful nation, have been wantonly assailed.

While, however, we deeply lament that so gracious and benevolent a Sovereign should have experienced such flagrant instances of disloyalty, and even the violence of treasonable aggression, we have ample reason to rejoice that it has pleased the Almighty, out of evil, to produce good; and that the malicious designs of partial disaffection have been triumphantly overawed by an almost universal manifestation of sentiments, recording the zealous and devoted loyalty of your Majesty's subjects.

In praying that He, to the guidance of whose wise and merciful Providence, we can alone look for all blessings, will continue to preserve the life of your Majesty, we are convinced that we pray for that which will promote our own happiness, and through the influence of our holy religion, uniting us in the willing discharge of our moral and civil duties, will secure the general welfare and prosperity of a happy people.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Mayor, Sheriffs, and Commonalty of the City of Cork.

Most Gracious Sovereign;

WE, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Mayor, Sheriffs, and Commonalty of the city of Cork, beg leave to approach your royal presence, in order to give expression to those feelings of attachment and devotion to your Majesty with which we are animated.

We have heard, with mingled astonishment and indignation, of the recent attack by which your Majesty's sacred person has been endangered, and humbly offer our earnest congragratulations on your Majesty having escaped from injury in that most wicked attempt.

Permit us, Sire, to add our fervent prayers, that
