Foreign-Office, October 13, 1840.

It is hereby notified, that Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has received a dispatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, dated the 17th of September last, transmitting a note from Rechid Pacha, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Sublime Porte, of the 16th of the same month, announcing that Mehemet Ali Pacha having rejected the conditions of arrangement offered to him, according to the Treaty of Alliance concluded in London on the 15th of July 1840, and the Separate Act annexed thereto, it had been decided by His Imperial Majesty the Sultan, that all the sea ports and harbours of Egypt and Syria should be closely blockaded.

Admiralty, October 10, 1840.

DISPATCHES, of which the following are copies, have been this day received at this Office, addressed to Richard More O'Ferrall, Esq. by Admiral the Honourable Sir Robert Stopford, Commander in Chief of Her Majesty's ships and vessels in the Mediterranean:

*Princess Charlotte, Bay of Antoura,
September 15, 1840.*

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to transmit for their Lordships' information, copies of a letter from Captain Martin, of the Carysfort, with its enclosures, detailing an attack made upon the Castle of Gebail, by a party of marines, under Captain Robinson, R. M. of the Hastings, which, though repulsed at the time, with a loss which I deeply regret, was yet successful in its results, the castle having been evacuated next morning. The possession of that strong hold is of the most material importance, as it commands the main road, by which the enemy might advance upon our position, from the northward, and secures a safe point for the mountaineers concentrating and receiving arms, which they have already done in great numbers, and press forward for more, with every disposition, apparently, to make a good use of them.

Fully coinciding in the encomiums bestowed by Captain Martin and Captain Austin on the merits of the officers and men employed on this service, such as must always be conspicuous where danger calls them forth, I beg to recommend them to their Lordships' favourable consideration.

I have the honour to be, &c. &c.

(Signed) ROBERT STOPFORD, Admiral.

*Her Majesty's Ship Carysfort, Gebail,
September 13, 1840.*

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to inform you that, pursuant to your directions, I anchored yesterday off Gebail.

The enemy have evacuated the town; the mountaineers are coming in fast for arms; and, as far as I can judge, from their words and professions, the most enthusiastic feeling prevails among them.

I trust that these results will, in some degree, excuse the loss we have sustained.

I shall now proceed to detail the circumstances of the attack.

At noon I anchored, with springs, within musket shot of Gebail. The Dido took a good position a-head of the Carysfort, and the Cyclops a-stern; groups of mountaineers immediately came down to the beach, and many were brought off by the boats.

Having given a sufficient time for the marines to prepare for landing, and for their Commanding Officer to reconnoitre the place of disembarkation, at one P. M. the ships opened their fire upon the castle, and upon the points which the mountaineers designated to us as those occupied by the Albanians. This was returned by occasional musket shots. When the fire had been continued with great precision, and apparently with some effect, for about an hour, the marines, accompanied by a large party of armed mountaineers, pushed off from the Cyclops; and to cover their landing the ships reopened upon the castle.

About half past three P. M. observing the detachment formed upon the beach, to the south of the town, and believing all the effect likely to be produced by our shot was already done, and that the gardens had been swept by the launches' carronades, I made the signal to push on.

The marines advanced briskly to the assault, but the cliff soon obstructed my view of their progress through the gardens in front of the castle. They reached within thirty yards of the tower, when a destructive fire was opened upon them from a crenelled outwork, having a deep ditch in front, which was completely masked from the fire of the ships.

Finding his men were falling fast, that the wall of the castle was impracticable, that there was no gate accessible, and nothing but the muzzles of the enemies' muskets visible through the loopholes, Captain Robinson very judiciously drew his men off. The marines retired to the beach steadily and in good order.

Captain Austin, who superintended the landing and accompanied the marines, having sent to me to say that nothing could be done unless the tower was levelled, the ships again commenced firing upon it.

Finding, however, that the immense solidity of the building prevented our making a sufficient impression upon it, at half past five, I ordered the marines to be reembarked, and the firing to cease.

An English flag, which had been planted on the garden wall as a signal to the ships, was accidentally left there by the pilot of the Cyclops, after the marines had retired; Lieutenant Grenfell and Macdonald, a seaman of the Cyclops, volunteered to recover it, and brought it off most gallantly amidst the cheers of the ships.

At night a party of the mountaineers, whom we had armed, were established in the town; and, at daylight this morning, I found that the Albanians had evacuated the castle during the night, leaving three behind (one of them badly wounded, and since dead).

The conduct of a Turkish soldier, who was sent up in the Cyclops, has been admirable in organizing and keeping together parties of the mountaineers.

Having distributed all the arms, I now send the Cyclops for a fresh supply.

I think we may dispose of more, and I take the liberty of suggesting that they should be sent immediately, before the present enthusiasm has time to subside.

The painful part of my duty is to enclose the list of killed and wounded in the attack on Gebail; I deeply lament that it has been so severe.

I have the honour to transmit detailed reports of their proceedings from Captain H. Austin, of Her Majesty's steam ship Cyclops, and from Captain Robinson, commanding the detachment of royal marines; and I beg to add, that I most fully concur in the encomiums they pass upon the officers and men under their respective orders.

I have the honour, &c.

(Signed) H. B. MARTIN, Captain.

Commodore Charles Napier, C. B.
Her Majesty's ship Powerful.

Her Majesty's Steam Ship, Cyclops, off the SIR, Town of Gebail, September 12th, 1840.

IN accordance with your directions I have the honour to report that, in conjunction with Captain Robinson, in command of the detachment of Royal Marines, (specially embarked on board her Majesty's ship under my command,) I first reconnoitred a position for disembarkation; after which, the detachment, consisting of 200 rank and file, and 200 armed Syrians, were put into the boats of Her Majesty's ships, "Princess Charlotte," "Bellerophon," and "Hastings," under the command of Lieutenants Johnson, Hallett, and Thompson, of those ships, and then landed under the cover of the fire of Her Majesty's ships "Carysfort," "Dido," and "Cyclops," about a quarter of a mile to the southward of the town of Gebail. The troops being formed, the gardens in front were scoured by the launch's guns: the boats at this moment remaining fully armed and afloat, in perfect readiness for the re-embarkation of the force, should it prove necessary.

Taking to my assistance the second lieutenant, (George Giffard) Mr. Butler, (mate,) and Mr. J. B. Caffari, (Maltese pilot) as an interpreter; with two gigs' crews; we advanced most cautiously; and so soon as we were within musket shot, a party was detached to wave our ensign, for the purpose of showing our position, in order that the cannonading might cease.

This having been accomplished, and while moving steadily forward, a most sharp and destructive fire was opened from the castle, and at this moment only was the cap of one man seen.

The firing appearing to proceed principally from a line below the ground upon which we were; from this effective resistance, I immediately saw the doubt that existed as to our success, but having advanced thus far, a volunteer party immediately proceeded to advance to the right, for the purpose of determining if there was a chance of forcing an entrance. However, the fire increasing, in conjunction with Captain Robinson, the whole force was drawn off by retiring steadily, under cover of the walls, conveying all the wounded that could be removed. At this moment a small boat was dispatched to you, that we were out of the line of the ships' fire, for the purpose of awaiting the result of a further cannonade; having waited for which, on the beach, during a period of two hours and a half, and seeing the little effect that was produced upon the base of the castle, and numerous persons, some of whom were armed, coming in from all directions, I considered it my duty to re-embark the marine forces, first offering to the natives whom I had landed, either to remove them or wait afloat for their protection, while they took up an elevated position of safety: and by a little persuasion they chose the latter. I then embarked in the spare boats all the unarmed persons who ran to this boat, and in the act of returning I had the satisfaction of meeting you. For the detail of the operations, in a military point, I beg to refer you to the enclosed report of Captain Robinson, in command of the detachment of Royal Marines, whom it is my duty specially to notice; and who commanded and directed the operations of his men in a most able, courageous, and praiseworthy manner; and I beg to observe, that the conduct of the officers and men under his command, was in accordance with that ever displayed by the Royal Marines when under fire. It is with much pain and regret that I have to lament so severe a loss, without at this moment having succeeded in gaining possession of the castle.

I have to notice the able assistance rendered by Lieutenant Giffard and Mr. Butler, (mate), both of this ship, who accompanied me in the attack: the former with my coxswain, (George Martin), I regret to say were severely wounded.

I should not be doing justice to the division of boats before mentioned, if I did not express my satisfaction and full approbation of the ready co-operation afforded by them in the landing and re-embarkation of the troops, and their state of readiness to receive and cover them if necessary—Lieutenant Thompson, the Senior Lieutenant of the "Hastings," being in command.

A Turkish soldier sent on board to superintend the distribution of arms, behaved exceedingly well, first in organizing the Syrians when on board, and afterwards in keeping them together on shore, and leading them on to the attack; and again in posting them so advantageously as would have enabled them to be of considerable use, had the force within advanced.

I beg leave to inclose a return of the killed and wounded on board Her Majesty's Steam Ship under my command.

I have the honour to be, &c.

(Signed) HORATIO T. AUSTIN, Capt.

Captain, H. B. Martin, Senior Officer off Gibella, H.M. ship, Carysfort.

Her Majesty's Ship Cyclops, Sept. 12, 1840.

SIR,

I BEG to acquaint you, for the information of Captain Martin, Senior Officer, with the proceedings of the detachment under my command, consisting of about two hundred rank and file of the royal marines, divided into four companies, under the command of Captain Searle and of Lieutenants Searle, Harrison, and Adair. Having had the pleasure to agree with you so perfectly as to the selection of the place for landing, it is only necessary for me to say, that the cannonading and shelling of the position and castle of Gebail having been executed apparently with the most perfect and complete success by Her Majesty's ships Carysfort, Dido, and Cyclops, and the gardens, fences, &c. thoroughly scoured and swept by the fire of the launches, the detachment was landed and formed in column, extended to the right, and then advanced directly upon the building, covered by the fences on the ascent as far as the summit, which being gained without the slightest intimation of the presence of an enemy, and you as well as myself considered it impossible after the effectual battering the building had undergone, that any one could remain in it; the companies were advanced in front of the last wall, and in the act of extending to advance, when a very heavy fire of musketry was suddenly opened from the loop holes of the castle, but principally, as it since appears, from the loop holes of the castle a few inches above the ground, from excavation passages; the fire was returned by the detachments, and after one or two rounds, I withdrew the men under the last wall, and pushed forward a sergeant and four or five men to ascertain whether there was any possibility of getting access into the building, either by the doors or the vacancies caused by the bombardment. The enemy's fire, however, became so warm, that as you who were present in person during the whole affair, must be aware, it was quite hopeless to persevere with any prospect of success, and therefore I withdrew the detachments to the point of disembarkation, and from thence, in about an hour afterwards, the whole were once more embarked in the Cyclops. The painful part of my duty, is to report the extent of our loss, which as you will perceive amounts (by the return annexed), to one corporal and two privates killed, and one corporal and one private since dead from their wounds, and one second lieutenant, one lance serjeant, and fourteen privates wounded, nearly all severely.

The pleasing part of my duty now only remains, which is, to state that nothing could exceed the zeal, courage, and alacrity of the non-commissioned officers, drummers, and privates, who fully sustained the honourable character of the corps.

My warmest gratitude is due to Captain Searle (the next senior officer), and also to Lieutenants Adair, Searle, and Harrison, Commanding Companies, for the gallant and most efficient support I received from them, and also to Lieutenant Spalding, Acting Adjutant of the detachment, for the active performance of every part of his duty, and more particularly for his gallantry in exerting himself in bringing off the wounded.

I have the honour to be,
&c. &c. &c.
