That the correspondence of the Spanish squadron will be conveyed in the Company's steamers, either in charge of a person appointed by the Admiral, or in sealed bags under the receipt of the commander or purser of the steamer, and that the same will be delivered at any or all of the ports touched at by the steamers, to the person or persons to whom it may be directed. That the Company's steamers will admit as passengers persons belonging to the Spanish squadron. That in view of the neutrality which the Company is bound to maintain, the conditions are applicable to both belligerents, it being understood that for either of the same can be taken officers, soldiers, sailors, or public functionaries, in number not exceeding six, at any one time. That the packets will be allowed to take sufficient coal at Caldera. These conditions, of course, can be withdrawn should Admiral Pareja find it necessary.

Therefore the magistrates feel it to be their duty in order to carry out the spirit of the Government's Order in Council, to give instructions to the Inspectors of Leath Ward District, to inspect all cattle and other animals which may be found at the Penrith Station, or other stations in Leath Ward, on their route, and to give a certificate only for such cattle as they may find free from the Cattle Plague, but to deal with any for which such certificate cannot be given, as by law they are authorised to do.
