*Board of Trade (Harbour Department),
Whitehall Gardens, July 18, 1884.*

THE Board of Trade have received through the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs a copy of a Despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Madeira, reporting as follows:—

July 7.—By a recent decision of the Board of Health at Lisbon all the ports of England and the English Mediterranean ports are considered "suspected" of cholera; a quarantine of observation is consequently imposed on ships arriving from such English ports.

The decision came into operation here on the 6th instant.

Ships arriving from the suspected ports will not be admitted to free pratique until five days after their departure from those ports, nor unless they bring clean bills of health certified by a Portuguese Consul, and it be proved by a certificate of the ship's surgeon that there had been no suspicious sickness on board either in course of the ships' voyage, or during their stay at ports of departure, provided also that the Portuguese Consular or other competent officer informs, by telegraph, the Chief Officer of the Health Department here that no cases of cholera have occurred at such ports during the five days subsequent to the ship's departure.

In the absence of any telegraphic information, and when there is no surgeon on board ships, their people, baggage, and susceptible cargo will have to perform a quarantine of observation of five days duration, after which they will be admitted to free pratique if no sickness should have occurred on board in the interval.

No lazaretto on shore has yet been provided for the reception of passengers and cargo, but means are likely to be arranged for the performance of quarantine of observation afloat.

This quarantine will not hinder the coaling and provisioning of ships at the port of Funchal.
