

communication with, a district infected with cholera.

(b.) In case during the voyage of the ship there has been on board any person who has been ill or died of the cholera, or of any illness suspected to be that of cholera, or the vessel during her voyage has had communication with any other vessel on board of which at the time there has been any such sick or dead person; and

(c.) In case, on the arrival of the vessel at Kängsö, there should be on board any person who is ill or has died of cholera, or any other illness suspected to be cholera, or if any one on board the vessel during her detention at Kängsö, fall ill or die of such disease,

The quarantine to continue until six days have elapsed, reckoned in the case referred to under (a), from the day the vessel has left or touched at or otherwise had any communication with a district infected with cholera; in the case referred to under (b), from the day of the arrival of the vessel at Kängsö; and in the case referred to under (c) from the day the last sick or dead person was carried away from the vessel.

§ 4. In case it be found on inspection that a vessel is not subject to quarantine in pursuance of § 3, a certificate shall be given to that effect.

§ 5. The regulations enacted in the Gracious Decree of September 5, 1884, relating to an extended application of the present regulations for the hospital for quarantine at Kängsö, shall be applied in pursuance of § 2, when vessels arrive at the place of quarantine.

§ 6. In addition to which the provisions contained in the Ordinance of the 19th March, 1875, relating to measures against the introduction and spreading of contagious diseases amongst the inhabitants of the Kingdom, shall continue to be observed, and in case of instances of cholera occurring in or in the vicinity of a port on the Baltic, we will see whether any special regulations with reference to this question may be required.

And this all whom it may concern shall obediently observe.

In further attestation whereof,
