War Office, 2nd July, 1907.

The following Despatches have been received by the Secretary of State for the Colonies:—

No. 35.

SIR F. LUGARD TO COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received July 26, 1906.)

July 19, 1906.

Despatch relating to Field Operations.

My Lord,

I have the honour to submit a Despatch from Lieutenant-Colonel J. Hasler, second in command, Northern Nigeria Regiment, covering one from Major R. H. Goodwin, describing the operations near Sokoto in March last. I have also the honour to submit a report by Colonel Lowry Cole, D.S.O., Commandant, Northern Nigeria Regiment, upon the operations at Hadeija. I have delayed the former report until I should have received the latter, since the two formed part of what may be considered a single campaign, undertaken largely by the same troops.

2. The causes which led to the operations in March will be within your Lordship's recollection. A party composed, it would seem, partly of malcontents of the lower orders and partly of a fanatical band of religionists, who lived at a village named Satiru, 14 miles south of Sokoto, under the leadership of Mallam Isa, son of a man who in the previous year had declared himself to be a Mahdi, and of one Dan Makafo, an outlaw from French territory, who boasted that he had killed two French officers, raised the standard of revolt and inaugurated their proceedings by the massacre of ten or twelve persons and the destruction of the neighbouring village of Tsomo, because they would not join them. The outbreak was as much directed against the Emir of Sokoto, head of the Mussulmen, as against the British, and was, in fact, hostile to all instituted authority, and the Emir was completely unaware of the movement.

3. Lieutenant F. E. Blackwood was at the time in command of the Company of Mounted Infantry at Sokoto, and, at the request of the Acting Resident (Mr. H. R. Preston-Hillary, who, with his assistant, Mr. A. G. M. Scott, accompanied him), he moved out on the morning of February 14th, towards the village of Satiru. Mr. Hillary was eager to settle the matter without bloodshed, and confident that he could do so, and it was probably solely owing to this gallant attempt to give effect to the policy of the Administration by avoiding bloodshed by every possible means, that he lost his life. Arrived at Satiru, he and Mr. Scott left the troops and rode towards the village, shouting that they had not come to fight but to discuss the causes which had led to this disturbance. Lieutenant Blackwood, it appears, fearing for the lives of his comrades, which he judged to be in danger, abandoned the military precautions he would otherwise have taken, and advanced his men at the gallop, and then, after forming square, again endeavoured to advance to their support. A mounted infantry square is not a formation which is easily capable of being advanced at the critical moment of a charge, but, if a tactical mistake was made, it was made with a most gallant and heroic intention, and it may be said that Lieutenant Blackwood lost his life in his endeavour to secure the safety of his comrades. The Satiru rebels took no heed of the invitation to a peaceful discussion, and charged the disorganized square. Lieutenant Blackwood and Messrs. Hillary and Scott fell fighting at the point of impact. Dr. Ellis, Medical Officer, was severely wounded, and was helped out of action by Sergeant Gosling, the only other European present. Twenty-five rank and file out of 69 were killed, and the greater part of the remainder were panic-stricken by the death of their officers, and the mêlée caused by their bolting horses and the overwhelming numbers of the fanatical though ill-armed enemy. Their discipline and courage were, however, vindicated by the gallant action of two men, Privates Moma Wurrikin and Moma Zaria, who, regardless of their own lives, endeavoured to save Mr. Scott (and nearly succeeded in doing so), and finally rescued Dr. Ellis and placed him on a horse, beating off their assailants with great coolness and courage meanwhile. The native Sergeant-Major, Adamu Yola, also collected all whom he could find, and retired slowly and in good order.

4. Sergeant Slack, R.A., had been left in the fort at Sokoto in charge of his gun detachment. On receiving the news of this disaster he put the defences in order, summoned assistance from the Emir of Sokoto, and advanced towards the scene of the action, meeting Dr. Ellis and the other fugitives. He is reported as having behaved with coolness and discretion in this crisis. The Native Administration responded with the utmost loyalty. Though at first it appeared as if the troops had been exterminated, and only a British sergeant (whom the Sultan had never even seen) was left alive, the horsemen of Sokoto, headed by the Sultan's and the Wazeri's own sons, assembled immediately for the defence of the fort, a message was at once sent to Jegga, some 90 miles distant, where there was a detachment of infantry under a British non-commissioned officer, summoning them to the assistance of Sokoto, and stating that a "new Mahdi had arisen," and that the Mounted Infantry Company had been "annihilated." The telegraph, which I had been pushing forward by concentrated efforts for many months past, had already reached Ambrusa, 25 miles from Jegga, and these messages were at once sent on to wire-head and transmitted to me. They reached me late on the 15th, within 36 hours of the occurrence of the disaster. Meanwhile the Jegga detachment marched at once (3 A.M.) accompanied by Mr. McAllister, Assistant Resident, and were joined en route by 150 loyal horsemen from Tambawel. The fact that these various messages from Sokoto to Jegga, and thence to wire-head were carried with such rapidity, necessitating fresh horses in villages passed through, that the loose horses of the mounted infantry were all caught and brought in (the total loss of horses being only 4), and the way in which the chiefs from Tambawel to Sokoto rallied to our assistance, is significant of the loyalty of the people. The Emir of Gando was alone disaffected. Major Burdon, the Resident, had only left Sokoto en route to headquarters a day or two prior to these occurrences. Messengers overtook him and he hurried back, and assumed the direction of affairs. The Jegga troops arrived safely, and the fort was rapidly placed in a thorough state of defence, while chief after chief arrived with his following to assist, and undertook the scouting day and night within a radius of some five miles.

5. Meanwhile the Sokoto chiefs had assembled a following of some 3,000 men, and marched on Satiru. So great, however, had the prestige of this rabble become, owing to their success against our troops, that the Sokoto people dared not face them, and their leader narrowly escaped with his life, being saved by the intrepidity of the same two soldiers whom I have mentioned above, who had been allowed with a few others to accompany the Sokoto Army.

6. This is the first reverse experienced by the West African Frontier Force since I raised it in 1898, and it came at a singularly unfortunate moment. The military forces of the Protectorate admit of the mobilization of a striking force of about 500 rank and file. This force, increased to rather over 600, with an exceptionally strong proportion of officers, had been dispatched to restore order and release the captives taken by the Munshis in their unprovoked attack upon the trading station of Abinsi, on the Benue, over 300 miles from Zungeru, which is itself 250 from Sokoto. The nature of the disaster and the terms of the early telegrams were such as to cause me very grave anxiety, for, apart from the safety of the other British officers in Sokoto, it was impossible to predict what course the victorious rebels might adopt, and what the effect of such a loss of prestige might be. In order to forestall any spread of the disaffection, and eventual grave emergency, I requested the Governor of Southern Nigeria to lend me what troops he had available and I recalled the Munshi Expedition, but neither of these could arrive in time to deal with the present crisis.

Before describing the steps taken to deal with the situation thus created, I desire to record my sense of the great loss which this Protectorate has experienced by the deaths of Messrs. Hillary and Scott, and Lieutenant F. E. Blackwood. The former lost their lives, as I have described in paragraph 3, by an endeavour to avoid bloodshed, while Lieutenant Blackwood died in the gallant attempt to save them. I trust that your Lordship may see fit to bring the action of this brave young officer to the special notice of the Army Council.

7. To relieve Sokoto I at once sent 75 rifles from Zungeru—all that were available—which would be reinforced by 75 more from Kontagora en route. The command was entrusted to Major Goodwin, Royal Artillery, in whose ability and level-headedness I had the greatest confidence; I had found his advice and soldierly promptitude of the greatest value. The 75 rifles left Zungeru within 24 hours of the receipt of the news by me from Sokoto, and the whole party of 150 reached Sokoto on March 1st (214 miles in 8½ days) having been treated with the greatest hospitality and friendliness by the villages passed. Another 100 rifles were ordered up from Lokoja, and reached Sokoto on March 8th. Wire-head had at first been abandoned, and for some 10 days after the receipt of the first telegrams I received no further news, but I later heard that the enemy had made no hostile movement against the fort, and had contented themselves with raiding the neighbouring towns, killing a great number of people and burning the villages. I was able, therefore, to dispatch 200 Mounted Infantry from Kano with 11 officers and British non-commissioned officers, who arrived at Sokoto on March 4th.

8. On March 10th Major Goodwin advanced on Satiru with a force of 21 officers, nine British non-commissioned officers, and 517 rank and file. I submit to your Lordship that the concentration of such a force at so remote a place as Sokoto within 24 days of the disaster, and in spite of the absence of the Munshi Expedition, indicates a very high standard of efficiency, and is a performance of which the Northern Nigeria Regiment may justly be proud. There were, in addition, some 70 armed constabulary in charge of the fort: their arms were not sufficiently reliable to admit of any portion taking part in the action. The enemy fought with great bravery, repeatedly charging the square, and the village was taken at the point of the bayonet. The Mounted Infantry pursued the fugitives, as did also the native horsemen, who had accounts to settle with them for the numbers of people they had killed, and the villages they had destroyed.

9. I would bring to your Lordship's notice, and to that of the Secretary of State for War and the Army Council, the admirable service done by Major R. H. Goodwin, Royal Artillery, not only in his skilful handling of his troops in the field, which is apparent from the enclosed despatches, but also in the dispositions made prior to the advance of the reliefs. I formed a very high opinion of this officer, and I predict for him a distinguished career. He brings to my notice the names of two officers, Captains Gallagher and Fendall, and two British non-commissioned officers, Sergeants Slack and Maynard; the proportion (4 out of 30) is not large, and I would strongly recommend them for recognition, and, in especial, Captain Gallagher, who has, on repeated occasions, shown exceptional ability in handling troops, and distinguished personal gallantry. He has been frequently mentioned in despatches, and I believe that his influence with his men is unusual, and they will follow him anywhere. I endorse the recommendations among the native ranks which appear in the despatches, and in especial I desire to commend the conduct of Privates Moma Wurrikin and Moma Zaria, whom I referred to in paragraph 3. The action of Private Moma Wurrikin appears to me worthy of the highest reward. Lieutenant-Colonel Hasler adds the names of two more officers, and of one non-commissioned officer for your consideration, especially that of Captain Macdonell. I trust also that your Lordship may see fit to express, through the High Commissioner of Southern Nigeria, to Major McLeod and the officers and 150 rank and file of the Lagos contingent your appreciation of the strenuous efforts made by them to reach Northern Nigeria with the least possible delay. They started, I believe, within 24 hours of the receipt of the news, and reached Zungeru on or about March 5th, too late, of course, to take part in the operations, but, had the matter taken a more protracted and less fortunate course, their services would have been of great value to us. Their discipline and conduct was exemplary, and I heard no single word of complaint during their stay in Northern Nigeria. I would also remind your Lordship of the really phenomenal marches made by the troops under Lieutenant-Colonel Hasler's command, on receipt of the news and orders of recall, from Munshiland.

Captain Cock, with a column of 280 troops and 300 carriers, marched overland some 312 miles in 12½ days, over bad roads and through a part of the country affording insufficient supplies. Lieutenant-Colonel Dobell, coming by river to Katcha, with a half company, marched the last 83 miles in 48 hours.

10. The difficulty and anxiety at the time was very greatly increased by news from Eastern Bauchi that certain fanatical preachers were inciting the people to exterminate "unbelievers," and by the attitude of the Emir of Hadeija—or rather of a war-faction among his chiefs and satellites. The former matter was dealt with in a prompt and effective way by the Hon. O. Howard, Resident of Bauchi, but I judged it unwise to postpone any longer a settlement of the matters at issue with Hadeija. It was, I think, largely due to the boastful and independent attitude of this town that the propaganda to which I have alluded had arisen. Even after the arrest of the preachers in Bauchi, it appeared doubtful whether the band of fanatical leaders, who were said to have assembled in German territory with the view of preaching a Jihad at Bima, in Bauchi, had finally dispersed. For three years I had endeavoured to conciliate Hadeija, and this action was, as usual, interpreted as a sign of fear. Our reverse at Satiru compelled me to reassert the prestige of the Government (on which our rule depends), and I judged that the fall of Hadeija would put a final end to the Bima excitement. Nor could I longer afford to leave this threat on the flank of Kano, necessitating the presence of 250 troops, whom I could not detach for service elsewhere, however great the emergency. Moreover, of late it had been reported that schemes for "rushing" the fort at night had been discussed in Hadeija. In addition to this a soldier had been murdered, it was said deliberately and in cold blood, by the Emir's orders, but this had not been proved, and investigation or reparation was, in the circumstances and tension, impossible without recourse to arms. I, therefore, instructed the Resident to inform the Emir that this state of things had now lasted long enough, and to call upon him to surrender the principal agitators of the war faction whose names were well known (giving him 24 hours to consider his reply); these I intended to remove to another province. Meanwhile I told the Resident to inform the Emir, whom I believed to be not ill-disposed, that if he was anxious but unable to comply with my ultimatum, he might run away to Katagum till the trouble was over, after which I would reinstate him.

11. The Commandant, Colonel Lowry Cole, had meantime returned to Nigeria, the troops had returned from Munshiland, and by April 16th the forces engaged at Sokoto had also returned. On that date a force marched out of Kano. When joined by the garrison of Hadeija it amounted to 24 officers, 10 British non-commissioned officers and 687 rank and file, with two guns, and was accompanied by Captain Phillips, D.S.O., Resident, and Captain Rice, Assistant Resident. They found on their way that all preparations for fighting had been made at Hadeija. My message was sent to the Emir, who struck the messenger (the greatest insult a Fulani could offer), and contemptuously invited Colonel Cole to come and arrest the persons for himself. A main gate in the almost impregnable walls (which rival or surpass those of Kano) was immediately seized. It was not defended, and Colonel Cole formed up inside the town in the open space which intervened between the outer and an old ruined inner wall. Acting with striking self-constraint, and knowing my desire to avoid bloodshed, he sent a messenger three times to "warn the people that if they laid down their arms and came out they had nothing to fear," and he was about to send a fourth embassy with an officer, though the mounted men were apparently ready for action, when he was charged by a body of mounted spearmen. The majority were swept away by the fire of the troops, but re-formed, and charged again with the same result. Again Colonel Cole hoped to avoid the heavy losses to both sides and destruction of property which would result from street fighting, and he gave them 20 minutes to consider their position, and also sent mounted men to the flanks to warn any people they might see to come out by the flanks and avoid the fire. The streets, however, remained guarded by the enemy, and shots and arrows were fired, so that Colonel Cole determined to enter the town.

"The compounds and streets," he reports, "were stubbornly held, the mounted men charging down on our men repeatedly, while slugs and arrows were fired from the doors and walls in the side streets. After about 1½ hours' fighting," the troops reached the Emir's enclosure. Here the resistance was very stubborn, but the entrance was at length forced, and the defenders killed or captured. "In the meantime large numbers of the poorer inhabitants, having laid down their arms, came pouring out by the flanks and were collected behind the reserve. I estimated these at between 3,000 and 4,000." Steps were immediately taken to prevent looting, and the unarmed inhabitants returned to the city. Colonel Cole reports that the officers and British non-commissioned officers deserve great credit for the control which they kept over their men, in circumstances the most trying which troops can be engaged in, viz., street fighting in a populous and wealthy city. The heat was intense (115° in the shade). The fighting men were chiefly mounted, and armed with swords, spears, bows and arrows, and a few firearms. They fought most bravely. Many wore shirts of chain mail. The Emir and his son were shot when charging boldly at a few yards' distance, but few of the poorer people seem to have been killed.

12. I feel sure that your Lordship will feel no less pleasure and gratification than I do at the humanity with which these operations were conducted, and will appreciate the high state of discipline and control which rendered it possible to make such measures effective. The constant efforts to settle the matter without further bloodshed even after fighting had begun, the care taken to allow the unarmed population a means of escape, and to restore them at once to their homes when the fighting was over, the successful efforts to prevent looting and destruction of property, resulted in an almost immediate pacification and resumption of their normal avocations by the people. It may seem almost quixotic to pay for all supplies when marching through a hostile district, and to take no supplies from the city which had fought against us, but I am of opinion that such actions teach the people confidence in the Government, and show them that the fighting is directed solely against those who take up arms against the King's troops.

13. I submit, for your Lordship's consideration and that of the Secretary of State for War and the Army Council, the name of Colonel Lowry Cole, whose dispositions led to so complete and effective a victory, and to whom (assisted by the Resident, Captain Phillips, D.S.O.) is due the credit for the measures of humanity to which I have called attention. The operations were brilliantly carried out, and the troops were so well handled that remarkably few casualties occurred amongst our men, though the nature of the fighting was such as to lead to the expectation that they would be numerous. Colonel Cole brings forward the names of eight officers, three British non-commissioned officers, and several men as deserving of special mention, and I submit them with confidence to your Lordship's consideration, especially those of Captain Fforde Searight and Major Dobell.

I have, &c.,

F. D. LUGARD,

High Commissioner.

The returns of casualties, expenditure of ammunition, &c., with sketches of route from Kano to Hadeija and Hadeija town, have been detached, but they can be forwarded if desired.

Enclosure 1 in No. 35.

Brigade Office, Northern Nigeria Regiment,
West African Frontier Force, Zungeru,
Sir, March 24, 1906.

I have the honour to forward herewith the despatch of Major Goodwin on the recent operations near Sokoto.

The attack appears to have been very well planned, and carried out with great dash and skill.

The co-operation of the Infantry and Mounted Infantry seems to have been very successful, and the whole conduct of the operations reflects the greatest credit on all concerned.

I recommend that the grant of the Africa General Service Medal be applied for to all the troops employed under Major Goodwin from the 19th February, 1906, to March 11th, both dates inclusive.

I would bring to your notice the services of the following officers and non-commissioned officers and men, all of whom appear worthy of recognition:—

Captain (temporary Major) R. H. Goodwin, Royal Artillery, 1st Northern Nigeria Regiment.

This officer commanded the operations with great skill and success. He has proved himself a tactful leader, and has gained the confidence of all serving under him.

Captain (temporary Major) A. D. Green, D.S.O., Worcestershire Regiment, Mounted Infantry, Northern Nigeria Regiment.

This officer is mentioned by Major Goodwin as having handled the Mounted Infantry most skilfully, and co-operated excellently with the Infantry. He further led his Mounted Infantry with great dash in the pursuit.

Captain A. E. Gallagher, 9th Battalion, King's Royal Rifle Corps, 1st Battalion, Northern Nigeria Regiment.

This officer's services were of the greatest value to Major Goodwin. It was largely owing to his cheerfulness and untiring energy that the troops covered the distances they did on the march to Sokoto. In the action he commanded the front face of the square, and afterwards led the charge into the town, and continued to do so after he was hit in the elbow with an arrow, presumably poisoned. He inspired the greatest confidence in his men, who would follow him anywhere.

Lieutenant P. P. W. Fendall, Border Regiment, Mounted Infantry, Northern Nigeria Regiment.

This officer is highly mentioned by Majors Goodwin and Green for his excellent work in reconnoitring on March 5th and 6th, and also for his scouting and drawing the enemy on on March 14th. He has shown marked capacity as a Mounted Infantry leader.

Captain D. H. Macdonell, City of London Imperial Yeomanry, Mounted Infantry, Northern Nigeria Regiment.

An officer of exceptional ability. His example and great personal influence went far to re-establish the confidence of his company, which had been roughly handled in the engagement of February 14th. Although wounded early in the day, he continued to lead his men with dash and gallantry.

Sergeant J. Slack, Royal Artillery.

This non-commissioned officer did excellent work with his gun in the action of March 10th. Previous to that he had done most valuable work in Sokoto Fort. He acted as Staff Officer to Major Burdon, Resident, Sokoto Province, who speaks of him in the highest terms.

Sergeant J. H. Maynard, Northumberland Fusiliers, 1st Battalion, Northern Nigeria Regiment, who did excellent work on the 10th March.

Sergeant H. Bullock, Royal Army Medical Corps, who worked untiringly in the care of the sick and wounded.

Sergeant T. Browning, 21st Lancers, Mounted Infantry, Northern Nigeria Regiment, who did excellent service on March 10th.

No. 1836, Lance-Corporal Dowdu Chicogo, No. 3739, Private Samari, "F" Company, 1st Northern Nigeria Regiment.

These men were specially noticed by Major Goodwin for the way they stuck to Captain Gallagher during the bayonet charge, and by their fire and bayonet fighting protected him from the enemy.

No. 195 Company Sergeant-Major Garuba Kukua, Mounted Infantry, Northern Nigeria Regiment; No. 1141 Company Sergeant-Major Basheru, Sokoto, Mounted Infantry, Northern Nigeria Regiment; No. 1684, Sergeant Oyan-shola, "B" Company, 1st Battalion, Northern Nigeria Regiment, all of whom, by their example and influence, performed most excellent service.

I have, &c.,

J. HASLER, Lieutenant-Colonel,

Acting Commandant, Northern Nigeria Regiment, West African Frontier Force.

His Excellency the High Commissioner,
Northern Nigeria.

Sokoto, March 11, 1906.

The Brigade Major, Zungeru,

I have to report as follows:—At about 7.30 P.M. on the 15th February, 1906, at Zungeru, I received news from His Excellency the High Commissioner of the reverse to the Mounted Infantry Company at Sokoto, and the deaths in action of Residents Hillary and Scott, and Lieutenant Blackwood. The following morning I obtained His Excellency's permission to leave Zungeru with 75 rifles, 1st Northern Nigeria Regiment, and proceed to Sokoto via Kontagora, picking up 75 rifles "B" Company, 1st Northern Nigeria Regiment, at the latter station. Orders were issued to "F" Company, 1st Northern Nigeria Regiment, on morning 16th February, and the same evening this detachment was ferried across the Kaduna and encamped on the right bank. I was myself detained by His Excellency until the arrival of Major Cockburn at Zungeru. This officer was wired to at Lokoja on the 16th to come up as fast as possible to Zungeru, bringing 100 rifles with him. This force embarked on the evening of the 16th, left Lokoja the morning of the 17th, and Major Cockburn arrived in Zungeru the evening of the 19th. I rode to Kontagora on the 20th, and found that Captain Gallagher, with the 75 rifles from Zungeru, had arrived the same afternoon.

This officer had made all preparations for leaving Kontagora the following morning.

The force, as per margin,* marched out of Kontagora on the morning of the 21st February, and arrived at Sokoto on the morning of the 1st March, covering the distance—214 miles—in 8½ days.

At Daragga, I received news from Zungeru leading me to suppose that reinforcements were urgently needed. I therefore left at Daragga all loads that could possibly be spared, Europeans' loads were cut down to 2½ per man, inclusive of rations, and proceeded as fast as possible.

Before arriving at Sokoto I heard from Major Burdon, C.M.G., Resident, Sokoto Province, that he considered the garrison sufficiently strong to resist an attack, and that he contemplated no immediate danger. The rising, he moreover informed me, was confined to the following of a fanatical Mallum, who had rebelled against us and against the Serikin Maslimin. As soon as I entered the Sokoto Province it was quite apparent that there was no rising among the native chiefs, for I found that the Serikin Maslimin had sent down the road for preparations to be made to ration my men, and at all the large towns I passed I was treated with the greatest hospitality.

On my arrival at Sokoto I found that Major Burdon, C.M.G., who had taken over command in the absence of any military officer, had taken every precaution for putting the fort in a state of defence. All Europeans were living in the fort; a regular system of outposts had been adopted, and the fort itself much strengthened. The enemy was still occupying Satiru, about 14 miles due south of Sokoto; had made no attempt to follow up his success of the 14th February, and had contented himself with raiding the villages around, murdering those of the inhabitants who refused to join him, and burning the villages. He was reported to number perhaps up to 5,000, to be badly armed, but very cunning and enterprising. He was said to be making no use of the carbines and Maxim gun captured from the Mounted Infantry.

I now felt every confidence that with my present force I should defeat the enemy with heavy loss, but as it was desirable that so dangerous a body of fanatics should be completely defeated, I decided to wait for the reinforcements which were coming up. Major Green, D.S.O., with Mounted Infantry, strength as per margin†, arrived at Sokoto on the 4th March, and Major Cockburn, strength as per margin‡, on the morning of the 8th March.

In the meantime I had spared no pains to perfect the column in the formations which I proposed adopting. On the 5th I had sent an officer's patrol to make a reconnaissance of the enemy's position, and this duty was performed by Lieutenant Fendall with great skill and enterprise. Although the harmattan was blowing with exceptional thickness, and the enemy tried to cut him off, he drew a map of Satiru and the surrounding country, which afterwards proved of the greatest assistance to me.

* 5 officers, 2 European non-commissioned officers, 153 rank and file, including 3 buglers, 1 medical officer, and 1 medical non-commissioned officer.

† Major Green, D.S.O., 7 officers, M.I., N.N.R., 4 European non-commissioned officers, and 200 rank and file, M.I., N.N.R.

‡ Major Cockburn, 6 officers, and 114 rank and file, 1st and 2nd N.N.R.

At 2 A.M. on the 10th March, the column marched from Sokoto towards Satiru; before entering the dangerous zone a halt was called until daylight, and the column then proceeded towards Satiru.

The total strength of the force was:—

Major R. H. Goodwin in command, accompanied by

Major A. Burdon, C.M.G., Political Officer,

Major J. B. Cockburn, Staff Officer,

1 Medical Officer, 2 Medical Non-commissioned Officers,

1 Veterinary Officer, 1 Veterinary Non-commissioned Officer.

1 European Non-commissioned Officer, with 2·95" gun, 11 gunners,

8 Officers, 2 European Non-commissioned Officers, 277 Rifles, 2 Maxims, 1st and 2nd Northern Nigeria Regiment, 8 Officers, 3 European Non-commissioned Officers, 229 Rank and File, Mounted Infantry, Northern Nigeria Regiment.

Total, 21 officers, 9 European non-commissioned officers, 517 native ranks. One section of the Mounted Infantry scouted to the front, the main body consisted of the gun, infantry, and Maxims all in "alert" formation, with the rest of the Mounted Infantry in rear.

On the occasion of the reverse to "C" Company, Mounted Infantry, on the 14th of February, the enemy had attacked the Company on a perfectly open plain, and I asked for nothing better than that he should repeat these tactics now. The duty of the Mounted Infantry was, therefore, an exceedingly delicate one. If the enemy became aware of so large a body of horsemen, he might either retire into his town or attack the mounted men, in either of which cases my object of inducing him to attack the Infantry square in the open would be defeated. Lieutenant Fendall was in charge of the scouting section to the front, and this duty he performed with great skill. After locating the enemy he retired slowly before him without firing a single shot, drawing him on to the square which I had formed in the open, close to where the Mounted Infantry Company had been attacked on the 14th February.

The enemy, to my disappointment, did not come on in the dense masses I had hoped for, but in a loose straggling crowd. The first body consisted of about 100 footmen; when the leaders had got to about 150 yards range I opened with Maxim fire and section volleys. The square then advanced towards a second large body of the enemy; these also endeavoured to charge home, headed by a Mallum waving a paper over his head. In order to bring a larger volume of fire to bear, I formed forward both side faces of the square; some of the enemy then tried to outflank us on the left, and by hiding behind ant-hills and bundles of cut grass to shoot arrows into the square. I detached Sergeant Maynard with a few good shots to make a turning movement. The square then moved towards the east end of the town, which was set on fire in two places by shell fire from the gun, which also fired a few shrapnel at the enemy's personnel.

While the Mounted Infantry then moved round the west end of the town I sent "F" Company, 1st Northern Nigeria Regiment, supported by "B" Company, 1st Northern Nigeria Regiment, to clear the southern portion of the town with the bayonet. The charge was led with great gallantry by Captain Gallagher, who was himself badly wounded by an arrow which went into the elbow joint, but continued to lead on his men, who went at the enemy with a dash which I have not seen equalled in this country.

The two companies were now rallied, and the remaining portion of the town cleared. I attribute the smallness of our casualties to the good handling of their men by the Europeans, and to the good snap shooting done by the men.

As far as the Infantry was concerned the fight was now over, but I sent orders to the Mounted Infantry to pursue a considerable body of the enemy whom I had seen retreating over a ridge to the east.

Any animals found in the town were then removed and the town burned, after which the gun and Infantry marched back to Sokoto. One camel, 46 donkeys, 15 horses, most of them very inferior, were handed over to the Resident. These animals, I understand, had mostly been captured by the Satiru people when raiding.

I do not think that the numbers of the enemy opposed exceeded 1,500 fighting men, but they certainly fought with great vigour and determination.

The Mounted Infantry returned to Sokoto from their pursuit the following morning.

Mallum Dan Makafo, the origin of all the trouble, was brought in by some country people on the 12th March. He had been shot through the leg by the Mounted Infantry at or near Dabeggi, where he, with a few fugitives, had gone to get water, and been discovered and fired upon by the pursuing Mounted Infantry.

The Mounted Infantry were most skilfully handled throughout by Major Green, D.S.O., who had no simple task to perform. He had to manoeuvre in such a way as to in no measure interfere with the fire from the Infantry square, and at the same time to be in the right place at the right time to pursue fugitives; my instructions on these points were most skilfully carried out.

Before the Infantry left Satiru, the bodies of the three white men killed on the 14th February were found. They were brought back to Sokoto and buried the following day.

I would specially call the attention of the Commandant to the conduct of the following officers, non-commissioned officers, and men:—

Captain A. E. Gallagher, 1st Northern Nigeria Regiment. This officer has been absolutely invaluable to me. It is not too much to say that on the march up from Zungeru, it was by his cheerfulness and untiring energy that the column was able to cover the ground as quickly as it did. In the action he commanded the front face of the square, and afterwards, as already reported, led the charge into the town, and continued to lead the charge after he was badly hit in the elbow joint by an arrow, presumably poisoned. This officer has only been in command of "F" Company for about one month, but so completely has he got the confidence of his men that they would follow him anywhere. His company fought splendidly.

Lieutenant P. W. Fendall, Mounted Infantry, Northern Nigeria Regiment. This officer, both on the occasion of his making a reconnaissance of Satiru on the 5th-6th March, and of his scouting and drawing the enemy on to attack us on the 10th March, showed great enterprise, skill, and judgment.

Sergeant Slack, Royal Artillery, Northern Nigeria Regiment. This non-commissioned officer handled his gun exceedingly well on the 10th, and previous to that date did most excellent work in Sokoto Fort. He acted as Major Burdon's Staff Officer previous to my arrival, and Major Burdon speaks of him in the highest terms.

Sergeant Maynard, 1st Northern Nigeria Regiment. A most energetic and reliable non-commissioned officer, who did most excellent work on the march up, and also on the 10th instant. He was always in the right place and ready to do anything.

Among Native Ranks.

No. 1836, Lance-Corporal Dowdu Chicogo.
No. 3739, Private Samari.
No. 3548, Corporal Dania Kano.
No. 1093, Private Jagaba.
No. 3431, Private Ali Sorbo. All of "F" Company, 1st Northern Nigeria Regiment.

The two former I noticed particularly in the way they stuck to their officer, Captain Gallagher, during the bayonet charge, and by their fire and bayonet fighting protected him from the enemy. The other names have been given to me by Captain Gallagher.

No. 1684, Sergeant Oyanshola.
No. 3115, Lance-Corporal Mah Kuchi.
No. 2091, Private Musa Argungu.
No. 1636, Corporal Akabi, Illorin. All of "B" Company, 1st Northern Nigeria Regiment.

These names were given to me by Lieutenant Mann commanding "B" Company. It will be understood that the view inside the town being very limited, I could only see what was going on immediately around me.

I attach a list of the casualties sustained on the 10th March, and also a list of those sustained on the 14th February, on the occasion of the reverse to "C" Company, Mounted Infantry, Northern Nigeria Regiment.

I also attach reports from Major Green, D.S.O., and heartily endorse the recommendations made by that officer.

R. H. GOODWIN, Major,

Officer Commanding Troops, Sokoto.

March 15, 1906.

To Major Goodwin,
Officer Commanding Troops, Sokoto,

Sokoto, March 12, 1906.

I beg to forward the following report on the part taken by the Mounted Infantry under my command at the action at Satiru on March 10th, 1906.

On 9th instant I received orders from you relative to the attack on Satiru to take place the following morning, and at 2 A.M., the 10th instant, the Mounted Infantry, "D" and "F" companies, with "C" and one section "G" forming a composite company, in all 229 native ranks, with nine officers, four British non-commissioned officers, one British non-commissioned officer, Royal Army Medical Corps, marched with the remainder of the column on Satiru, Lieutenant Fendall, with a section, forming the advance screen, and the remainder of the Mounted Infantry following in rear of the Infantry during the night.

At about 7 A.M. the column came in sight of the town of Satiru, and under orders from yourself the Mounted Infantry moved away to our right flank, with the object of working round the enemy should they come out of Satiru to the attack, and seeking a position from whence to bring flanking fire to bear upon them, and also to be ready to take up the pursuit.

The ground on this flank, west of Satiru, is not very favourable for the carrying out of such an object. I had been led to suppose, from reports brought in, that high ground commanded the town on this side. The high ground which I suppose was meant in these reports was, however, discovered to be too far distant to be of any value to us, and we were, therefore, forced to come across a low-lying valley with gently rising ground, up to the town, which lay just behind this rise, and was thus invisible to anyone approaching by this line until within some 200 yards of it. While in this valley the Infantry square and the main body of the enemy were also invisible to us.

About 8 A.M. the sound of firing from the Infantry square was heard, and shortly afterwards Lieutenant Fendall and his section, having cleared the front of the Infantry, joined the rest of the Mounted Infantry.

As we continued to move across the valley a number of the enemy appeared coming over the rise to our front, and commenced coming down the hill to attack us. I accordingly formed square, and when the enemy were within about 400 yards, opened fire. Their loss was heavy, but in spite of this they continued to advance with great determination, the leaders of the line being within 100 yards of the square before their advance was stopped. Those that were left then fell back behind the rise. Having sent scouts on to the top of the ridge, I ordered an advance to the crest line, when the town came into [? view] within some 200 yards of us with a large number of the enemy in a straggling line around its edge. I immediately ordered dismounted action, and our fire drove back the enemy, who had once more advanced on us, into the town. From the position now gained a view of the Infantry square some 100 yards distant on our left flank was obtained. Being anxious to keep my men in hand for the pursuit, I did not consider myself justified in pushing on into the town, and as my position appeared likely to mask the fire of the now advancing Infantry, I retired the Mounted Infantry some 200 to 300 yards down the slope. This manoeuvre was misunderstood by the enemy who, apparently thinking they had driven us back, charged out of the town and up and over the crest line with loud shouts.

This temerity cost them dear, as halting and rapidly coming into action again, our fire caused them considerable loss as they advanced over the sky line, and once more they fell back, leaving many dead and wounded on the field.

Shortly after this, about 9 A.M., shells from the main body commenced to fall into the town, and I accordingly commenced to move round the rear (south-west) of the town, where a few scattered fugitives were to be seen going away in a southerly direction.

At 9.30 A.M. I received a message from Major Goodwin informing me that a large number of the enemy had left the town on the east side, covered from view by the ground, and ordering me to pursue.

As we were in the act of moving off to follow this party, a large number of the enemy were seen leaving the town on the west side, and running down the hill lately occupied by us, now about a mile distant. I decided to deal with this lot first, and swinging round formed line of half companies, thus bringing the whole into two lines —charging formation—and commenced galloping after them.

Having delivered this charge we immediately retraced our steps, swinging round the south of the town and up over a long rocky ridge which runs roughly north-east and south-west, some 1,000 yards east of the town. Crossing this we descended the valley on the far side, and a mile further on came in sight of a stream of fugitives going away on our right front, i.e., going south. We at once pursued. Our pace was here considerably checked by the nature of the ground, which became rocky and broken with a gradual ascent up to a rocky plateau on which was a clump of small villages.

It was now 10.45 A.M., and we had come some four miles since leaving Satiru, and the horses were showing signs of distress from the pace and distance. I therefore halted and watered the horses at some wells we discovered near one of the villages, sending back a report to Major Goodwin of what I was doing.

From the top of the plateau a good view of the open valley below could be obtained, stretching away for some four or five miles to a further ridge of hills covered with bush. The enemy appeared in all directions scattered in twos and threes across this valley.

After watering, which owing to the nature of the wells, took some little time, I extended my three companies across this valley, moving in a north-easterly direction in a long driving line.

About 1.30 P.M. I received a message from Captain Macdonell, with the outside company, that he had met some of the Marafé's men, who had given him information of a considerable number of the enemy escaping into the thick bush on our right flank.

I accordingly collected the three companies again, and started in pursuit.

The bush gradually became thicker, and our progress consequently slower, as I thought it desirable to move on as broad a front as possible to avoid missing any of the enemy who might turn off the path and lie down in the bush.

After pushing some four to five miles into the bush, my advance scouts reported the enemy close in front of us. They had apparently halted in a patch of very thick thorn bush, and taking advantage of this were preparing to make a stand, and at the same time sending parties under cover of the bush to work round our flanks. I at once closed up, formed square, and opened fire.

So thick was the bush here, that although the enemy were then within 150 yards of us, they could not be seen by the men when dismounted to fire, and we could only fire volleys outwards.

This fire, however, proved extremely effective, inflicting considerable loss, and this, which I believed to have been, and which subsequent events proved to have been, the last collected body of the enemy, scattered in all directions.

It was now 2.30 P.M., and we were in a country where it was next to impossible to manoeuvre mounted men, owing to the density of the bush. As far as I could ascertain, no formed body of the enemy remained in front of us.

The horses had been under the saddle since 2 A.M., and were very done. I was far from any suitable halting place for the night, and did not consider that any adequate advantage would be gained by further involving my men in this waterless and inhospitable country. I therefore, after a short halt, returned to Satiru for the night, getting into camp at 6.30 P.M. I returned to Sokoto on the morning of the 11th instant.

I beg to bring to your notice the following, whose services are especially deserving of recognition:—

Captain D. H. Macdonell. An officer of exceptional ability and gallantry. His example and great personal influence with his men went far to re-establish the confidence of the men of "C" Company. Although wounded early in the day, he continued to handle his men with great dash and judgment.

Lieutenant P. W. Fendall. An excellent officer who rendered valuable assistance by reconnaissance work, and has shown marked capacity for commanding men in the field.

Sergeant T. Browning. Did excellent work, both on the march from Kano and during the action on the 10th instant.

Sergeant H. Bullock, Royal Army Medical Corps, has been untiring in his care of both Europeans and natives in the Mounted Infantry since leaving Kano. The valuable work done by him has contributed not a little to the satisfactory state of health of all ranks in the column.

No. 195, Company Sergeant-Major Garaba Kukua, No. 472, Sergeant Momadu Gombi, "F" Company, Mounted Infantry.

No. 1141, Company Sergeant-Major Basheru Sokoto, No. 472, Sergeant Moma, "D" Company, Mounted Infantry.

The above native non-commissioned officers, by their example and personal influence with their men, rendered valuable service.

A. D. GREEN, Major,
Commanding Mounted Infantry.

Sokoto,
March 12, 1906.

Enclosure 2 in No. 35.

Brigade Office, Northern Nigeria Regiment,
West African Frontier Force, Zungeru,

Sir, May 20, 1906.

I have the honour to submit the following report re my operations in the Kano Province.

Medical Officer, Dr. E. A. Chartres.

Infantry, 2nd Battalion, Northern Nigeria Regiment.—Six officers, two British non-commissioned officers, 165 rank and file.

Medical Department.—One British non-commissioned officer.

160 rounds 2.95" gun ammunition, 300 rounds per rifle small-arm ammunition, 380 carriers.

Captain H. C. B. Phillips, D.S.O., Resident, Kano Province, and Captain B. A. Rice, Assistant Resident, Political Department.

3. Supplies had been collected in the Kano Province along the route Gesawa-Debbi-Ringin-Mejia Road under arrangements made by the Resident, but owing to the scarcity of water on the latter part of the road, particularly after entering Hadeija territory, I thought it better to diverge at Ringin and pass by a road which ran by Ghunka and Mega and Adiyawa. This enabled me to draw supplies before entering Hadeija territory at Mega, a large prosperous town, and use the river water from Adiyawa to Hadeija in approaching the latter place. To minimise the difficulties in feeding and watering the force, the bulk of the Mounted Infantry, till reaching Mega, preceded the rest of the force one day in advance. Though moving through an ostensibly friendly country, military precautions had to be observed, as it was possible that, aided and abetted by the Hadeija chiefs, a treacherous attack might at any time be sustained. On the 22nd, Adiyawa, the first considerable Hadeija village was reached. The inhabitants had been summoned by the Emir of Hadeija to send their fighting men in, but had disregarded his orders. Here information was gathered that other towns and villages had, however, sent in their fighting men, and orders issued by the Emir for all traders, non-combatants, and women to quit Hadeija. Everything, therefore, seemed to point to intended resistance. The distance from Adiyawa to Hadeija is about 14 miles. As it was thought probable that an attack would be made on the expeditionary force en route from Adiyawa to Hadeija, and as the heat was very great in the daytime, I decided to move, on the morning of the 22nd, only as far as a village on the river some five miles from Hadeija, and camp there for the heat of the day and night. The baggage could have, on the following day, been left here under a guard, and the combatant portion moved to join hands with the Hadeija Garrison in the event of the Hadeija chiefs showing signs of engaging us outside their walls. However, on reaching this village I was joined by a half company Mounted Infantry of the garrison under Captain E. B. Macnaghten who, following instructions by me, had scouted the issues of the town and reported all quiet. I therefore continued my journey to the fort that evening, and arrived about 5 P.M. without molestation, joining hands there with the garrison, which brought up the strength of my force to:—

22 officers.

1 medical officer.

9 British non-commissioned officers.

Artillery.—33 men and two 2.95" quick-firing guns.

Mounted Infantry.—186 rank and file and one Maxim.

Infantry.—468 rank and file and two Maxims.

4. On arrival, after sifting the local information, I consulted with the Resident, Captain Phillips, as to the best way of carrying out your Excellency's instructions. The conditions to be submitted to the Emir among others included the surrender of certain of his most powerful chiefs. It seemed certain to both Captain Phillips and myself that if a night was allowed to elapse between the submission of the conditions and any measures we might take to enforce them, these men would escape, but we also came to the conclusion that your instructions to the Resident demanded that a period approaching 24 hours should be given for their consideration, should this be required.

It was advisable that if the main wall was defended, it should be attacked just before daylight, it being a very formidable obstacle, and unbreachable by any guns I had. Escalade was the only way of surmounting it, and this, in the daytime, would have entailed heavy loss, and might possibly have failed. It was decided, therefore, to send in the ultimatum very early on the morning of the 24th, at the same time observing all the gates with the mounted troops, and stopping entry and issue at the same time. The Emir was informed of this, and further, that if he sent his answer at once it would be understood he did not require any period for consideration, and we should act accordingly. Should his answer be received at once, and hostilities be necessary, I had decided to demonstrate in the evening with a view to drawing the enemy beyond his walls to fight in the open, or failing, to build thorn zarebas strengthened with wire round the outsides of the south gates, watching them with mounted troops during the night, and carrying out the assault just before daylight.

Before daylight, Major Green and the Mounted Infantry moved out to watch the gates. Lieutenant-Colonel Dobell, with Lieutenants Savile and H. H. Shott, were sent by me with the Mounted Infantry to make a special reconnaissance of the wall on the northern side, including the Mashena gate, with a view to selecting a place to escalate. I intended to make two false attacks against the eastern gate and between that and the Mashena gate with the main body while Lieutenant-Colonel Dobell and 150 rank and file effected the escalade at a point just west of the Mashena gate. It was known that the outside guarding wall to the eastern gate could be breached for a breadth of about six feet, and then fire brought to bear on the door of the gate, and this I hoped to do when the defenders had been taken in reverse by Lieutenant-Colonel Dobell's party. The party effected their reconnaissance without difficulty, as the wall on this side was found unoccupied.

5. The troops stood to arms at daylight, and at 7.45 A.M. the Resident informed me that he had received an answer from the Emir. He, the Emir, had struck the messenger, and told him to tell the Resident if he wanted to arrest anyone he had better come and do it. As the eastern gate was reported unoccupied, I decided that the only thing to do was to move at once, and I sent Lieutenant A. A. C. FitzClarence and one Company, 1st Northern Nigeria Regiment, to occupy the gate at once. This was effected without opposition, and I was enabled to deploy my force inside the wall.

I attach a rough sketch of the city.* It will be noted that there is an inner wall and ditch, and, though this is in a ruined condition, it still offers considerable cover to a defending force, and generally good cover from view. Inside this, and extending beyond, as shown, are the buildings of the town, which consist of substantial mud houses enclosed in compounds, with mud walls varying from two to four feet thick, and five to eight feet high. Narrow streets radiate towards the Emir's house enclosure, which stands in the centre close to an open space as shown. The enclosure to the Emir's dwelling houses is a substantially built wall some 20 feet high, about eight feet thick at bottom, and two feet at top.

* Not sent.

It has one entrance from the open square of the town. This is the usual mud gateway passage about eight feet wide. Inside is a succession of court yards and narrow passages.

Between the inner and outer walls of the town, except where houses of light construction prolong to the gates as shown, the ground is open, opposite the eastern gate about 400 to 500 yards across.

From where we were drawn up, inside the outer wall, we could just see the heads of the enemy's mounted men moving about behind the ruined wall apparently ready for action. I was not satisfied myself that they really meant to oppose us, so I sent the Resident's interpreter up to the entrance (a fairly broad open street) to warn the people if they laid down their arms and came out they had nothing to fear. I sent him a second time, and again a third time. This latter time he was so frightened by their attitude that to hurry them I ordered a shell to be fired at the Emir's house. I had just ordered Lieutenant Shott to accompany the interpreter to give them a fourth warning, when suddenly a body of the enemy's mounted spearmen galloped over the rise "H," which forms the entrance to the main street, full at our line.

I ordered Maxim and volley firing, and the leading men were, in a few seconds, quite swept away, those behind retiring behind cover. Undeterred, however, they re-formed, and came on again with the same result.

I thought they would now give in, and waited 20 minutes to give them time. I was still reluctant to enter the town, as I felt sure it would mean many casualties and destruction of property, so, as an inducement to give in, I ordered the two guns to open on the Emir's enclosure, which stood well above the rest of the town. The result was not very satisfactory, but eventually the tower of his house was set on fire. I sent mounted patrols round the outskirts to either flank to reconnoitre, and warn any disposed to give in to come out by the flanks so as not to mask my fire. After a little time, as the issues of the streets and compounds were still reported held, and shots and arrows were fired at any who approached the inner wall, I at length decided to enter the town.

I sent Lieutenant C. M. Leatham and one Company, 1st Northern Nigeria Regiment, to the right to advance up the main street and approaches from the north-east, and Lieutenant-Colonel Dobell with two Companies, 2nd Northern Nigeria Regiment, direct from the east and adjoining streets in the same direction.

The compounds and streets were stubbornly held, the mounted men charging down them on our men repeatedly, while slugs and arrows were fired from the doors and walls on the street sides. After about 1½ hours' fighting, Lieutenant-Colonel Dobell reached the vicinity of the Emir's enclosure with Captain R. L. Beasley and Lieutenant C. S. Burnett, and parts of the two Companies, 2nd Northern Nigeria Regiment, the remainder being scattered about on his right under Captain P. H. Short and Lieutenant Shott. Here the resistance was very stubborn, and after some delay he sent back to me for guns to breach the wall and reinforcements, as the men had got much scattered in the streets. I pushed these up at once, but before they could reach him, he, with the assistance of Captain Beasley and Lieutenant Burnett, had collected a sufficient force and rushed the entrance, killing and capturing most of the defenders. In the meantime large numbers of the poorer inhabitants, having laid down their arms, came pouring out by the flanks, and were collected behind the reserve near the eastern gate. I estimated these at between 3,000 and 4,000.

As soon as the Emir's enclosure was occupied, about 1 P.M., I withdrew troops, sending strong mounted patrols to clear out all stragglers. Guards were placed on the gates, and the unarmed inhabitants, with the exception of the ringleaders, were permitted to return to their homes. I am glad to say only a few outlying compounds of the town were burnt. Officers and British non-commissioned officers deserve much credit for the control they kept over their men under very trying circumstances. Street fighting is always demoralising; and the native soldier considers loot the natural sequence of victory. The heat was intense, the thermometer in the fort registering 115° in the shade, and most of the Europeans were, at the close, completely exhausted. The fighting was chiefly carried on by the chiefs and their following, all mounted men, armed with sword, spears, bows and arrows. Many wore shirts of chain mail of extraordinarily strong manufacture, probably from Morocco.

The chiefs seemed to have made up their minds to fight to a finish. The Emir and his son were shot charging boldly at a few yards' range. The poorer inhabitants took but little part in the fighting, except during the earlier stages, and as far as I could ascertain there were few casualties amongst them. It is difficult to account for the obstinate and senseless bravery of the chiefs. I think that at the first this was due to their never having faced magazine rifle fire, and from their having had for several generations an unbeaten record as regards their neighbours. Some were undoubtedly frenzied with intoxicating drinks and drugs.

7. Though in regard to weapons the combat was unequal, the conditions gave many opportunities for good leading and adventurous work, and all did well. The intense heat during the whole time since our departure from Kano and the bad quality of the water were much felt by the Europeans, and added much to the hardships of the operations. It is difficult to particularise where all did well, but the following deserve special mention:—

Staff.—Captain H. Forde Searight, Staff Officer; Lieutenant and Veterinary Surgeon H. C. Welch, Transport Officer; Captain and Quartermaster E. C. Hides, Provost Marshal and Supply Officer.

Artillery.—Sergeant-Major Dan Yaro.
Mounted Infantry.—Major A. D. Green, D.S.O., Captain E. B. Macnaghten, Farrier-Sergeant W. Vaudrey, No. 658 Company Sergeant-Major Dandara.

Infantry.—Captain and Brevet Major (local Lieutenant-Colonel) C. M. Dobell, D.S.O., 1st Northern Nigeria Regiment, Commanding Infantry; Lieutenant H. H. Shott, Lieutenant C. S. Burnett, Colour-Sergeant W. McLeod, No. 2550 Private Esu, No. 3244 Private Bagirimi, 2nd Northern Nigeria Regiment.

Medical.—Staff-Sergeant W. Woodell.

8. Schedules are attached showing casualties and ammunition expended.

9. After the action I collected all horses which had been captured, and these were sold by auction, and the proceeds credited to Government. Schedule is attached showing details and disposal. Many of the horses were wounded, which accounts for their low prices.

10. No supplies were taken from the town, and those collected en route were met by the ration vote.

11. I attach maps showing the itinerary and description of the action.

12. The Medical Department attached to the Force showed zeal and solicitude in caring for the health of the troops. They had a large number of wounded of the enemy to deal with.

13. I wish to place on record my appreciation of the excellent work done by Captain and Acting Resident H. C. B. Phillips, D.S.O., and Captain and Assistant Resident B. A. Rice in collecting supplies for the Force, and their hearty co-operation and unfailing courtesy. The former remained present during the greater part of the action, though suffering from fever.

14. I have not furnished the usual intelligence report, as the operations were conducted over roads already surveyed by Political Officers, and through a district reported on by them.

I have, &c.,

NOTICES TO MARINERS.

(Nos. 844 to 857 of the year 1907.)

[The bearings are magnetic, and those concerning the visibility of lights are given from seaward.]

No. 844.—CELEBES ISLAND—EAST COAST.

Tomori Gulf and Approaches—Existence and Non-Existence of Certain Shoals.

The Netherlands Government has given notice, dated 14th June, 1907, of the existence and non-existence of the undermentioned shoals in the Gulf of Tomori and its approaches:—

a. Telegraph Reef. This reef, originally reported in 1863, was unsuccessfully searched for in 1905, and has now again been looked for without any indication of its existence being discovered. As this danger is unknown to the natives in the vicinity it has been erased from the chart.

Approximate position, lat. $2^{\circ} 10'$ S., long. $121^{\circ} 47'$ E.

Whilst searching for this danger a shoal was found to exist in a position situated at a distance of 7 miles N. 68° E. from Tanjong Bohunbelo, in approximately lat. $2^{\circ} 6'$ S., long. $121^{\circ} 45'$ E., on Chart No. 361b.

b. Tomori Gulf. A reef about $1\frac{1}{2}$ cables long in a north-west and south-east direction, and half a cable broad, with a least depth of 3 feet on it, exists in a position situated at a distance of 2 miles S. 2° E. from Batu Island in the entrance to Tomori Gulf.

Approximate position, lat. $1^{\circ} 59\frac{1}{4}'$ S., long. $121^{\circ} 30\frac{1}{2}'$ E.

At a distance of about one cable S. 68° W. from this reef, another reef exists with less than 3 fathoms over it.

c. Tanjong Rata. Four reefs, with a depth of about one fathom over them, extend for a distance of about one mile from Tanjong Rata, the westernmost reef being situated in approximately lat. $1^{\circ} 35'$ S., long. $122^{\circ} 6\frac{1}{2}'$ E., and the easternmost in lat. $1^{\circ} 35'$ S., long. $122^{\circ} 8'$ E. Between Tanjong Rata and Teon depths of 10 to 12 fathoms were obtained, where the chart shows $\frac{1}{18}$ fathoms in lat. $1^{\circ} 36'$ S., long. $122^{\circ} 6'$ E.

d. Peling Strait. In the approximate position, lat. $1^{\circ} 36'$ S., long. $122^{\circ} 20'$ E., shown on the chart as dangerous no bottom could be obtained with 100 fathoms of line.

The significations of dangers have consequently been erased from the Admiralty publications.

[Variation 2° Easterly in 1907.]

This Notice affects the following Admiralty Charts:—Australia, Northern Portion, No. 2759a; China Sea, No. 1263; Eastern Archipelago, No. 942a; Tomori Gulf to Salayar Strait, No. 3616; Tomori Gulf on Chart No. 2195. Also, Eastern Archipelago, Part II, 1904, pages 369, 370.

No. 845.—SPAIN—EAST COAST.

San Feliu de Guixols—Mole under Construction, Light Exhibited.

The Spanish Government has given notice, dated 7th June, 1907, that a green fixed light, elevated 18 feet above the sea, and visible from a distance of 5 miles, is exhibited from the extremity of a mole under construction in Cala de Capellanes, Port of San Feliu de Guixols. The exact position of this light is not stated, but Capellanes cove is situated at a distance of 6 cables N. 78° E. from San Telmo Hermitage, and the mole under construction extends about half a cable from it in a south-westerly direction.

Approximate position, San Telmo Hermitage, lat. $41^{\circ} 46\frac{1}{2}'$ N., long. $3^{\circ} 11\frac{1}{2}'$ E.

[Variation 13° Westerly in 1907.]

This Notice affects the following Admiralty Chart:—San Feliu de Guixols anchorage on Chart

No. 1391. Also, List of Lights, Part V, 1907, page 25; and Mediterranean Pilot, Vol. I, 1904, page 195.

No. 846.—EASTERN ARCHIPELAGO, SAVU AND ROTTI ISLANDS.

Seba, and Baah Roads—Alteration in Lights.

With reference to Notices to Mariners Nos. 922, of 1903, and 474 of 1907:—

The Netherlands Government has given further notice, dated 15th June, 1907, that the character of the lights at Seba, and Baah have been altered from white fixed to white group occulting, showing groups of three eclipses every thirty seconds, thus:—light, fifteen seconds; eclipse, three seconds; light, three seconds; eclipse, three seconds; light, three seconds; eclipse, three seconds.
