Whitehall, June 14, 1949.

The KING has been pleased to award the Edward Medal to the late Arthur Bobbett in recognition of his gallantry in the following circumstances:—

On 21st of October, 1948, two workmen employed at the Six Bells Colliery, Monmouthshire, were moving a conveyor to a new position in a four feet seam of coal when they found the passage of the machine was prevented by a transverse bar which formed part of the roof support for the worked out part of the seam. Temporary supports were set and the two men attempted to withdraw this bar with a lever device. While they were doing so there was a sudden and extensive fall of roof which dislodged the supports. One of the men jumped clear but the other was forced against the coal face and held there by the transverse bar which was held down by a massive heap of stones from the fallen roof. Arthur Bobbett (aged 48) who was employed as an under official at the Colliery, was soon on the scene and decided that the best way to release the imprisoned man was by sawing away the bar. To do this it was necessary to crawl into a very small space underneath both fall and bar. The whole weight of the fall seemed to be resting on the bar and it appeared probable that when it was sawn through, the bar and the fall would both collapse on the sawyer. There was also a strong possibility that a further fall of roof would take place causing the heap of debris from the original fall to collapse. In spite of these dangers, Bobbett crawled beneath the bar, supporting it in an improvised manner with a jack, and began to saw. While he was working, a large stone fell from the roof onto the heap of debris, causing further pressure to be exerted on the bar and the injured man to lose consciousness. Despite the entreaties of the workmen and orders by his superiors and although the debris moved from time to time in a threatening manner, Bobbett worked for 45 minutes to saw the timber through. This operation was completed without any further collapse and the injured man was extricated. It was found that he had died from the injuries he had sustained. Bobbett was exhausted and had to be taken home by ambulance.

Unfortunately a few weeks after this incident Bobbett himself sustained a fatal injury at the Colliery.

The KING has been pleased to award the Edward Medal to Robert Joseph Bradley in recognition of his gallantry in the following circumstances:—

On the 28th January, 1949, at 3.10 p.m. a man jumped beneath an oncoming train at Swiss Cottage Underground Station. After the train had stopped, the injured man was found to be lying in the "suicide" pit beneath the third coach of the train. This pit is some two feet deep. The electric current was switched off and the station foreman, Mr. Robert Joseph Bradley, aged 28, volunteered to climb under the train to protect the man who was conscious and shouting and struggling. Shortly after Mr. Bradley had reached the injured man the electric current was restored with the intention of moving the train, but at this point the man's struggles became worse and ten minutes in fact elapsed before the train could be moved. After the train had been drawn over the men a further two or three minutes went by before the current was switched off once more.

Throughout this period Mr. Bradley was lying on his side endeavouring to hold down the injured man. His position was such that his back was never more than six inches from a live rail, contact with which by either man might have proved fatal to both. The man's struggles continued throughout most of the period of fifteen minutes that Mr. Bradley was with him and while the train was being passed overhead he bit Mr. Bradley on the right forefinger.

The man later died in hospital from his injuries.
