St. James's Palace, S.W.1.

15th April, 1958.

The QUEEN has been graciously pleased to approve the award of the British Empire Medal for Gallantry (Military Division) to the under-mentioned:—

Petty Officer Engineering Mechanic Robert BARLOW, C/KX. 902891, H.M.S. Loch Lomond.

While H.M.S. LOCH LOMOND was steaming on 19th September, 1957, the hose to number three sprayer in number two boiler room burst. The fuel pressure was 220 lbs. per square inch and a large area was immediately sprayed with oil fuel at a temperature of 200° Fahrenheit.

At grave risk to his own safety Petty Officer Engineering Mechanic Barlow, who was in charge of the boiler room, backed his way through the spray and sheet of hot oil and, although extensively burned, succeeded in shutting off the sprayer valve. By his brave action he undoubtedly saved the boiler room personnel from serious injury and the ship from a major fire.
