Claims for Increased Pay, a Shorter Working Week and other Improved Conditions of Service for British Railway Shopmen

Negotiations have been taking place between the British Railways Board and the Employees' Side of the Railway Shopmen's National Council on claims for increased pay, a shorter working week and increased holidays for railway workshop staff. These negotiations have not resulted in agreement.

In view of the importance of these claims for the national interest and the fact that the workshop staff form part of the railway industry, the Government have decided that the issues in dispute relating to workshop staff should be examined by the National Board for Prices and Incomes on the same terms and subject to the same understandings with the parties as in the case of salaried and conciliation staff.

The Board is accordingly requested to extend its investigation of the issues in dispute relating to conciliation and salaried staff to cover those relating to workshop staff.

27th October 1965.
