MINISTRY OF DEFENCE

NAVY DEPARTMENT

Whitehall, London S.W.1.

22nd June 1971.

The QUEEN has been graciously pleased to approve the following award for Brave Conduct in recognition of his assistance in the rescue of persons trapped in a motor car which caught fire after a collision on 12th December 1970.

Commendation

Petty Officer Ordnance Electrician Norman William John WATTS, P/O 67226.

well, after 4 months' service in Belfast, the peril of going towards a terrorist bomb but he did not hesitate to do so. All those approaching the door from the far side agree that if they had had to check to open the door they would have perished. Even when they had reached the rear passage, Sergeant Willetts waited, placing his body as a screen to shelter them. By this considered act of bravery, he risked—and lost—his life for those of the adults and children. His selflessness, his courage are beyond praise.

22nd June 1971.

Brig. Denis Carlo Basil Luke ESMONDE-WHITE, C.B.E., M.C., late R.A., relinquishes the appointment of Aide-de-Camp to The QUEEN, 20th Jun. 1971, retired.

ARMY DEPARTMENT*CENTRAL CHANCERY OF THE ORDERS OF KNIGHTHOOD

St. James's Palace, London S.W.1.

22nd June 1971.

The QUEEN has been graciously pleased to approve the posthumous award of the George Cross to:

23910067 Sergeant Michael WILLETTS, The Parachute Regiment.

At 8.24 p.m. on the evening of 25th May 1971, a terrorist entered the reception hall of the Springfield Road Police Station in Belfast. He carried a suitcase from which a smoking fuse protruded, dumped it quickly on the floor and fled outside. Inside the room were a man and a woman, two children and several police officers.

One of the latter saw at once the smoking case and raised the alarm. The Police Officers began to organise the evacuation of the hall past the reception desk, through the reception office and out by a door into the rear passage.

Sergeant Michael Willetts was on duty in the inner hall. Hearing the alarm, he sent an N.C.O. up to the first floor to warn those above and hastened himself to the door towards which a Police Officer was thrusting those in the reception hall and office. He held the door open while all passed safely through and then stood in the doorway, shielding those taking cover. In the next moment, the bomb exploded with terrible force.

Sergeant Willetts was mortally wounded.

His duty did not require him to enter the threatened area: his post was elsewhere. He knew

AIR FORCE DEPARTMENT

Whitehall, London S.W.1.
22nd June 1971.

The QUEEN has been graciously pleased to approve the following awards:

Air Force Cross

Flight Lieutenant Garth Robert ALCOCK (685907), Royal Air Force.

Flight Lieutenant Alcock joined No. 44 Squadron, Royal Air Force, Waddington in November 1970. On 8th January 1971, he was tasked to fly his first solo sortie as a Vulcan captain on a low level exercise. Shortly after his descent to low level the weather deteriorated, and Flight Lieutenant Alcock decided to climb away. As he increased power to gain height, a loud explosion occurred and a fire warning light indicated that the number one engine was on fire. Flight Lieutenant Alcock immediately took action to extinguish it but within seconds the number two engine also caught fire, and once again he took the proper corrective action. The fires then appeared to have been successfully extinguished and, in accordance with operating procedures, both engines were closed down. Flight Lieutenant Alcock continued to climb using the two remaining engines, but when he had reached six thousand feet the Air Electronics Officer reported that part of the underside of the port wing was burning fiercely. Flight Lieutenant Alcock flew on until he was clear of cloud and over open country and then ordered his rear crew to abandon the aircraft. Despite the obvious personal risk involved, he still considered that there was a slim chance of landing the Vulcan safely before the wing burned away, and he accordingly set course towards a suitable airfield. The aircraft then became progressively more difficult to control at low speed and he realised that it must be abandoned. However, although the underside of the port wing and the rear fuselage were by now well alight and the aircraft might have broken up at any moment, Flight Lieutenant Alcock elected to remain at the controls for a further twelve minutes in order to clear the densely populated Tyne area and, if possible, head the stricken Vulcan out to sea. Pieces of debris were observed falling from it and Flight Lieutenant Alcock could feel the fuel tanks exploding one after another. Not until he felt reasonably sure that the aircraft would crash in open country did he finally eject, having first ensured that his co-pilot had safely left the aircraft. Throughout this major emergency, Flight Lieutenant Alcock showed devotion to duty and behaved in a most exemplary manner and the calm and sensible way in which his crew faced up to crisis was due in large measure to his inspiration and leadership. Despite inexperience as a Vulcan captain, his standard of airmanship was a magnificent example to others and his courage in remaining with his crippled aircraft in a gallant attempt to save it was no less creditable. Flight Lieutenant Alcock's actions to safeguard his crew and the lives of the civilian population were in keeping with the highest traditions of the Royal Air Force.

Queen's Commendation for Valuable Service in the Air

Flight Lieutenant James POWER (4164426), Royal Air Force.

Flight Lieutenant James VINALES (4232624), Royal Air Force.

Flying Officer Rodger BARKER (4282420), Royal Air Force.

Flying Officer Peter John HOSKINS (608913), Royal Air Force.

For their action on 8th January 1971, as members of the crew of a Vulcan aircraft, on a low level exercise, when 2 engines and then the port wing caught fire. They each showed calmness in the face of danger and professionalism in their respective duties, Flight Lieutenant Power as air electronics officer, Flight Lieutenant Vinales as navigator plotter, Flying Officer Barker as navigator radar and Flying Officer Hoskins as co-pilot. They continued to give support to their captain until ordered by him to leave the crippled aircraft.

Flight Lieutenant Michael Alan PALEY (4230703), Royal Air Force.

In recognition of his courage and skill, on 23rd February 1971, in landing his Vulcan aircraft safely, after an explosion and fire in the wing area of No. 3 engine immediately after take-off. With burning parts of the wing falling away, Flight Lieutenant Paley managed to retain full control of his heavily laden aircraft and complete an immaculate asymmetric landing.

22nd June 1971.
