(To be dated 16th November 1972)

8175 Sergeant Dinu BAUMARA, Royal Australian Infantry.

On Monday, 8th May 1972, a party of three Officers-of-Cadets and thirty school cadets from The Scots College Cadet Unit were marching towards Kokoda along the Kokoda Trail. They reached Eora Creek at Templeton's No. 2 Crossing where the 60 feet wide creek was in flood after a long period of torrential rain. The only means of crossing was by a felled tree trunk.

Sergeant Baumara of the Papua New Guinea Training Depot, who was acting as a guide to the party, was first to cross the creek and observing the danger inherent in crossing, returned to the near bank and constructed a handrail from toggle ropes. Having secured the handrail, Sergeant Baumara returned to the far bank and the cadets began to cross. The last to attempt the crossing was Cadet Corporal Gary Richard Swanton who, when about halfway, slipped from the wet tree trunk and fell into the most turbulent part of the torrent. His legs became entangled in the toggle rope which he had dragged with him in his fall and this, combined with the weight of his pack, caused him to hang upside down with his head and shoulders under the water. In this situation he would without doubt have drowned had he not been rescued at once.

Sergeant Baumara immediately ran back across the tree trunk and, with complete disregard for the safety of his own life, threw himself into the swiftly flowing water. After considerable exhausting effort and at the risk of fatal injury he managed to release Swanton and with extreme difficulty drag him to safety. Sergeant Baumara exhibited a very high degree of courage and by his prompt action saved the life of Cadet Corporal Swanton.
