ROYAL COMMISSION STUDY OF ENVIRONMENTAL PLANNING:

INVITATION TO SUBMIT EVIDENCE

In July 1999 the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution announced its intention to review environmental planning. The aim of this study is to assess whether the various regimes at different levels for setting and achieving environmental goals provide an effective, accountable and transparent way of protecting the environment. Its scope goes much wider than land use planning (although that aspect is central) and encompasses other planning regimes, such as those covering pollution control, air quality, waste, water, agri-environment and biodiversity.

The Royal Commission is grateful to all those who responded to its invitation to comment on the issues raised in its announcement of the study. There was broad agreement that such a study would be timely. The Commission has now defined specific issues on which it intends to focus. These issues have emerged from an analysis of the responses to the announcement, information contained in Commission-sponsored consultants' reports, and comments made at a Commission seminar on the subject. These inputs can be found on the Commission's website at: <http://www.rcep.org.uk/planning.html>

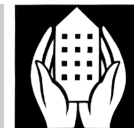

Alternatively, they can be obtained from the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution at Steel House, 11 Tothill Street, London SW1H 9RE, (telephone 020 7273 6637).

Responses should be sent to John Rea at the same address by Friday, 23rd June 2000. It would be appreciated if, where possible, submissions could be sent in electronic format, either by e-mail to john.rea@rcep.org.uk or on a 3.5" floppy disc attached to a paper copy, and saved in either Word 2000 (or lower version) or ASCII text.

Unless indicated otherwise when evidence is submitted, it will be assumed that the organisation or individual submitting it has no objection to its disclosure to other parties should the Commission so decide. The likely method of such dissemination is through publication on the Commission's website. (1002)
