

tions, and such Quantities of all Sorts of Provisions, that Count Khevenhuller has offer'd to supply the Army in Bohemia. As that General is said to have now above 36000 Men, a Body of 15000 will be, or is actually, detach'd for Bohemia or Moravia.

We have here the following Particulars relating to the Surrender and Capitulation of Passau.

The News of the taking of Lintz, the Capital of Upper Austria, having been received at Passau, the Garrison of the Citadel there surrendered on the 25th inst, without making the least Resistance, and were allowed by their Capitulation, to march out with all military Honours, with their Baggage, and with twelve Charges for each Soldier. They were to be escorted toward Straubing, and it was agreed that the Artillery, with all the Ammunition, Provender and Forage belonging to his Electoral Highness of Bavaria should be faithfully declared, but as it was pretended that Part of the Artillery belonged to the Chapter of Passau, and Part to the City, and that his Eminence the Cardinal Bishop had reserved it to himself, that Point was left to the Decision of Marshal Khevenhuller. The Garrison was allowed to remain in the City of Passau and the Town called Newmark till the Day following, the 26th, and to take with them Bread for four Days from the Electoral Magazine. All the Soldiers actually found in the Citadel, were to be comprehended under the Name of the Garrison, and the Sick to be permitted to stay, till they should be in a Condition to remove themselves to any Place in the Possession of the French or Bavarians. By the Surrender of Passau, we became Masters of the magnificent Bridge over the Danube which belonged to the French, and cost them very great Sums.
