WHITEHALL, January 9, 1906.

The King was pleased this morning, at Buckingham Palace, to present to Mr. John Wardrop Thomson, a Town Postman of Stirling, the Albert Medal of the Second Class, conferred upon him by His Majesty's command for gallantry in saving life as detailed below:—

On the night of Saturday the 21st October 1905, while Thomson was on duty at the Stirling Railway Station, his attention was called, by an outcry, to the fact that a man was lying on the metals of the down main line.

An engine was approaching rapidly, and was not more than 30 yards distant, when Thomson, without hesitation, sprang to the man's assistance, and both men disappeared from view as the engine passed by. The railway officials and passengers on the platform who witnessed the occurrence thought that both men had been run over, especially as another engine passed by, almost at the same moment, on the next line of rails. Thomson had, however, managed to drag the man on to the six-foot way. The rescued man was of heavy build, and was quite unable to help himself, being in a state of intoxication; he was unhurt, while Thomson only received cuts about the face.
