The King was pleased, at Buckingham Palace, on Thursday the 12th instant, to present to John Jones, a miner, of Blackwood, Monmouthshire, the Albert Medal of the Second Class for gallantry in saving life on land, as detailed below:—

As a passenger train, travelling about seven miles an hour, was entering Pontypool Road Railway Station, on the 13th May 1913, a boy of fifteen fell from the platform on to the rails, when the train was only twenty yards away. Jones, who was waiting on the platform, at once jumped down, and, as there was not time to lift the boy on to the platform, lay down between the rails and the platform and held the boy on his breast until the train had passed. Neither was injured, but it is evident that the boy owes his life to the courage and presence of mind displayed by Jones.
