War Office,

16th November, 1915.

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the Distinguished Conduct Medal to the undermentioned Warrant Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and Men for acts of gallantry and devotion to duty whilst serving with the Expeditionary Forces in France and Flanders and at the Dardanelles:—

21159 Acting Second Corporal A. Adamson, 3rd Field Squadron, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry and resource on the 27th September, 1915, when in charge of two tool carts, which followed the unit towards Loos. On nearing the town an unbridged communication trench prevented further progress. Acting Corporal Adamson took the two carts back, and entered Loos by another road. By this time it was nearly broad daylight, and he was exposed to heavy rifle and shrapnel fire. He placed the tool carts where he had been ordered, and got his team safely back at a gallop.

17206 Private G. Aitken, 9th Battalion, Cheshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915, near Festubert. He reached the enemy's parapet alone, and had returned for some distance when he heard calls from a wounded man, who was near the point from which he had come. He at once returned to him, and crawled back to our trenches, with the man on his back, a distance of about 200 yards, under very heavy fire, the wounded man being hit a second time.

10437 Lance-Corporal J. Aitken, 1st Battalion, Scots Guards.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 27th September, 1915. When the battalion attacked the enemy's position on Hill 70, and was forced to retire, Lance-Corporal Aitken, although himself wounded, carried his company officer, who was severely wounded in both legs, about 400 yards under a very heavy shell and machine-gun fire to a place of safety.

S/5249 Private T. Allan, 10th Battalion, Gordon Highlanders.

For conspicuous bravery on the 25th-26th September, 1915, in the action at Loos and Hill 70, when he carried messages to and from the firing line, under heavy shell and rifle fire, continuously for twenty-four hours. He also assisted in bringing up ammunition, led a large party of men through Loos to the Hill, and, later, carried a wounded officer from Hill 70 to Loos under very heavy fire. He showed a splendid example of devotion to duty.

14810 Lance-Corporal A. Allsopp, 7th Battalion, Somerset Light Infantry (attached 181st Company, Royal Engineers).

For conspicuous gallantry on 2nd October, 1915, near Laventie, when he entered a mine gallery which was in a highly dangerous condition, being full of gas introduced by the enemy, and rescued one of a party of men who had all been rendered unconscious by the fumes. On previous occasions Lance-Corporal Allsopp has always been the first to volunteer for any dangerous underground work, although within the last month he had been severely shaken by a heavy hostile explosion, and on another occasion "gassed" by fumes.

14463 Private E. Anderson, 3rd Battalion, Coldstream Guards.

For great bravery and resource on the 8th October, 1915, near Loos. The enemy, having made an attack with great determination along the trenches occupied by his battalion, were successful in taking the trench on the left of that occupied by Private Anderson and five other men, and came pouring into it. The situation was most critical. Realising what had happened, he, accompanied by the other men, sprang forward and faced the enemy, driving them with bombs foot by foot down the trench, and recapturing the whole of it. This they did with the greatest gallantry in face of a determined opposition, clearing out of the trench at least ten times their number, and thus saving a critical situation.

13113 Private H. P. Andrews, 2nd Battalion, Coldstream Guards.

For conspicuous bravery on the 8th October, 1915, near Loos. During the German attack on our sap-head in St. Elie Avenue, practically the whole of the sap-head, except the barricade, was levelled by artillery fire, and great difficulty was experienced in getting bombs up to the barricade. For the moment the supply ran out, thus enabling the Germans to get into our barricade. Private Andrews, with another man, having got more bombs, charged over the open ground towards the barricade, and by his personal bravery and dash drove the enemy from it. This gallant act was done entirely on his own initiative, and he was exposed to both heavy bomb and rifle fire.

34447 Acting Bombardier J. Archbold, 97th Battery, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 27th June, 1915, at Cape Helles (Dardanelles), when he went out under severe fire and brought in two wounded men from in front of an observing station. Again, on the 14th July, he advanced beyond our lines at night, and brought in a wounded man under very heavy rifle fire. Bombardier Archbold on many previous occasions had displayed great resource and bravery in repairing telephone wires under shell and rifle fire.

17531 Corporal J. M. Atkinson, 1st Battalion, York and Lancaster Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 29th September, 1915, near Vermelles, when he crossed over 300 yards of open ground under heavy fire to bring a message and take one back to the fire trench, which had been cut off from communication by the enemy. It was due to his bravery and devotion that a support Company was sent up to re-take the trench and re-establish our line.

2092 Private F. Attenborough, 1st/8th Battalion, Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regiment, T.F. (attached 139th Brigade, Mining Section).

For conspicuous gallantry near Hollebeke on 23rd September, 1915. The enemy exploded a mine, thereby blowing up a portion of one of our galleries, near which three men were working. Second Lieutenant Webster and a Non-Commissioned Officer immediately went into the galleries to try and save one man who was missing. After they had been repeatedly driven back by gas, Private Attenborough went down with air-piping, but found the missing man dead. All three were severely gassed.

17538 Serjeant M. Bain, 12th Battalion, Highland Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 26th September, 1915, near Loos, when, although under a very heavy shell fire, he refused to leave a wounded officer, whom he finally brought into safety. He performed this action in the face of a rapid counter-attack by the enemy, and without his assistance the officer must have been captured.

8781 Serjeant F. Baker, 1st Battalion, East Kent Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the night of 21st September, 1915, near Forward Cottage. He volunteered to go out and bring in the body of Captain Colville, who was lying within fifteen yards of a German sap. With Second Lieutenant Clouting he crept to where Captain Colville was lying, and, crawling on their stomachs, these two dragged the body for nearly 150 yards and lifted it over the parapet. There was bright moonlight at the time, and they were subjected to continuous fire from the Germans.

5016 Company-Quartermaster-Serjeant W. Bale, 2nd Battalion, Leicestershire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on the 25th September, 1915, near Pietre. During the assault, when all the officers except one had been killed or wounded, Company-Quartermaster Serjeant Bale rallied the men, reorganised unwounded ones, and led them to the attack again. Later, when held up by uncut wire, he collected, under a heavy fire, the few remaining unwounded men, and got them under what cover was available. He exposed himself with the utmost contempt for danger.

527 Acting Lance-Corporal R. Barker, 1/1st Cheshire Field Company, Royal Engineers, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry and initiative on the 25th September, 1915, in the salient of Sanctuary Wood. In the rush of the assault, Lance-Corporal Barker got separated from his party. He, however, at once assisted and superintended a party of the Royal Scots Fusiliers who were digging themselves in. On completion of this work, he went, on his own initiative, and, collecting a party of infantry, started opening out a communication trench from our line to the captured position, and persisted, under heavy machine-gun and shell fire until it became impossible to continue. He was the last man to leave the work.

11866 Private J. H. Barton, 6th Battalion, Royal Scots Fusiliers.

For conspicuous bravery on the morning of the 27th September, 1915, near Cambrin, when, single-handed, he repeatedly drove back the enemy's bombing parties, thereby holding the right flank of the battalion for over two and a-half hours. His bravery and devotion to duty were very marked.

180 Corporal S. Bayley, 1/9th Battalion, Manchester Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous bravery on the 7th and 9th August, 1915, at Cape Helles (Dardanelles). Corporal Bayley remained with Lieutenant Forshaw, V.C., holding a barricade for forty-one hours continuously. On the evening of the 8th August his party was relieved by another unit, but he volunteered to remain on. He displayed the greatest gallantry and endurance under the most trying circumstances in repelling many severe attacks, and when the barricade was at last broken through he was the foremost in the successful counter-attack led by Lieutenant Forshaw, which regained it, and finally retained it. On being ultimately relieved he was utterly exhausted by his arduous and gallant work of bomb-throwing.

7483 Private A. C. Baynes, 3rd Battalion, Middlesex Regiment.

For conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty on the 28th and 29th September, 1915, near Vermelles. Private Baynes, although almost overpowered by the superior number of bombs thrown by the enemy, with great bravery and coolness managed to keep them at bay, and continued throwing bombs. By his personal gallantry and example he kept together a party of bombers until the trench was saved.

R.A., 15389 Serjeant W. Bell, Permanent Staff, 4th Highland (Mountain) Brigade, Royal Garrison Artillery, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry and ability on the 28th June, 1915, at Cape Helles (Dardanelles). When the officer commanding a section was killed early in the day, he assumed command of it. The section was separated from the battery, and dug in close behind the forward trenches, and Serjeant Bell remained in command throughout the action, showing exceptional coolness and resource, and performing excellent work. He has always shown great powers of leadership and initiative and marked devotion to duty.

2782 Battery Serjeant-Major D. Bird, 10th Battery, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 1st June, 1915, on the Gallipoli Peninsula, when he formed part of a voluntary gun detachment for a naval 12-pr. gun, which was in action in an open position under heavy shell fire for nearly an hour, at a range of 700 yards from the enemy's trenches. Serjeant-Major Bird unhesitatingly assumed the most dangerous position in the gun detachment, and showed a fine example of disregard for personal danger and devotion to duty.

2172 Lance-Corporal W. E. Boot, 1st/8th Battalion, Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regiment, T.F. (attached 139th Brigade Mining Section).

For conspicuous gallantry near Hollebeke on 23rd September, 1915. The enemy exploded a mine, thereby blowing up a portion of one of our galleries near which three men were working. Second Lieutenant Webster and Lance-Corporal Boot immediately went into the galleries to try and save one man who was missing. After they had been repeatedly driven back by gas, a Private went down with air piping, but found the missing man dead. All three were severely gassed.

19003 Corporal N. A. Bott, 1st Battalion, Suffolk Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry and resource on the night of the 2nd/3rd October, 1915, near Vermelles. After his Company Commander had been wounded Corporal Bott continued to lead the men and gained the German parapet, where he was wounded in nine places. Although wounded he continued to encourage the men and give all necessary directions. He displayed the greatest bravery and coolness in the most trying conditions.

1516 Serjeant K. S. Bowron, 1st/14th (County of London) Battalion, The London Regiment (London Scottish), T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915, near Hulluch. After leading his platoon with great skill and daring to a point near the Lone Tree he crawled forward alone to reconnoitre. While doing so he was wounded, but nevertheless he completed his reconnaissance and returned to his platoon with valuable information.

11604 Lance-Corporal A. H. Breese, 6th Battalion, Lincolnshire Regiment.

For conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty on the 9th August, 1915, at Suvla Bay (Dardanelles), when he volunteered to go out with an Officer of his regiment, under very heavy fire, to assist in rescuing six wounded men from the burning scrub. It was an attempt involving the greatest risk, and the wounded were saved from almost certain death. Lance-Corporal Breese displayed a courage and devotion beyond all praise.

8472 Private B. H. Brill, 1st Battalion, Suffolk Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the night of the 2nd/3rd October, 1915, near Vermelles, when, after an attack on a German trench, he remained in the open under very heavy fire collecting and bandaging the wounded, who were being bombed by the enemy. He set a fine example of courage and devotion to duty.

17204 Lance-Corporal A. Brooks, 1st Battalion, Royal Berkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry at Quinchy during the night of 23rd September, 1915. At 10.30 p.m., during a bombardment, Lance-Corporal Brooks crawled out through the mine craters, a distance of 100 yards from our front line, and laid a charge of gun-cotton under the German wire. The charge was successfully exploded, making a broad breach in the wire and destroying about 30 yards of the enemy's trench and a machine-gun. The night was very bright, and the wire close up to the enemy's trench.

5778 Private A. Brooks, 2nd Battalion, Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 26th September, 1915, at Cambrin, when he went over the parapet, in broad daylight, to look for a wounded man, whom he found 130 yards in front of our fire trenches and 130 yards from the German line. As the man was too badly wounded to bring in, Private Brooks dug him in with his entrenching tool, and then returned for food and water, which he took out to him, being the whole time under heavy rifle fire from the enemy's trenches. The wounded man was brought in safely after dark.

8336 Serjeant J. Brown, 1st Battalion, York and Lancaster Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 29th September, 1915, near Vermelles, in holding an advanced trench against repeated bomb attacks of the enemy, when no Officer or other Non-Commissioned Officer was left in his platoon. He continued to discharge his duties with the utmost courage and devotion, until he himself was wounded.

8461 Corporal W. J. Brown, 2nd Battalion, Royal West Surrey Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 26th September, 1915, at Vermelles. Corporal Brown was in command of a party of bombers, who, with great courage, bombed down a German communication trench, driving the enemy back, and thereby considerably assisting an attack made by another regiment. His leadership and devotion to duty were most marked.

8615 Acting Company Serjeant-Major A. Bryant, 8th Battalion, Devonshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915, near Hulluch. When all the Officers had been killed or wounded in the assault and subsequent operations, Company Serjeant-Major Bryant assumed command, and while so acting, by his coolness, bravery and personal example, was instrumental in rallying the men, when the enemy got round the flank of the position after dark, and succeeded in leading them back to a trench 200 yards away, and there driving back the enemy. Finally, he was stunned by a German bomb while attempting to save one of his serjeants, who was in danger of being cut off by the enemy. He gave a fine example of devotion to duty.

2368 Private T. Bucknall, 7th Battalion, Royal Warwickshire Regiment, Territorial Force (attached 174th Tunnelling Company, Royal Engineers).

For conspicuous gallantry at Tambour Du Clos, near Fricourt, on 21st August, 1915, when assisting in rescue work in a mine gallery. The gallery was foul with gas and in total darkness, and the work of rescue was carried out under most difficult and dangerous conditions.

16006 Private A. Callf, 9th Battalion, Cheshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915, near Festubert. A shell having set fire to a large bomb store in the trenches, which were very crowded at the time, Private Callf pulled a box of small arms ammunition, which was burning, from the back of the bomb store, and carried it to a pool of water, a piece of the shell being still in the box, and too hot to remove.

9262 Private J. W. Campbell, 7th Battalion, Seaforth Highlanders.

For conspicuous bravery on the 26th of September, 1915, at Hohenzollern redoubt. By his perfect example of coolness, bravery and devotion to duty under very heavy fire, he was instrumental in rallying the line when several units were mixed up with his own regiment. Later, under very heavy fire, he got on to the parapet and called to the men to stand firm. His gallantry and example contributed to the steadiness of all ranks.

9388 Company Quartermaster-Serjeant (Acting Company Serjeant-Major) E. Canning, 6th Battalion, King's Own Scottish Borderers.

For conspicuous gallantry and ability on the 25th of September, 1915. During an attack on the enemy trenches, and when all the Officers had been killed or wounded, Company Quartermaster-Serjeant Canning organised and took command of the remnants of the battalion and assisted another battalion in holding our line of trenches. Upon the arrival of an Officer on the 26th September, who took command, he continued to give very valuable assistance, although suffering from illness. On the morning of the 30th September, accompanied by an Officer, he attempted to recover the body of another Officer. Throughout the operations his bravery and example gave great encouragement to all ranks.

S/8152 Private H. A. Carey, 1st Battalion, Rifle Brigade.

For conspicuous gallantry and determination near Hamel on the night of 26th and 27th September, 1915. He went out and reconnoitred the enemy's wire by himself, after which he returned and piloted the bombing party to their appointed place, being slightly wounded in doing so. He then went back and guided the remainder of the party under rifle and machine-gun fire, being a second and third time slightly wounded. Finally he remained in action with his party till ordered to retire. He set a fine example of courage and devotion to duty.

2674 Private F. G. Challoner, 6th (City of London) Battalion, The London Regiment (Rifles), T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on the 25th of September, 1915, at Loos, when he charged the German first line trenches, bayonetting and shooting nine of the enemy, and giving a very fine example to all with him.

13336 Private A. Chillingworth, 3rd Battalion, Coldstream Guards.

For great bravery and resource on the 8th October, 1915, near Loos. The enemy, having made an attack with great determination along the trenches occupied by his battalion, were successful in taking the trench on the left of that occupied by Private Chillingworth and five other men, and came pouring into it. The situation was most critical. Realising what had happened, he, accompanied by the other men, sprang forward and faced the enemy, driving them with bombs foot by foot down the trench, and recapturing the whole of it. This they did with the greatest gallantry in face of a determined opposition, clearing out of the trench at least ten times their number, and thus saving a critical situation.

9248 Private J. W. Chisholm, 2nd Battalion, Coldstream Guards.

For conspicuous bravery on the 8th October, 1915, near Loos. The supply of bombs having for the moment run out, the Germans were enabled to reach our barricade, and get on to the parapet of our trench. At this moment Private Chisholm, with another man, dashed through the German bombs, and drove the enemy off with loss, regaining the barricade. Although he was slightly wounded, he continued to hold the barricade, and repulsed all further efforts of the enemy, and by his bravery and resource saved what might have been a very critical situation.

2030 Serjeant F. Christey, 15th (County of London) Battalion, The London Regiment (Prince of Wales's Own Civil Service Rifles), T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th of September, 1915. In the attack on the German lines at the Double Crassier, Serjeant Christey formed one of the Infantry Brigade trench mortar party, and displayed the greatest coolness and bravery in moving across the open with his battery in close support of the assaulting lines, and afterwards during the consolidation of the positions won.

63376 Gunner H. J. Clarke, "Y" Battery, Royal Horse Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 13th July, 1915, on the Gallipoli Peninsula. Owing to the fire gear of a 12 pr. naval gun breaking down, it became necessary to cock the lock with a drag rope. This was done by Gunner Clarke, who was obliged to stand in a very exposed position and under an extremely heavy fire, but he continued to fire the gun until ordered to get under cover. His coolness and bravery were most marked.

24375 Pioneer J. Coleman, Guards Divisional Signal Company, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry from the 27th of September to 10th October, 1915, near Loos, when he rendered invaluable service in maintaining communication by constantly repairing telephone lines under heavy shell fire. During an intense enemy bombardment and attack on the 8th October, Pioneer Coleman was continuously on the line repairing a large number of breaks caused by the trenches being often blown in by the enemy shells.

43325 Bombardier C. W. Cook, 368th Battery, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry and presence of mind on the 28th June, 1915, at Cape Helles (Dardanelles). A high explosive shell from the Asiatic shore hit one of the guns of the batteries, and killed or wounded the whole of the detachment. A few minutes later the wagon of this gun was hit and set on fire, but Bombardier Cook at once rushed to the burning wagon to save the ammunition. Several rounds exploded, but the rest was saved. The ammunition in a pit under the wagon was also saved, owing to his bravery and devotion.

8912 Lance-Corporal W. E. Coombes, 2nd Battalion, Worcestershire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 29th September, 1915, near Vermelles, when by his courage and example he rendered effective assistance in repulsing a determined bomb attack by the enemy, and was generally influential in maintaining confidence in the men at a critical time, when the attack seemed likely to succeed.

11344 Private A. Corney, 5th Battalion, Shropshire Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915, at Bellewaarde. On the retirement taking place, Private Corney went out over 100 yards under a heavy fire and brought in a machine gun which had been abandoned. His courage and devotion to duty were very marked.

9427 Acting Corporal E. A. E. Cox, 1st Battalion, Somerset Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 7th October, 1915. At 7 o'clock a.m. Corporal Cox went out with an Officer to the German lines near Beaumont Hamel, to locate a trench mortar, which had been annoying the Battalion. They proceeded, in broad daylight, to the enemy's wire, located the mortar, and obtained valuable information as to the position of the existing and projected trenches, and of the barbed wire entanglements and ground. They remained in observation for 3 hours. Corporal Cox had previously displayed great coolness and bravery on the 6th July in the successful attack on the enemy's trenches south of Bilkem, and throughout the campaign has done continuous good work, often at great personal risk.

S/3524 Private C. Craig, 2nd Battalion, Gordon Highlanders.

For conspicuous bravery on the 25th September, 1915, near Hulluch. A small party was holding an advanced position, and he repeatedly came back with messages, and returned with ammunition, which was urgently needed, under a very heavy shell and rifle fire. Finally he was badly wounded, but managed to crawl back and deliver his message. His brave action was undoubtedly the means of saving many lives.

11322 Private J. R. Croxall, 6th Battalion, Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry (attached 181st Company, Royal Engineers).

For conspicuous bravery on the 2nd October, 1915, near Laventie, when he voluntarily assisted a Non-commissioned Officer to rescue an unconscious man from a mine gallery, which was full of poisonous gas. His bravery and devotion to duty were very marked.

13138 Lance-Serjeant A. Cumming, 11th Battalion, Royal Scots (Lothian Regiment).

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th of September, 1915. He displayed the greatest bravery and powers of leadership in controlling and leading his men under very heavy fire in the attack on Pekin Trench, and in the advance on that position.

4633 Regimental Quartermaster-Serjeant H. Davey, 8th Battalion, Devonshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the night of the 25th September, 1915, in the Hulluch Road. Regimental Quartermaster-Serjeant Davey was driving up with rations, when he met some men of another unit, who were demoralised, and retiring in disorder. He borrowed a rifle and bayonet, rallied the men, and led them back to a trench in front, where he took command, and remained until a Staff Officer appeared. By his prompt action and courage he was instrumental in holding valuable ground.

7603 Lance-Corporal D. Donovan, 2nd Battalion, East Surrey Regiment.

For conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty on the 28th-29th September, 1915, during the operations near Hohenzollern redoubt, when he continually carried bombs to the firing line, at a very critical time, and under a heavy and continuous shell fire. Although wounded, Lance-Corporal Donovan remained on duty, and continued to help to repel the German counter-attacks by throwing bombs.

11538 Private F. Doolan, 1st Battalion, Liverpool Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915, at Cuinchy, when he advanced to the attack with his platoon up to the enemy's unbroken wire, and remained there, under a very heavy fire, until ordered to return to our trenches. Later he went out several times and brought in wounded men. On the last occasion he was accompanied by Private Avory, 1st King's Royal Rifle Corps, whom he carried in, when very severely wounded. Private Doolan had previously displayed great coolness and bravery, on the 17th May, at Festubert, in carrying messages under a very severe artillery, machine-gun, and rifle fire.

23140 Corporal J. Downes, 1st Divisional Signal Company, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry throughout the operations from the 25th to the 28th September, 1915, near Hulluch, when he volunteered for, and carried out, several dangerous duties, such as laying and repairing telephone lines under heavy and continuous fire. He also ran 200 yards under heavy fire to give assistance to an Officer, whose horse had been shot under him. Throughout the campaign Corporal Downes has been noted for his bravery and good work and devotion to duty under all circumstances.

78293 Bombardier O. C. Dubois, 460th (Howitzer) Battery, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry and resource on 6th August, 1915, at Cape Helles (Dardanelles), when he spent four hours repairing telephone wires under exceptionally heavy shell fire, doing his work well and effectively. Previously, on the 28th April, when sent with a message to the French firing line, he picked up a wounded Frenchman on his way back, and carried him to the nearest dressing station, where he left him, the whole action being performed under heavy rifle fire. Throughout the campaign Bombardier Dubois has been distinguished for his bravery under fire and his devotion to duty.

10464 Private (Acting Corporal) H. A. Duester, 5th Battalion, Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry.

For conspicuous bravery and resource on the 25th of September, 1915, during the attack on Bellewaarde. Private Duester was one of a party of ten, the survivors of the left column which had been destroyed by shell fire. With great bravery he led this party into the German lines, and successfully bombed his way to the second line, showing great determination and power of leadership. When the line fell back his party was nearly cut off, but by judicious bombing, and the use of German bombs, he successfully extricated them. He was recommended for reward by his surviving comrades.

9593 Private F. Duff, 1st (Royal) Dragoons.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 29th September, 1915, when he accompanied an Officer on his patrol, clearing up the situation between Hill 70 and Chalk Pit Wood. Private Duff exhibited great courage and resource and a fine devotion to duty.

393 Serjeant T. Dundas, 7th Battalion, Seaforth Highlanders.

For conspicuous gallantry and ability on the 25th of September, 1915, near the Three Cabarets. After the first advance, he displayed great bravery and powers of leadership in reorganising a further attack. Later, when his men were being relieved, he saw a party of another regiment in difficulties, and, taking some men back, he bombed the Germans out of the trench under heavy fire. On the 27th of September, during an attack on the Redoubt, he went back and brought up bombs under very heavy fire. Throughout the operations his splendid example and devotion to duty were most marked.

2086 Private E. J. Edwards, 1st Battalion, Manchester Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on 25th September, 1915, near Neuve Chapelle. Believing the trench opposite to be occupied by our own troops, his platoon, under Second Lieutenant Findlater, advanced to the barbed wire, cut it, and had passed through, when Germans opened heavy fire on them from the trench. Second Lieutenant Findlater ordered the platoon to retire, while he and Private Edwards stayed behind and threw bombs into the German trench, with such effect that the retirement was carried out in good order and with little loss.

9600 Private H. Edwards, 1st Battalion, South Staffordshire Regiment.

For conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty on the 25th September, 1915, near Hulluch. Private Edwards, acting as a stretcher bearer, while dressing a wounded man under very heavy fire during the attack on the German trenches, was severely wounded, and although several men offered to help him in his work, he refused to allow this, or to be attended to himself. Having finished his work, he walked over, in full view of the enemy, to attend to another wounded man, when he was struck by another bullet, and fell, wounded; a second time. He gave a fine exhibition of the highest courage and disregard of personal danger.

441 Bombardier S. Edwards, 8th (London) Howitzer Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on the 25th September, 1915, at Grenay, when, on duty as a signaller, he went out to find a break in the telephone wire, and although wounded, he found and repaired the break, and arranged for his work to be carried on before going to the Aid Post.

719 Sapper W. Etches, 47th London Divisional Engineers, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous bravery on the 25th September, 1915, at Loos, when, acting as stretcher bearer, he with great bravery and determination continued his work, although wounded in six places by shell fragments, and when other men performing similar duties had been forced to retire.

7018 Lance-Corporal C. Evans, 1st Battalion, Welsh Regiment.

For great bravery and devotion to duty on the 2nd October, 1915, near Vermelles. In the early morning Lance-Corporal Evans went out in front of our parapet to within 50 yards of the German parapet, and brought in with great difficulty a man who was severely wounded, passing over 200 yards under heavy shell and rifle fire. Later he went out again on his own initiative, and carefully searched the ground between the trenches for wounded.

2170 Corporal R. Evans, 1st Battalion, Hertfordshire Regiment, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry and ability at Cuinchy on 22nd September, 1915, when he went out in bright moonlight 150 yards to see how far the wire had been cut by artillery fire. He made an exhaustive examination of it, remained out an hour and a half, and returned with a report which was most valuable. He knew that our machine-guns were ordered to open fire at 10 p.m., but in order to complete his reconnaissance thoroughly he did not return till 10.30 p.m.

He has frequently volunteered for and carried out useful patrol work of this nature.

33129 Private R. J. Fawcett, 9th Battalion, Welsh Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915, near Festubert. During the advance on the enemy's trenches, when part of his company had become isolated, he volunteered to carry a message back across the open to our lines, a distance of over 200 yards, swept by cross-fire from rifles and machine-guns. He successfully delivered his message, and rejoined his company, later crossing the same ground again with another message.

1207 Bombardier J. D. Fitzpatrick, 5th Battery, 1st East Lancashire Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry and resource during the actions of the 4th and 28th June, and 12th/13th July, 1915, on the Gallipoli Peninsula.

Bombardier Fitzpatrick was invariably employed with the guns dug in close behind the forward trenches, and has frequently been brought into notice for coolness and bravery in exposed positions, which were subjected to very heavy fire, both from the enemy's guns and rifles.

3/6703 Corporal G. Flockhart, 8th Battalion, Gordon Highlanders.

For conspicuous gallantry from the 25th to 27th September, 1915, at Hohenzollern redoubt, especially on the latter day. The situation had become very serious, but Corporal Flockhart, by his coolness and bravery, contributed to maintaining the steadiness of the men with him. He also for over three hours carried bombs and ammunition supplies to the redoubt, under a very heavy shell fire, and later he assisted to carry back a number of wounded. Throughout the operations his bravery and devotion to duty were beyond praise.

17811 Private J. Ford, 1st Battalion, Royal Dublin Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry between the 23rd and 29th August, 1915, at Suvla Bay (Dardanelles), when he volunteered to go out almost every night alone to reconnoitre the ground lying between our trenches and those of the enemy. He brought back accurate reports containing valuable information, and in addition he recovered about 60 abandoned rifles. He showed a splendid example of bravery and devotion to duty.

7577 Company Serjeant-Major L. Ford, 1st Battalion, South Staffordshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry from the 25th to 29th September, 1915, near Hulluch. Although severely wounded in the head in the early part of the operations Company Serjeant-Major Ford continued to advance and give encouragement to his men until he fell. His example and devotion to duty were of the highest possible value to all ranks. He had already been recommended for his gallant conduct at Festubert.

1000 Acting Lance-Corporal B. S. Franklin, 2nd Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry from the 29th September to the 1st October, 1915, near Loos. While in charge of Advanced Bearer Post he displayed the greatest bravery and devotion to duty. By his initiative he rescued many wounded from the village of Loos and from the surrounding trenches, and his fine example was instrumental in keeping up the morale of the men under him. The post was under heavy and continuous shell fire.

51694 Acting Bombardier E. Frost, 97th Battery, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry during the operations on Cape Helles (Dardanelles). In the attacks of the 2nd May, 4th and 28th June, 6th and 7th August, 1915, Bombardier Frost showed the greatest bravery and resource in repeatedly repairing telephone lines under heavy shell and rifle fire. No work, however hazardous, was too great for him, and he showed consistently the greatest devotion to duty.

3327 Acting Company Serjeant-Major W. Geddes, 12th Battalion, Royal Scots (Lothian Regiment).

For conspicuous gallantry on the 28th of September, 1915, in Dump Trench. A mixed body of troops on the right flank had become disorganised owing to the enemy bombers. Acting Company Serjeant-Major Geddes rallied and took charge of them. His coolness, example and bravery were of the greatest value.

5101 Serjeant (Acting Company Serjeant-Major) C. Gibson, 6th Battalion, Border Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry and ability on the 9th August, 1915, at Suvla Bay (Dardanelles), when he showed great power of command and leadership at a very critical moment in rallying and bringing forward to the assistance of the company a mixed body of men who had lost their officers. Later in the day Serjeant Gibson, on his own initiative, advanced beyond our lines under heavy fire to bandage and give water to wounded men. He showed a fine example of bravery and devotion to duty.

29640 Corporal B. E. Glover, 47th Divisional Signal Company, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry from the 21st of September to 1st of October, 1915, during operations between Les Brebis and Loos, when he was constantly employed in carrying despatches and Operation Orders over roads under heavy shell fire, and never failed to deliver his messages.

48 Private G. C. Grant, 1st Battalion, Welsh Guards.

For conspicuous gallantry on 27th/28th September, 1915, at Hill 70 and also at Loos. In addition to carrying messages under heavy artillery fire Private Grant made two attempts to bring ammunition forward to the firing line under heavy and continuous fire. In the first attempt he failed, but, volunteering again, he succeeded in the second attempt, thus enabling the men in the firing line to keep off the Germans, who were entrenched close in front of them. Later he attempted to carry in a wounded Officer, but a stretcher-bearer having been shot he was forced to fall back. He went forward again with assistance, and this time was successful. In carrying a wounded man on his back towards the Dressing Station, on 28th September, he was himself seriously wounded.

1762 Private A. Gray, 19th (County of London) Battalion, The London Regiment (St. Pancras), T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry and initiative on the 25th of September, 1915, near Loos. He carried his machine-gun forward to the captured position when only two men of the gun team were left, and selected the gun position in the most able way. His coolness and gallantry under heavy and continuous fire afforded a fine example to all ranks, and greatly contributed to the safety of the Companies of his Battalion.

9027 Serjeant G. Green, 2nd Battalion, East Yorkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 29th September, 1915, near Vermelles, when, with great bravery, he led his men forward against German bombers who had seized a trench on the left of our line, and succeeded in driving them back out of the trench. On the following day Serjeant Green again showed conspicuous bravery and powers of leadership during an action in which he was severely wounded.

3574 Acting Corporal J. Gregory, 11th Battalion, Manchester Regiment.

For conspicuous bravery on the 9th August, 1915, at Suvla Bay (Dardanelles). Owing to the nature of the country, the difficulty of removing the wounded out of shell and rifle fire was very great. Corporal Gregory invariably showed exceptional coolness and bravery in unceasing efforts to attend the wounded, and to bring them into safety. No risk was too great for him to undertake, and he showed at all times the greatest devotion to duty.

2609 Serjeant J. Grimshaw, 1st Battalion, Lancashire Fusiliers.

For conspicuous bravery on 25th April, 1915, at Lancashire Landing, Cape Helles (Dardanelles). In spite of the most devastating fire, and of the most formidable obstacles, he persevered in endeavouring to break through from the beach, and finally succeeded in doing so. Throughout this gallant adventure, where all did well. Serjeant Grimshaw exhibited a coolness and bravery which was specially noticeable.

12519 Quartermaster-Serjeant R. E. Halford, 21st Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty from the 25th to 28th September, 1915, near Hulluch. Quartermaster-Serjeant Halford for four consecutive days and nights, without rest, and under very heavy shell fire, attended to and brought in the wounded, and, although wounded on the evening of the 26th September, he continued with great coolness and bravery to collect and bring in wounded for several hours under heavy shell fire. On the evening of the 27th September he again voluntarily went out to collect the wounded on the Hulluch Road, which was under heavy shell fire at the time.

1105 Serjeant J. W. Hancock, 4th London Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty from 25th to 28th September, 1915, at Loos and Maroc, when he repeatedly went out with the Stretcher Bearer Sub-Division and rendered the most valuable service in directing and assisting in the work of the removal of the wounded from the field under heavy fire. By his bravery and coolness he set an example which went far to contribute to the success of the work of the other bearers.

10681 Private H. E. Hardy, 6th Battalion, King's Own Scottish Borderers.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th of September, 1915, near Madagascar Trench. In company of an Officer, Private Hardy twice advanced over the parapet in the attack on the German lines. Subsequently he returned on two occasions under heavy machine-gun and rifle fire to the battalion headquarters to inform the Commanding Officer of the serious condition of a wounded Officer, and to endeavour to get medical assistance. He also went out to attend to the wounds of two Officers, remaining with one of them for one and a half hours under very heavy fire.

1232 Flight-Serjeant J. Hargreaves, No. 11 Squadron, Royal Flying Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and skill on several occasions, notably the following:—

On 21st September, 1915, when in a machine armed with one machine-gun and piloted by Captain Rees, a large German Biplane armed with two machine-guns was sighted 2,000 feet below. Our machine spiralled down and engaged the enemy, who, being faster, manœuvred to get broadside on and then opened fire. The attack, however, was pressed, and the engine of the enemy's biplane was apparently struck, for after a quick turn it glided down some distance and then fell just inside the German lines. On 31st August Captain Rees, with Flight-Sergeant Hargreaves, fought a powerful German machine for three-quarters of an hour. They then returned for more ammunition and went out again to the attack. Finally the enemy's machine was brought down apparently wrecked.

61602 Sapper P. Harlen, 91st Field Company, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous bravery on the 25th September, 1915, near Loos, when he carried back a message from an Officer, who was unable to advance with his Section, which was 15 yards from the German wire, across the open under a very heavy fire, and successfully brought back a reply.

9213 Private W. J. Head, 5th Battalion, Wiltshire Regiment.

For conspicuous bravery and resource. Private Head was one of a party of seven, who became separated from their regiment during the fighting on the 10th August, 1915, at Chunuk Bair (Dardanelles), and who remained within the enemy's lines for over fifteen days. Although wounded three times between 10th and 26th of August, he collected food for his wounded comrades from the bodies of the dead, this being the sole and very slender source of supply. He displayed the finest qualities of endurance and leadership in keeping up the spirits of the survivors in the most trying conditions.

5438 Private H. Hemsworth, 12th Battalion, Northumberland Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on the 25th/26th September, 1915, when he carried messages under a galling fire between his Battalion on Hill 70 and the Brigade Headquarters in Loos. His coolness and bravery were very marked.

R.7550 Lance-Corporal C. Hendley, 1st Battalion, King's Royal Rifle Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry on the night of the 28th July, 1915, at Givenchy, when in charge of a bombing party on the German crater. Lance-Corporal Hendley remained at his post throwing bombs during a critical period, when the enemy started counter-bombing. His bravery and coolness served as a fine example to others, who, at one time, were somewhat shaken.

12657 Private D. Hewitt, 3rd Battalion, Grenadier Guards.

For conspicuous bravery on the 28th September, 1915, at Puis Bis 14 B. He discovered a machine-gun in a house, and without hesitation, regardless of all personal risk, rushed out and threw bombs into the window until he had destroyed the machine and all the crew. His devotion to duty was most marked.

1910 Private F. Hill, 20th (County of London) Battalion, The London Regiment (Blackheath and Woolwich), Territorial Force.

For conspicuous bravery on the 25th September, 1915, at Loos, in bombing forward during the attack on the Chalk Pit. Although wounded several times, he refused to retire, but continued bombing until the attack was completed. He exhibited great gallantry and devotion to duty.

B/681 Private H. Hill, 9th Battalion, Rifle Brigade.

For great bravery on the 25th September, 1915, in the action on Bellewaarde Ridge. He held a trench by himself for over one and a half hours against constant bomb attacks, which he replied to by throwing bombs from a German store and by rifle fire. Private Hill also took five prisoners in the first advance, and throughout the action exhibited the greatest courage and resource.

6207 Private G. E. Hine, 8th Battalion, East Surrey Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 28th September, 1915, near Fricourt. He is soldier servant to Lieutenant C. Thorne, and insisted on going out with that Officer to bring in his brother, Second Lieutenant M. Thorne, who had been shot close to the German lines. Three previous attempts had failed owing to heavy rifle and machine-gun fire. Their gallant attempt succeeded, but it was found when they returned that Second Lieutenant Thorne was dead.

243 Private H. H. Hoddinott, 2nd Battalion, East Kent Regiment.

For conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty on the 28th September, 1915, near Vermelles, when he voluntarily conveyed an important message across the open. The fire was continuous and intense, and the attempt appeared almost certain death.

A/6170 Serjeant W. Hogg, 2nd Battalion, Royal Scots Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 26th September, 1915, near Hulluch. When the Machine-gun Officer was wounded, Serjeant Hogg took charge of the battalion machine-guns, and carried out his duties throughout the operations with marked ability and great bravery. On the 30th September, being in charge of a machine-gun posted on the extreme left of Gun Trench, and the enemy having broken through on his left and at the same time attacked him in front from a communication trench, he opened fire, killing ten of the enemy, but, as he was being bombed from both front and flank, he was forced to withdraw his gun, which he did successfully. He brought it into action again further down the trench, and continued to fight it throughout the night operations.

8865 Serjeant W. R. Holland, 8th Battalion, Devonshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915, near Hulluch. Although wounded in the thigh in the advance from our front line to the front German trench, Serjeant Holland ran out a telephone wire 500 yards further forward to a position near the Quarries, and kept the front line in communication with the Brigade Headquarters throughout the day. He displayed great coolness and bravery, and his devotion to duty offered a fine example to all ranks.

S/2793 Private D. Holligan, 8th Battalion, Seaforth Highlanders.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Loos and "Hill 70" on 25th September, 1915, as a stretcher-bearer.

Private Holligan had one arm shattered by a bullet, but remained with his Battalion, attending on the wounded, and refused to leave his post until he collapsed, having then been wounded in both legs.

S/3129 Private A. Holmes, 11th Battalion, Rifle Brigade.

For gallant conduct on 1st October, 1915, at the "Red Lamp Salient," in the trenches near Armentières, in assisting in the rescue of men who had been overcome by poison gas in a mine gallery.

M. 2/076770 Private J. Holmes, Army Service Corps (attached 23rd Field Ambulance).

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on the 26th September, 1915, near Hulluch, while driving a motor ambulance up to bring in some wounded. Although he was fired upon by the enemy, he drove the car in the reverse for 400 yards, the man beside him having been killed, till a bullet struck the carburettor. He then came up with another car, and towed his own away safely. His car was hit 22 times, and, but for his great bravery and resource, must have been wrecked.

9416 Private R. Humphries, 5th Battalion, Wiltshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry between the 10th and 26th August, 1915, at Chunuk Bair (Dardanelles). Private Humphries was one of a party who were lost outside our lines for over a fortnight, at the end of which time, although greatly exhausted and weakened by privation, he, with the greatest bravery, made his way in, and so brought about the rescue of his comrades. In the course of his return he was constantly exposed to heavy fire, and only succeeded with the utmost difficulty. He did not hesitate at once to return and act as guide to a relieving party.

12566 Private W. Hurst, 7th Battalion, Loyal North Lancashire Regiment (attached 56th Infantry Brigade Machine-gun Company).

For conspicuous gallantry on the 26th September, 1915, near Festubert. A "Minenwerfer" bomb having landed in the trench, Private Hurst pulled out the fuse, which was alight, and threw the bomb and burning fuse back over the parapet, thus undoubtedly saving the lives of the machine-gun team.

13488 Private W. Ingles, 10th Battalion, Gloucestershire Regiment.

For conspicuous bravery on the 25th September, 1915, in front of Hulluch. Whilst the Battalion was assaulting the first line of German trenches, Private Ingles took a position by himself immediately in front of the German parapet, and, by skilful and continuous throwing of bombs, successfully prevented the enemy from bombing or firing upon our troops, whose advance was impeded by heavy uncut wire entanglements. His bravery and devotion to duty gave a fine example to all ranks.

4/8656 Private A. E. Jackson, 3rd Battalion, Royal Fusiliers (City of London Regiment).

For conspicuous gallantry from the 27th to the 30th September, 1915, near Vermelles. As a stretcher-bearer, Private Jackson displayed great bravery, particularly on three occasions, when he went out, on his own initiative, and successfully brought in wounded men under very heavy fire. Two of these would undoubtedly have died but for his bravery and total disregard of personal danger.

4/6722 Private W. Jackson, 1st Battalion, Bedfordshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the night of the 30th September, 1915. When the Germans made a successful attack on our gun trench, Private Jackson was firing a machine-gun in part of the captured trench. Although attacked on 3 sides with bombs and rifle fire, he remained alone firing his gun. When it failed, he picked it up, and retired, over the open, for 50 yards to a part of the trench still held by us. His bravery and devotion to duty were very marked.

63212 Sapper G. H. Johnson, 96th Field Company, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 8th/9th October, 1915, in persisting in an attempt to cut the German wires in front of their trenches in the Laventie area, after he had been wounded.

18165 Private T. Jones, 1st Battalion, York and Lancaster Regiment.

For conspicuous bravery on the 29th September, 1915, near Vermelles. Private Jones displayed the greatest bravery in continuing to throw bombs from our parapet, although under constant and direct heavy fire. The enemy had cut off the left flank, and he helped to bomb them out and retake the trench. The whole action lasted six hours, and nearly all his fellow bomb-throwers were killed or wounded. His gallantry and devotion to duty were most marked.

S.1434 Private G. J. Judkins, 11th Battalion, Rifle Brigade.

For gallantry, resource and coolness on 16th October, 1915, near Fauquissart, in locating the exact spot where a party of Germans were concealed, which resulted in their being driven out. Private Judkins was severely wounded on this occasion.

16254 Private J. Kell, 7th Battalion, Somerset Light Infantry (attached 181st Company, Royal Engineers).

For conspicuous bravery on 2nd October, 1915, near Laventie, when he voluntarily assisted an Officer in his attempts to rescue men from a mine full of poisonous gas; finally rescuing the Officer himself, single-handed, when the latter collapsed. His devotion to duty was most marked.

1140 Lance-Serjeant J. W. Kelly, 1st/6th Battalion, West Yorkshire Regiment, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry on 24th September, 1915, on the Yser Canal. Owing to heavy bombardment by the enemy with trench mortars, a platoon was ordered to withdraw. While this was being done, a dug-out was blown in by a trench mortar. Serjeant Kelly, in company with another Non-commissioned Officer, hearing groans, went back, started digging, and finally dug out two men. While doing so they were exposed to very heavy fire from the enemy's trench mortars, and were in view of the enemy the whole time. Their bravery and total disregard of danger were very marked.

5787 Serjeant-Major W. King, 1st Battalion, Royal Berkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 28th September, 1915, near Vermelles. During and after the attack on Fosse No. 8, when most of the Officers had been killed or wounded, Serjeant-Major King led the men to the attack with the greatest bravery and a total disregard to personal safety. He afterwards rendered invaluable services in helping to re-organise the Battalion under most trying conditions, and while still under heavy fire. His powers of leadership and untiring energy gave encouragement to all ranks.

10307 Regimental Serjeant-Major G. Lainsbury, 8th Battalion, Royal Berkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915. After being slightly "gassed" at the commencement of the assault, Regimental Serjeant-Major Lainsbury rallied about 60 men, and fought his way through to Hulluch, organising, at the same time, parties for the supply of ammunition. On the 26th September he left the trenches under heavy fire and collected ammunition from the dead and wounded. He has, on all occasions, given a fine example of bravery and devotion to duty.

55713 Acting Bombardier F. Lane, 97th Battery, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry in the attacks of the 2nd May, 4th and 28th June, 6th and 7th August, 1915, on Cape Helles (Dardanelles). Bombardier Lane displayed the greatest bravery and resource in repeatedly repairing telephone lines under heavy shell and rifle fire. No work was too hazardous for him to undertake, and he showed throughout the greatest devotion to duty.

847 Gunner H. M. Lane, 8th (London) Howitzer Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th of September, 1915, at Grenay. Whilst transmitting a message, a shell burst in the building next to where he was, and filled the place with dust and debris. He continued his message as though unconscious of the incident. Although under heavy fire, he displayed perfect steadiness and devotion to duty. In May he had been brought to notice on four occasions for gallant work under fire at Festubert.

1820 Lance-Corporal C. Leadbeater, 1/5th Battalion, Lincolnshire Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry near Zillebeke on 30th September, 1915. When a mine was exploded under trench 47, this Non-Commissioned Officer was in charge of the listening post at the end of the trench, and was blown over the parapet by the explosion. He at once crawled back, and, although seriously injured, collected his men, opened rapid rifle fire on the enemy, and remained in command until ordered to go to a dressing station.

25478 Private G. Lewis, 2nd Battalion, Cheshire Regiment.

For conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty on the night of the 2nd/3rd October, 1915, near Vermelles. The Germans expected an attack by us, and the fire on both sides was very heavy, in addition to which flares were being constantly sent up. Private Lewis was ceaseless in his efforts to bring in the wounded men, who were lying between our own and the enemy's lines. On one occasion he was fired on by our own men, who were unable to distinguish who he was. He continued this work until after daylight.

11281 Private J. Litherland, 6th Battalion, Border Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry and initiative on the 9th August, 1915, at Suvla Bay (Dardanelles). After the Officer and all the Non-Commissioned Officers of his Platoon had been killed or wounded, he assumed the command, and led it with the greatest courage and success. He displayed fine qualities of leadership, and his example was of the greatest encouragement to all ranks.

89128 Temporary Corporal D. E. Llewellyn, "A" Battery, 48th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915. The telephone wire to Railway Wood having been completely destroyed by shell fire, Corporal Llewellyn exhibited the greatest courage and disregard of the heaviest fire in his attempts to repair it, which eventually he succeeded in doing. He has repeatedly performed most valuable and exceptionally good work in this direction throughout the campaign.

11459 Private H. Londesbrough, 3rd Battalion, Coldstream Guards.

For great bravery and resource on the 8th October, 1915, near Loos. The enemy, having made an attack with great determination along the trenches occupied by his battalion, were successful in taking the trench on the left of that occupied by Private Londesbrough and five other men, and came pouring into it. The situation was most critical. Realising what had happened, he, accompanied by the other men, sprang forward and faced the enemy, driving them with bombs foot by foot down the trench, and recapturing the whole of it. This they did with the greatest gallantry in face of a determined opposition, clearing out of the trench at least ten times their number, and thus saving a critical situation.

9277 Private E. Lucas, 2nd Battalion, East Yorkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty on the 29th/30th September, 1915, near Vermelles. During German counter-attacks he was continually leading parties of bomb throwers. By his coolness and daring he set a fine example.

102838 Lance-Corporal R. Luke, 178th Tunnelling Company, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry at Tambour du Clos, near Fricourt, on 21st August, 1915, when assisting in rescue work in a mine gallery. The gallery was foul with gas and in total darkness and the work of rescue was carried out under most difficult and dangerous conditions.

3/5314 Private J. MacDonald, 5th Battalion, Cameron Highlanders.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th of September, 1915, in Fosse Trench. When the right of our front line was held up by the fire of the enemy's machine gun, he worked his way round alone, and put the gun out of action with bombs, thus saving the situation. His bravery and devotion to duty were very marked.

L/8682 Private W. J. Marshall, 1st Battalion, Middlesex Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915, near Cambrai. Private Marshall was in charge of a machine gun, and when all the remainder of the gun team had been killed, he displayed the greatest coolness and courage in working it, undoubtedly doing great execution on the enemy, who were only forty or fifty yards away. He continued working the gun until ordered to retire, and successfully brought it out of action.

2877 Corporal R. H. Masters, 21st (County of London) Battalion, The London Regiment (First Surrey Rifles), T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry on the night of the 29th September, 1915, at Loos, when he laid a telephone wire to Headquarters of the Brigade from Headquarters of his battalion during very heavy shell and shrapnel fire. He was obliged to make a second journey in order to obtain more wire and repair the portion first laid, which had been damaged by shell fire. He was continually at work during the night of the 29th/30th September in keeping the wires in working order under heavy continuous fire.

S/3434 Private T. May, 8th Battalion, Royal Highlanders.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 27th of September, 1915, at Hohenzollern Redoubt, when he made repeated journeys to the rear and brought up supplies of ammunition to his gun, under heavy fire. His devotion to duty was very marked.

12511 Serjeant F. McAlear, 13th Battalion, Royal Scots (Lothian Regiment).

For conspicuous gallantry on 26th September, 1915, when he set a fine example of coolness and fearlessness under trying circumstances during the occupation of the trench under Hill 70, which had previously been abandoned.

Serjeant McAlear has shown consistent gallantry in helping wounded men under heavy fire.

755 Lance-Corporal J. McDonell, 1st/4th Battalion, Cameron Highlanders, T.F.

For conspicuous bravery on the 27th of September, 1915, in front of Hulluch. Our bombing party having been temporarily withdrawn from our block in the communication trench near Point 39, and the bombardment suddenly ceasing, the Germans captured the block. Lance-Corporal McDonell at once led a determined attack, drove the Germans back, recaptured a supply of our own bombs, and using these, pursued the enemy back beyond their own block, killing several of them. His bravery and powers of leadership were most conspicuous throughout the operations.

14537 Lance-Corporal G. McEvoy, 13th Battalion, Royal Scots (Lothian Regiment).

For conspicuous gallantry on 26th September, 1915, when he displayed great courage throughout the engagement, and rescued a wounded officer of the East Yorkshire Regiment on Hill 70, under heavy fire.

18947 Lance-Corporal A. McKelvey, 9th Battalion, King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th/26th September, 1915, in the action on the northern slopes of Hill 70, south-east of Loos. Although twice wounded, Lance-Corporal McKelvey continued, with great coolness and bravery, to lead and encourage his men, and only desisted on being wounded a third time. He gave a fine exhibition of courage and devotion to duty.

8607 Sapper K. McLachlan, Scottish Cable Signal Company, Royal Engineers, T.F. (attached 8th Divisional Signal Company).

For conspicuous gallantry from the 27th September to 10th October, 1915, near Loos, when he rendered invaluable service in maintaining communication by constantly repairing telephone lines under heavy shell fire. During an intense enemy bombardment and attack on the 8th October, Sapper McLachlan was continuously on the line repairing a large number of breaks caused by the trenches being blown in by the enemy shells. Communication was always re-established owing to his courage and persistent efforts under most trying conditions.

13004 Serjeant J. Mitchell, 2nd Battalion, South Wales Borderers.

For conspicuous gallantry and ability on the 21st and 22nd August, 1915, at Suvla Bay (Dardanelles). When all the officers of his own company had been killed or wounded, Serjeant Mitchell, entirely on his own responsibility, assembled and took charge of about 300 men of different units who were without officers. He re-formed the line, and continued the attack against the enemy's position, displaying the greatest bravery and power of leadership, and a devotion to duty beyond all praise.

10984 Private F. Moore, 2nd Battalion, Coldstream Guards.

For conspicuous bravery on the 8th October, 1915, near Loos. The supply of bombs having for the moment run out, the Germans were enabled to reach our barricade, and get on to the parapet of our trench. At this moment Private Moore, with another man, dashed through the German bombs, and drove the enemy off with loss, regaining the barricade. Although he was slightly wounded, he continued to hold the barricade, and repulsed all further efforts of the enemy, and by his bravery and resource saved what might have been a critical situation.

S/1748 Lance-Serjeant J. Morrice, 8th Battalion, Gordon Highlanders.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th of September, 1915, at Pekin Trench. One of the machine guns of another regiment was attacked by a German bombing party. They captured the gun, but Serjeant Morrice rushed up and bayoneted them, and succeeded in bringing the gun back to our lines. He gave a fine example of bravery and devotion to duty.

9018 Lance-Corporal T. Morris, 2nd Battalion, Shropshire Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry on the night of 25th/26th September, 1915. Lance-Corporal Morris was in a bomb shelter when a bandolier full of French bombs fell to the ground. The fuse, a five-second one, of one became ignited. He immediately took up the bomb, went into the communication trench, but was unable to throw it away, as there were men in the trench, and for ten yards it was roofed with wire-netting. He ran to the end of the wire-netting, and threw the bomb, which exploded immediately it had left his hand.

7804 Company Serjeant-Major G. Mudford, 1st Battalion, Welsh Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on the night of the 1st/2nd October, 1915. After the trench known as "Little Willie" had been captured, Company Serjeant-Major Mudford volunteered to go back to our trench, 300 yards behind, for reinforcements and to bring up bombs and ammunition. This he successfully did on nine occasions under very heavy shell and rifle fire. Owing to his gallantry and resource the garrison were able to hold the trench.

4888 Bombardier J. L. Nelson, 4th Highland (Mountain) Brigade, Royal Garrison Artillery, T.F.

For conspicuous bravery on the 9th August, 1915, at Cape Helles (Dardanelles). All the other gun numbers having been wounded, Bombardier Nelson was left alone to work his gun, which was under the accurate fire of the enemy's guns at close range. With the greatest courage and devotion he kept up his fire single-handed, and rendered inestimable service at a critical period.

25828 Private W. H. Nixon, 2nd Battalion, Cheshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on 1st October, 1915, near Vermelles, when he threw bombs amongst the enemy during the whole day and night, until he was the only man left out of the whole company. Private Nixon undoubtedly saved an officer's life on this day by picking up a German bomb which was on the point of exploding close by him and hurling it back amongst the enemy.

5743 Private D. O'Brien, 1st Battalion, Irish Guards.

For conspicuous bravery on the evening of the 8th October, 1915, near Loos. When a battalion had been driven out of their trenches, with very heavy loss, Private O'Brien went forward in charge of the bomb throwers of his company, and directed his men with the greatest courage and skill under very trying circumstances. The men with him bombed down 100 ft. of trench, killing many Germans, he himself being responsible for several. He remained bombing all night until relieved by the Scots Guards at 6 a.m. next morning. His conduct throughout and his devotion to duty were very fine.

1046 Lance-Corporal M. Parker, 1/5th (Dumfries and Galloway) Battalion, King's Own Scottish Borderers, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 14th September, 1915, on the Gallipoli Peninsula. In the course of mining operations the gallery in which Lance-Corporal Parker was working broke through into one of the enemy's galleries. By accurate fire he held off the Turks, who began firing and throwing bombs into our gallery, until he was driven back by fumes, which extinguished all the lights. So soon as the air cleared he returned, and, under heavy fire from the enemy, he plugged up the breach between the two galleries, and thus enabled the charge to be laid which destroyed the enemy's galleries. His bravery and devotion to duty were very marked.

8305 Private T. Parsons, 2nd Battalion, South Staffordshire Regiment.

For conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty on the 25th September, 1915, near Quinchy. During an assault on the embankment redoubts, two officers were wounded within a few yards of the German wire. Private Parsons, although wounded himself, crawled to these officers under a very heavy shell fire, and assisted them into a shell-hole in the endeavour to give them some place of comparative safety.

10777 Private F. Pearce, 1st Battalion, Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

For conspicuous bravery from the 25th to 29th September, 1915, near Hulluch. Private Pearce, one of the regimental stretcher bearers, with great heroism and regardless of all personal danger, brought in wounded men throughout the day and night under heavy and continuous fire, carrying many of them on his back. His bravery and devotion to duty were beyond all praise.

13953 Private W. Plowman, 6th Battalion, Northamptonshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on the night of 28th/29th September, 1915, near Fricourt, when he, with a non-commissioned officer, were the leaders of a working party constructing a new trench. They were under heavy fire at one exposed spot, but continued to work till the non-commissioned officer was mortally and Private Plowman severely wounded. The whole working party were encouraged by their example and displayed the same keenness and disregard of danger. Private Plowman refused to accept any medical aid till the non-commissioned officer had been cared for and removed.

1023 Serjeant A. O. Pollard, Honourable Artillery Company, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 30th September, 1915, at Sanctuary Wood, during the bombing fight. Although severely wounded, Serjeant Pollard continued to throw bombs, at the same time issuing orders to and encouraging his men. By his example and gallant conduct he renewed confidence among the bombers at a time when they were shaken, owing to the enemy being in superior numbers and throwing many more bombs than were available on our side. He did not give up until he fell, severely wounded for the second time.

10456 Lance-Serjeant W. W. Printer, 1st Battalion, Coldstream Guards.

For conspicuous gallantry on 28th September, 1915, when, in company with Serjeant Hopkins, he went out to rescue a wounded man in front of our trenches at the Chalk Pit. The wounded man was close to the Bois Hugo. When Serjeant Hopkins was shot down by a German sniper Lance-Serjeant Printer continued on with the wounded man and brought him safely in. The whole ground in front of the Chalk Pit was covered by the enemy's machine guns. Later he went out again with Captain Robartes and brought in Serjeant Hopkins.

20028 Company Quartermaster-Serjeant A. V. Prosser, 6th Battalion, Border Regiment.

For conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty on the 21st August, 1915, at Suvla Bay (Dardanelles). During an advance over a bullet-swept area a fire broke out in the scrub, and a number of wounded were in imminent danger of being burnt to death. Quartermaster-Serjeant Prosser went out under very heavy fire to bring in a wounded officer, who was, however, killed by a second bullet before he could be put into shelter. He immediately returned and brought in another wounded man, and continued going out and dragging the wounded out of the burning scrub and carrying them into safety on his back. Owing to his bravery and total disregard of personal risk he undoubtedly saved many lives. He was under heavy shell and rifle fire throughout.

7691 Private G. Pullen, 1/4th (Denbighshire) Battalion, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th of September, 1915, at Loos, when, on his own initiative, he successfully carried a telephone wire to the German trenches, and in returning brought in some prisoners. Later he assisted to bring in a wounded man under very heavy shell fire. He was ultimately wounded when close to the trenches.

18158 Quartermaster-Serjeant G. P. Pursey, 2nd Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps.

For conspicuous bravery, notably from the 28th September to the 1st October, 1915, as senior Non-Commissioned Officer of a Bearer Division, when he showed the greatest courage and total disregard of personal danger in collecting and evacuating wounded from the village of Loos and the neighbouring trenches, which were under a heavy and continuous fire.

10015 Private G. Puttock, 2nd Battalion, East Surrey Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry from the 27th to the 30th September, 1915, during the operations near Hohenzollern Redoubt. Under heavy bomb and rifle fire, Private Puttock was continually at work mending and connecting up the telephone wires. He had no shelter of any kind and no rest for forty-eight hours. Throughout this trying time he gave a fine exhibition of bravery and devotion to duty.

11487 Lance-Corporal W. Queen, 6th Battalion, Royal Scots Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 27th of September, 1915, at Cambrin, when he made repeated journeys across the open under very heavy machine-gun and rifle fire to bring up bombs for the battalion. His bravery and devotion to duty were most marked.

6311 Lance-Corporal P. Quinn, 2nd Battalion, Irish Guards.

For conspicuous gallantry on 27th September, 1915, at Chalk Pit Wood, when he volunteered to go back and carry up ammunition, which was badly needed. Although exposed to heavy machine-gun and rifle fire throughout, he succeeded in bringing up two boxes of ammunition, making two journeys for the purpose. His bravery and devotion to duty were most marked.

7478 Private W. Ramsay, 1st Battalion, Royal Scots Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 25th September, 1915, near Hooge. He was wounded early in the attack, but, on his return, finding that the 24th Trench Mortar Battery was short-handed, he immediately joined the battery, rendering great assistance, notwithstanding the pain from his broken shin-bone.

18575 Private (Acting Serjeant) M. B. Redmayne, 1st Battalion, East Lancashire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on patrol duty on several occasions, notably near Hamel on 23rd September, 1915, when, seeing two German scouts moving towards a mill, he posted the two men of his own patrol, and went forward himself round the building to meet them. One of the enemy shot at him twice at close range with a revolver, but he shot this man through the arm, closed with him, and threw him to the ground. He finally brought him in as a prisoner.

22735 Sapper F. Reece, 1st Divisional Signal Company, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry and resource during the operations on the 25th September, 1915, near Hulluch, and more especially on the 26th September at Chalk Pit, and on the 30th September at Loos. Sapper Reece displayed great bravery in repairing telephone lines under heavy and continuous fire, and never hesitated to undertake any work however hazardous. His devotion to duty was most marked.

6301 Private J. Regan, 1st Battalion, Irish Guards.

For conspicuous bravery on the evening of the 8th October, 1915, near Loos. When a battalion of the Grenadier Guards had been driven out of their trenches with very heavy loss, Private Regan went forward in charge of the bomb throwers of his company, and directed his men with the greatest courage and skill under very trying circumstances. Under his command they bombed down 100 feet of trench, killing many Germans. He remained bombing all night until relieved by the Scots Guards at 6 a.m. next morning. His conduct throughout and his devotion to duty were very fine.

11368 Private H. Rendall, 12th Battalion, Northumberland Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th/26th September, 1915, at Hill 70, when he remained at his machine gun all night under heavy and continuous fire, doing excellent work after his comrades on either side of him had been killed. His coolness and bravery and devotion to duty were most marked.

S/3598 Corporal P. F. Rennie, 1st Battalion, Gordon Highlanders.

For conspicuous bravery on the 25th September, 1915, at Hooge, when, during the attack on the German trenches, he succeeded in carrying back an urgent request for more bombs and bombers to his battalion headquarters over open ground swept by machine-gun and rifle fire, and under heavy shell fire. He volunteered for this dangerous duty after several men had been either killed or wounded in the attempt.

S/3358 Private D. Richardson, 8th Battalion, Royal Highlanders.

For conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty on the 25th September, 1915, at Fosse 8, when, although six times wounded, he continued to work his machine gun till it was blown to pieces by a shell, and he himself was seriously wounded.

8100 Company Serjeant-Major G. W. Richell, 1st Battalion, York and Lancaster Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 29th September, 1915, near Vermelles. Owing to all his company officers having been killed or wounded, Company Serjeant-Major Richell was left in charge of his company, and with great coolness and judgment continued to hold his trench and to repulse repeated attacks by the enemy at a critical time, when his flanks were in great danger.

B/1556 Private C. G. Roberts, 9th Battalion, Rifle Brigade.

For conspicuous bravery on the 25th September, 1915, on Bellewaarde Ridge, when, alone, he held a barricade, after all his comrades had been killed, for over two and a half hours against incessant German bomb attacks. When all his own bombs were expended Private Roberts defended the barricade by rifle fire and by throwing German bombs which he found, and also bombs which had been thrown at him and had not exploded. With great determination he remained at his post until ordered away.

19801 Serjeant S. Robinson, 2nd Battalion, Wiltshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915, near Vermelles, when he advanced by a communication trench leading from a trench just captured to one held by the enemy, with bombs, thus making certain that the trench was clear before it was blocked. On the 27th September, he crossed several hundred yards of open country under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire to fetch bombs, which were urgently needed, and succeeded in bringing them to the point where they were required. In doing this Serjeant Robinson's rifle, owing to the heavy fire, was smashed and rendered useless.

60342 Gunner W. Sansum, 97th Battery, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry in the attacks of the 2nd May, 4th and 28th June, 6th and 7th August, 1915, on Cape Helles (Dardanelles). Gunner Sansum displayed the greatest bravery and resource in repeatedly repairing telephone lines under heavy shell and rifle fire. No work was too hazardous for him to undertake, and he showed throughout the greatest devotion to duty.

11574 Lance-Corporal A. G. Scott, 5th Battalion, Wiltshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry between the 10th and 26th August, 1915, at Chunuk Bair (Dardanelles). Lance-Corporal Scott was one of a party who were lost outside our lines for over a fortnight, at the end of which time, although greatly exhausted and weakened by privation, he, with the greatest bravery, made his way in, and so brought about the rescue of his comrades. In the course of his return he was constantly exposed to heavy fire, and only succeeded with the utmost difficulty. He did not hesitate at once to return and act as guide to a relieving party.

2322 Private J. W. Shaw, 1st Battalion, York and Lancaster Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 29th September, 1915, near Vermelles. Although untrained, Private Shaw volunteered to act as a bomb thrower. On two separate occasions he crawled across the open under heavy fire to the German parapet and threw bombs into the ranks of the German bombers who were attacking our right flank. He gave a fine example of courage and devotion to duty.

17337 Private W. Shaw, 9th Battalion, Cheshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915, near Festubert. When a retirement was ordered he helped a wounded Officer back to safety behind our parapet. He then heard that the Officer, whose servant he was, was wounded and at once went out again to his assistance under an exceptionally accurate and heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, being himself wounded in so doing.

16965 Corporal E. G. Sheldrake, 9th Battalion, Welsh Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry and resource on the 25th September, 1915, near Festubert. During the advance on the enemy's trenches, although twice wounded, he continued to advance, and by his coolness and bravery gave great encouragement to the men with him. Afterwards he rendered great assistance in collecting and bringing back the remainder of his company, at the same time contributing greatly to cover the retirement of two machine-guns. He was under a very heavy and continuous fire the whole time.

9838 Serjeant H. Sheppard, 2nd Battalion, Worcestershire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 26th September, 1915, at the Quarries, near Vermelles. During the attack Serjeant Sheppard showed great coolness and resource in rallying men to repel bomb attacks by the enemy, and his fine example of devotion to duty gave great encouragement to all with him. He had previously been brought to notice in connection with gallantry and good work performed in May at Richebourg.

43279 Corporal W. L. Shortridge, 16th Signal Company, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 26th September, 1915, near Hulluch, when he laid a telephone wire to the gun trench under heavy fire and remained on the end of it for half an hour in the open in rear of the gun trench until ordered to withdraw. He showed great coolness, bravery and devotion to duty.

1773 Serjeant C. G. Simpson, 1st/6th Battalion, West Yorkshire Regiment, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry on 24th September, 1915, on the Yser Canal. Owing to heavy bombardment by the enemy with trench mortars, a platoon was ordered to withdraw. While this was being done, a dug-out was blown in by a trench mortar. Serjeant Simpson, in company with another Non-commissioned Officer, hearing groans, went back, started digging and finally dug out two men. While doing so they were exposed to heavy fire from the enemy's trench mortars, and were in view of the enemy the whole time. Their bravery and total disregard of danger were very marked.

3/4130 Serjeant J. Smellie, 8th Battalion, Royal Highlanders.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915. During the operations against Fosse 8, although wounded, he refused to retire and carried on his duties throughout the day. On the 26th and 27th September, when all the Officers had been killed or wounded, he showed great bravery in leading his company, until seriously wounded through the head.

4708 Serjeant W. R. Smethurst, 2nd Battalion, Royal Sussex Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915, near Le Rutoire. During the first assault, when numbers of men in the first line were falling back suffering from gas fumes, and at a critical time when good leading was essential, Serjeant Smethurst got his men well in hand, and, although the gas and smoke were very thick, he led them forward, and by his bravery and example materially assisted in the attack, in which he was wounded.

12234 Private H. Smith, 3rd Battalion, Coldstream Guards.

For great bravery and resource on the 8th October, 1915, near Loos. The enemy, having made an attack with great determination along the trenches occupied by his battalion, were successful in taking the trench on the left of that occupied by Private Smith and five other men, and came pouring into it. The situation was most critical. Realising what had happened, he, accompanied by the other men, sprang forward and faced the enemy, driving them with bombs foot by foot down the trench and recapturing the whole of it. This they did in face of a determined opposition, clearing out of the trench at least ten times their number, and thus saving a critical situation.

5589 Private W. Smith, 2nd Battalion, East Kent Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 28th September, 1915, in the operations round Fosse No. 8. When the enemy threatened our right flank, Private Smith, although not a trained bomber, went forward alone with a box of bombs, and bombed the enemy. Unable to hold them in check from the trench, he jumped on to the parapet, and lit and threw the bombs from there, being under a heavy fire the whole time. Although wounded in the left arm, he held the enemy in check until his regimental bombers arrived. His bravery and devotion to duty were very marked.

9417 Serjeant W. D. Sowter, 1st Battalion, Cameron Highlanders.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915, in the assault near Hulluch. As Machine-gun Serjeant of the Battalion he handled his guns with the greatest bravery and dash during the later stages of the assault, when both the machine-gun Officers had been wounded. With another Non-Commissioned Officer he pushed on with one gun, and materially assisted in the advance. While firing the gun the safety-catch was struck by a bullet, stopping the gun. Although under very heavy fire, he took out the damaged portion and continued to fire without it.

6048 Acting Serjeant C. Spencer, 2nd Battalion, East Surrey Regiment.

For conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty from the 27th to the 30th September, 1915, during the operations near Hohen-zollern Redoubt. To save a critical situation bombs had to be taken to a trench, which was cut off owing to the communication trench being filled with dead and wounded. Serjeant Spencer, with a gallantry and determination beyond all praise, led parties on six different occasions, across a shell and rifle fire swept area, and in this manner delivered bombs which helped to save the situation.

9217 Private F. G. Stevens, 1st Battalion, Scottish Rifles.

For conspicuous bravery on the 27th September, 1915, near Cambrin. Private Stevens was one of a party sent out, by daylight, to ascertain if the enemy's parapet was fully manned. He reached the parapet after most of the party had been killed or wounded, and succeeded in returning with a message that the trenches were fully manned and machine-guns mounted. Later on, he again went out over the parapet and succeeded in bringing in a wounded man.

1485 Private C. H. I. Stewart, 20th (County of London) Battalion, The London Regiment (Blackheath and Woolwich), Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry from the 25th to 28th September, 1915, at Maroc and Loos. Although wounded on the first day when carrying in a wounded man, he refused to retire, and continued his duties during the four following days in spite of his wound, exhibiting a gallantry and devotion to duty beyond praise.

94695 Gunner C. G. Stone, 73rd Battery, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry near St. Vaast on 15th September, 1915. When a B.L. wagon body had been set on fire by a shell striking one of the cartridges, Gunner Stone at once left his shelter and began removing the ammunition, his example being followed by other men. He was not only in imminent danger from the explosion of the ammunition, but high explosive shells were falling in and around the battery at the time.

18271 Private A. Street, 1st Battalion, York and Lancaster Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 29th September, 1915, near Vermelles, when he carried bombs up to the front line trenches, and then stood on the parapet and fired, while the bombers advanced down a sap covered by him. He was fully exposed to heavy rifle and bomb fire from the enemy, but he remained at his post till the enemy had been repulsed. His bravery and devotion were most marked.

36943 Bombardier A. E. Stroud, Headquarters, 15th Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 28th June, 1915, at Cape Helles (Dardanelles), when he was constantly at work repairing telephone lines under heavy rifle and shell fire from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. until he was at last severely wounded. Throughout the action the telephonic communication of the artillery was maintained in spite of the hostile gun fire. This was due to Bombardier Stroud's coolness and bravery. He gave a splendid example of devotion to duty.

14324 Corporal G. Stubbs, 10th Battalion, Yorkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry during the action at Hill 70, south-east of Loos, on the 25th and 26th September, 1915, in conveying messages under a continuous and galling fire. Corporal Stubbs gave a fine example of total disregard of danger and of devotion to duty.

32674 Lance-Corporal J. Sweeney, 42nd Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th, 26th and 27th September, 1915, at Hooze, when he stayed in an open trench under very heavy shell fire, directing the stretcher-bearers and dressing many wounded. Lance-Corporal Sweeney continued this duty for twenty-seven hours, and then led stretcher-bearer parties up and down the trenches to the advance trenches, working incessantly for forty-eight hours. His devotion to duty was most marked.

2087 Serjeant A. J. Taylor, 7th City of London Battalion, The London Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th of September, 1915, at Loos, when he showed great powers of leadership in cutting off and capturing a party of Germans. He also displayed great bravery and coolness in the German counter-attack on the Double Crassier when, with three bombers, he held the enemy back till the trench was double blocked.

11768 Private A. Teasdale, 3rd Battalion, Coldstream Guards.

For great bravery and resource on the 8th October, 1915, near Loos. The enemy, having made an attack with great determination along the trenches occupied by his battalion, were successful in taking the trench on the left of that occupied by Private Teasdale and five other men, and came pouring into it. The situation was most critical. Realising what had happened he, accompanied by the other men, sprang forward and faced the enemy, driving them with bombs foot by foot down the trench, and recapturing the whole of it. This they did with the greatest gallantry in face of a determined opposition, clearing out of the trench at least ten times their number, and thus saving a critical situation.

10353 Private W. Theobald, 2nd Battalion, East Surrey Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry from the 27th to the 30th September, 1915, near Hohenzollern Redoubt, when he carried frequent messages, without hesitation, across shell-swept areas, and also under heavy and continuous machine-gun and rifle fire. On many occasions Private Theobald was exposed to this fire at close range. All messages handed to him were safely delivered.

7/12848 Private R. Thompson, 7th Battalion, Border Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on 26th September, 1915, near Hooge, when, in company with an Officer, he held on in the enemy's trenches, and used his bombs until the supply was exhausted, and the enemy's shelling compelled him to retire. He gave a fine example of devotion to duty.

5210 Private G. Tiller, 1st Battalion, Royal Munster Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry on the night of the 21st and 22nd August, 1915, at Suvla Bay (Dardanelles). Two Officers and forty men of another unit had been isolated, and their whereabouts was not accurately known. Private Tiller volunteered to go out and assist in finding and bringing this party back, an enterprise involving great personal risk, but he unhesitatingly undertook it.

1401 Temporary Corporal W. S. Tilling, 2nd Battalion, Royal Sussex Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 25th September, 1915, near Hulluch. In the first assault on the German trenches Corporal Tilling was wounded and lay out all day close to the German wire. When the final and successful assault was made he, although wounded, joined in it, and, most of the machine gunners having been killed, he helped to take forward one of the abandoned guns, and dug an emplacement in the German second line for it. He was ordered back to have his wounds dressed, but continued at duty and accompanied the battalion in the advance to the Chalk Pit, not going to the rear until the following day. His gallant conduct and devotion to duty were most marked.

S. 3134 Serjeant M. Toole, 11th Battalion, Rifle Brigade.

For gallant conduct on 1st October, 1915, at the "Red Lamp Salient" in the trenches near Armentières, in assisting an Officer to rescue men who had been overcome by poison gas in a mine gallery.

When the Officer was himself overcome Serjeant Toole succeeded in extricating him also.

9494 Lance-Corporal W. Townley, 1st Battalion, Border Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on the 21st August, 1915, at Suvla Bay (Dardanelles), when he successfully carried messages under heavy fire to the firing line throughout the day and night, bringing back helpful reports. Corporal Townley was engaged on this dangerous work continually for eighteen hours without rest.

4545 Corporal G. A. Tritton, 2nd Battalion, East Kent Regiment.

For valuable services rendered under circumstances of great personal danger. He was seriously wounded and has since lost an arm.

9088 Drummer L. H. Tucker, 2nd Battalion, Cheshire Regiment.

For conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty on the night of the 2nd/3rd October, 1915, near Vermelles. The Germans expected an attack by us, and the fire on both sides was very heavy, in addition to which flares were being constantly sent up. Drummer Tucker was ceaseless in his efforts to bring in the wounded men who were lying between our own and the enemy's lines. On one occasion he was fired on by our own men, who were unable to distinguish who he was. He continued this work until after daylight, exhibiting marked courage.

8866 Private R. J. Vale, 2nd Battalion, Coldstream Guards.

For conspicuous bravery on the 8th October, 1915, near Loos. During the German attack on our sap-head in St. Elie Avenue practically the whole of the sap-head, except the barricade, was levelled by
