

SUPPLEMENT

TO

The Edinburgh Gazette

Of TUESDAY the 18th of SEPTEMBER 1917.

Published by Authority.

This Gazette has now been registered at the General Post Office for transmission by Inland Post as a newspaper. As regards copies sent by post within the United Kingdom, unless dispatched in proper course from a Metropolitan Government Office, or from the Publishing Office of the Gazette, the postage should in future be prepaid at the rate of a halfpenny for each copy. Copies sent abroad should be prepaid at the rate of a halfpenny for every 2 ounces, except in the case of copies sent to Canada, which will be transmissible by the Canadian Magazine Post at the rate of a penny for every pound or fraction of a pound.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1917.

War Office,
17th September, 1917.

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to award a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to:—

Maj. (A./Lt.-Col.) James Lauderdale Gilbert Burnett, D.S.O., Gord. Highrs.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion during the attack and capture of a position. The success of the attack was greatly due to his leadership and the confidence with which he inspired his men.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18th February, 1917.)

Maj. (T./Lt.-Col.) George Henry Gater, D.S.O., Notts. & Derby. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion with brilliant skill and resolution during an attack, minimising their casualties during three days' intense shelling by his able dispositions and good eye for ground. He directed the consolidation, and remained in command for three days, although severely wounded in the face early in the action.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3rd June, 1916.)

Maj. (T./Lt.-Col.) David Mathers, D.S.O., R. Innis. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion during an attack, remaining for two days at his post, although badly wounded and shaken by a shell. His example of fine leadership greatly inspired his battalion.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14th November, 1916.)

Capt. (A./Lt.-Col.) Guy Clifford Stubbs, D.S.O., Suff. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in holding captured trenches with his battalion for three days against hostile counter-attacks. He proceeded at a critical moment to the captured line, under heavy enemy barrage, to encourage his men and re-organise the defence, and shot several of the enemy who were in shell-holes. His gallant example and untiring energy inspired all ranks with the greatest enthusiasm.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1st January, 1917.)

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the Field:—

T./Capt. Lewis Anderson, M.B., R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He carried out his duties for forty-eight hours without relief, attending to over 100 cases and working under the most adverse conditions. He was exposed throughout to intense and heavy fire of shell and gas shells, which rendered it necessary for him to work in a mask. The following night, after his battalion had been withdrawn, he returned to search for wounded in the front line, which was still in close contact with the enemy, and, after working for several hours under heavy shell fire, he collected and evacuated all his wounded, having displayed magnificent devotion and the utmost contempt for danger throughout.

Maj. Vivian Allan Batchelor, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at all times. During an intense bombardment of his battery, with H.E. by day and gas by night, he continually moved about, with an utter disregard of danger, extinguishing dumps that had been set on fire and warning his men at the outset of gas attacks. He brought his battery up in exceptionally quick time, and kept them in action by his magnificent example, and, although badly gassed and wounded, refused to leave them. He has also made daring and valuable personal reconnaissances on several occasions.

Maj. Maurice Alexander Beattie, R.G.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding and fighting his battery splendidly for four days and nights under intense concentrated heavy fire. When three guns were rendered useless, he continued to fire with the fourth, until that was also hit. He displayed very great courage and endurance under most trying conditions.

Maj. Gilbert Robertson Burnett-Stuart, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under fire. He commanded his battery with great skill and success, overcoming difficulties of observation for wire-cutting, and on one occasion going along the whole of the front line in his zone under heavy hostile fire to ascertain the position of our most advanced infantry. He successfully accomplished this, showing exceptional coolness and an utter disregard of personal safety.

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) William Charles Campbell, M.C., R.F.C., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on numerous occasions whilst on offensive patrols. He has displayed the greatest courage and skill in attacking enemy aircraft at close range, destroying some and driving others down out of control. He has proved himself to be a scout leader of the highest class, and has destroyed twelve hostile machines and two balloons, besides taking part in many other combats during the last three months. By his fearlessness and offensive spirit he has set a splendid example to all ranks.

Lt. (A./Capt.) Geoffrey Francis Claudet, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in taking over and commanding his battery under exceptionally difficult and trying conditions. Though his Battery Commander and two subalterns had been killed, and the battery had suffered heavily, two guns being damaged, as well as many of his men, he succeeded in bringing the remaining guns into action very shortly after assuming command. By his gallant conduct and great devotion to duty he set a splendid example to his men.

Capt. (T./Maj.) Gilbert Eric Graham Cockburn, M.C., R. Ir. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a most critical and obscure period of an attack he was sent out with orders to clear up the situation, if possible, and to assume control of his battalion if he could reach his front line. This he eventually succeeded in doing, under heavy fire, during which he was shot through the right eye. Undeterred by this he stuck most gallantly to his mission, and although wounded again in the shoulder by a sniper, he displayed the most magnificent fearlessness and determination in reorganising and leading his men against the enemy's position. Though under intense fire he sent in valuable and accurate reports on the situation, and remained directing operations until nightfall. His great gallantry and initiative and the example of devotion to duty which he set to all ranks were beyond all praise.

T./Maj. John Drummond Deane-Drummond, M.C., Ches. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in charge of divisional machine guns his personal example and fearlessness had a splendid effect on all ranks during an attack. He successfully took his machine guns through our barrage and prevented the escape of two hostile field guns.

Maj. (A./Lt.-Col.) Reginald Stewart Irvine Friend, E. Kent R., Lond. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in personally supervising the consolidation of a captured position and pushing out important advanced posts. Although frequently under heavy shell fire he kept his men in splendid spirits by his personal example and energy.

Maj. (A./Lt.-Col.) Harry Russell Goodman, R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion. The spirit and drive of his battalion during an attack and the splendid way in which they captured their own objective and then went to the assistance of another battalion that was temporarily in difficulties, are to be entirely attributed to the personal influence and initiative of this officer. By excellent training he has improved the fighting efficiency of his battalion beyond all recognition, and prior to the attack his patrol penetrated the enemy's lines on several occasions, inflicting heavy casualties and gaining much valuable information.

Lt. (T./Capt.) William John Charles Kennedy-Cochran-Patrick, M.C., Rif. Bde. and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on numerous occasions in destroying and driving down hostile machines, frequently engaging the enemy with great dash and a fine offensive spirit when encountered in superior numbers. By his cool judgment and splendid fearlessness he has instilled confidence in all around him, his brilliant leadership being chiefly responsible for his numerous successes.

Capt. Heathcote Upfield Mann, M.C., Lond. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under heavy shelling and gas for a considerable period. The success of administrative preparations of the divisional front, carried out under considerable danger and difficulty, reflects great credit upon this officer.

Temp. 2nd Lt. Alan William Dobson Mark, M.C., North'd Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in holding an extremely important point on the left of our line for twenty-four hours with his platoon, repeatedly beating off determined counter-attacks. After his party had been relieved the position was recaptured by the enemy, whereupon he moved up again on his own initiative and drove them out a second time, regaining the whole of the lost ground. He led his men with the utmost dash and fearlessness through heavy hostile barrage, setting a magnificent example by his own personal gallantry.

T./Capt. James McKee, R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company in an attack. Although wounded he continued to advance until severely wounded for a second time, his leg being so badly shattered that it has since been amputated. He has at all times led his men with complete disregard of personal danger, and the splendid training which he had instilled into them beforehand proved its worth in enabling them to gain and hold their objective under trying circumstances.

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Harold Melsome Probyn, R. War. R., and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical time when hostile infantry had penetrated our trenches, he went up in unfavourable weather and under heavy machine-gun and anti-aircraft fire from guns of heavy calibre, and managed to locate and report with complete accuracy the position and progress of the enemy. To do this he had to fly at a very low altitude, during which his machine was seriously damaged by enemy fire. The following day he carried out another daring and successful reconnaissance of the enemy's line, bringing back information of the greatest value. He has already experienced a whole year's strenuous service flying, a fact which speaks for his gallantry and endurance on both of these particular occasions.

Maj. (T./Lt.-Col.) Edmund Roche-Kelly, R. Ir. Regt.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion through an attack, in which he displayed great fearlessness and exceptional skill. He moved up through very heavy enemy barrage, personally reconnoitred two advanced positions, and supervised all details of consolidation, all the while exposed to very heavy shell fire. His splendid personal example and disregard of danger imbued all ranks with a spirit that swept away all opposition.

Capt. (T./Lt.-Col.) Norman Cecil Rutherford, M.B., F.R.C.S., R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of an advanced dressing station. He worked continuously under heavy shell fire, evacuating the wounded from the forward area, and it was owing to his splendid example of devotion that the work was efficiently carried out.

T./Maj. William Dishington Scott, M.C., High. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under an intense bombardment, by which our communication and support trenches had been practically obliterated. He went forward to the front line and reorganised the defence of his sub-sector three times. It was entirely due to his magnificent example of pluck and total disregard of danger that the garrison showed such determination.

2nd Lt. Alfred Seymour Shepherd, M.C., R.F.C., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on numerous occasions when engaged in combat with hostile aircraft. Though surrounded by enemy machines, he continued to fight for nearly an hour with the utmost gallantry and determination against two hostile formations, finally bringing down one of the enemy out of control. Within a month he brought down seven hostile machines completely out of control.

Capt. Herbert Frederick Edgar Smith, K.R.R.C., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an enemy attack upon our trenches, he found himself blocked in a tunnel with twenty men. The only entrance that was not blown up was bombed by the enemy. With great coolness and control, however, he kept his men together, and at nightfall brought them through trenches held by the enemy and across a river. The escape of his party was entirely due to his initiative and resource.

Maj. (A./Lt.-Col.) Thomas Robert Alexander Stannus (R. of O., Leins. R., Spec. Res.), Leins. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion. Although severely wounded, and thereby unluckily precluded from leading them to the attack, his careful supervision and preliminary preparations undoubtedly ensured the success which his men attained. His adjutant was wounded at the same moment, but Lt.-Col. Stannus declined all aid until the other officer had been attended to. He had previously done splendid work when acting as O.C., on one occasion frustrating a raid with great loss to the enemy, entirely through his personal foresight and grasp of the situation.

T./2nd Lt. Frederick Lawrence Wheeldon,
E. Lan. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his platoon to the attack under very heavy fire. He was the first to reach and to push into the enemy's trench, where he was opposed by four of the enemy, all of whom he killed single-handed, although severely wounded in both arms and legs by a bomb which one of them threw at him. He continued on until eight men were left out of his platoon. This alone shows what a splendid example of leadership he displayed during the operation.

Lt. (T./Capt.) John Whitaker Woodhouse,
M.C., R.F.C., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in carrying out special missions by night, during which he has frequently been compelled to face very bad weather. In the course of numerous bombing expeditions by night he invariably descended to very low altitudes in order to use his machine gun against hostile troops on the roads. He has consistently set a very fine example.

CANADIAN FORCE.

Capt. Charles Edward Connolly, Cav.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding a raid upon four lines of enemy defences, in which heavy losses were inflicted upon the enemy and many prisoners captured, as well as a great number of dug-outs destroyed. He was wounded before reaching the enemy's wire, but he continued to direct the party with the greatest courage and skill, and after withdrawal he returned to the raided area with a Serjt.-Major to make sure that none of his wounded or dead were left behind.

Capt. (A./Maj.) Fred Lister, M.C., Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion for ten days in the trenches, during which they took part in five successful attacks on the enemy's lines, and resisted three vigorous counter-attacks. The success of the whole of this operation was due to his tireless supervision and the personal example which he set his men in preparing for the attacks, and consolidating the ground when it had been captured. He contributed largely to the capture of ground of the greatest tactical value, which had previously been unsuccessfully attacked.

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

Maj. Charles Hellier Davis Evans, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a party which had to prepare a cavalry track. He reorganised his men when scattered by heavy shell fire, and continued to supervise the work, which by his fine personal example was rapidly completed under heavy fire, and proved subsequently invaluable to the success of our operations.

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to award a Bar to the Military Cross to the undermentioned Officers:—

T./2nd Lt. (A./Lt.) Thomas Francis Bentley, M.C., R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a heavy hostile bombardment of his mortar emplacements. Realising that the situation had become serious owing to heavy casualties in his section, he left his battalion headquarters, and, aided by a serjeant, worked one of the mortars himself. By his fine example and prompt action he converted what would have been a poor bombardment into a great success, and very materially assisted the infantry operations.

(M.C. gazetted 16th August, 1917.)

T./Capt. Edwin Guthrie Bowers, M.C., North'd Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company through a heavy barrage, and later, after suffering heavy casualties, in taking them forward to reinforce an assault under heavy fire. He rendered valuable assistance at a critical moment, and maintained communication with his headquarters throughout, in a very able manner.

(M.C. gazetted 1st January, 1917.)

T./Capt. Clarence Morland Brisco-Owen,
M.C., R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in making numerous daring reconnaissances of enemy wire and trenches at very low altitudes, during which he and his pilot constantly emptied their drums into the enemy trenches, undeterred by violent machine-gun fire. He secured information of the utmost value, which could not have been obtained by any other means.

(M.C. gazetted 10th January, 1917.)

Capt. Humphrey William Butler, M.C.,
K.R.R.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under exceptionally trying conditions. At a time when his battalion headquarters were isolated in a tunnel, one entrance of which was on fire and the others being bombed by the enemy, he was of the greatest assistance to his commanding officer in steadying the men, getting out orders and maintaining the organisation. He went out later when the entrances were cleared and reconnoitred the position with the C.O., after which he displayed very great ability in getting his men away, eventually swimming a river in order to get back to our own lines.

Capt. John Rhynallt Chidlaw-Roberts, M.C., Notts. & Derby. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding his company through very severe hand-to-hand fighting in the dark, during which they lost very heavily. He personally accounted for more than fifteen of the enemy with his revolver and a rifle, and collected all the men he could find and held on to some captured trenches until relieved by the reserves. His gallantry throughout the campaign has been most noticeable.

(M.C. gazetted 17th April, 1917.)

2nd Lt. Herbert Archer Fagan, M.C., York. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of supports he crawled 300 yards on two occasions across the open at great personal risk to gain touch with the attacking company, which was completely isolated. He brought back information of the greatest value to battalion headquarters by this energetic and gallant action.

(M.C. gazetted 18th July, 1917.)

T./Capt. Gordon Miller Morde, M.C., R. Innis. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company in the attack. He sent back valuable information, and, although severely wounded as he reached the final objective, he issued full instructions for the consolidation before being carried back.

(M.C. gazetted 4th June, 1917.)

Lt. (A./Maj.) Claude Frederick Forestier-Walker, M.C., R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under very heavy shell fire. When the officers' mess dug-out had been wrecked by a particularly deadly gas shell he repeatedly went into the dug-out and attempted to rescue the inmates, eventually collapsing there himself from the effects of gas. All the occupants were brought out, and, although two succumbed, but for the gallantry of this officer and others, the remaining five would certainly have been killed also. His personal example of fearlessness and coolness under fire has continually proved invaluable to the morale of the men in his battery.

(M.C. gazetted 14th January, 1916.)

Capt. (A./Maj.) William Wyndham Green, M.C., R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an enemy retirement he went forward to high ground, which afforded good observation, to ascertain the situation, and remained exposed to shell fire all the morning, until wounded by a shell. His fearlessness and initiative enabled him to secure valuable information by means of personal reconnaissances during operations, and on one occasion he displayed the utmost gallantry in extinguishing a burning gun-pit under heavy and accurate shell fire.

(M.C. gazetted 14th January, 1916.)

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Christopher Harding, M.C., R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although severely wounded in the leg, he led his company to its objective and successfully attacked a hostile machine gun. He then reorganised his company, and remained in command for four hours, refusing all offers of assistance, though greatly suffering from pain and loss of blood. He set a splendid example of pluck and endurance.

(M.C. gazetted 26th September, 1916.)

T./Capt. John Wemyss Hood, M.C., Bord. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded, he led a company forward and captured and held a position in the face of much opposition. He afterwards returned to battalion headquarters, having thoroughly organised the defence, and laid a telephone wire as he came back. He set a splendid example of courage and endurance under very trying conditions.

(M.C. gazetted 25th November, 1916.)

Lt. (A./Capt.) Bryon Jacobs, M.C., E. Kent R., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in organising and leading an important raid with great skill and initiative. His preliminary training was so thorough in every detail that all ranks were inspired with the greatest confidence, and his personal reconnaissance of the ground enabled him to make the operation a brilliant success.

(M.C. gazetted 14th November, 1916.)

T./Lt. Louis Fleeming Jenkin, M.C., Gen. List and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in continually attacking hostile aircraft at close range, destroying some and driving others down out of control. His dash and offensive spirit have at all times been admirable.

(M.C. gazetted 16th August, 1917.)

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Arthur Gordon Jones-Williams, M.C., Welsh R. (attd. R.F.C.).

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when engaged in combat with hostile aircraft. On several occasions he attacked enemy formations although they were in superior numbers, fighting them in more than one instance single-handed, and showing the finest offensive spirit. He drove several machines down completely out of control, fighting until his ammunition was expended.

(M.C. gazetted 18th July, 1917.)

T./2nd Lt. (A./Capt.) Richard Cecil Rutledge Kane, M.C., R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an advance he organised and rallied under his command stragglers from other units, and captured a large number of prisoners from hostile strong points and dug-outs. He also displayed the utmost skill and judgment in consolidating his objective under heavy shell fire, and established communication to flanks and rear within five minutes of reaching his objective.

(M.C. gazetted 14th November, 1916.)

Lt. Arthur Oxford Cecil Patman, M.C., R. Ir. Regt., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack upon an enemy position. He led his company with irresistible dash, in addition reorganising and taking command of another company whose commander had become a casualty. He displayed great fearlessness and able leadership.

(M.C. gazetted 14th November, 1916.)

Lt. (T./Capt.) Ian Stanley Ord Playfair, M.C., R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After the repulse of an enemy counter-attack he made his way through a heavy barrage to brigade headquarters to report on the situation, all communication with the forward area having been cut off by the barrage. His gallant action was of the greatest possible value.

(M.C. gazetted 3rd June, 1916.)

2nd Lt. Arthur Percival Foley Rhys-Davids, M.C., R.F.C., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst on offensive patrols. He has in all destroyed four enemy aircraft, and driven down many others out of control. In all his combats his gallantry and skill have been most marked, and on one occasion he shot down an enemy pilot who had accounted for twenty-nine Allied machines. His offensive spirit and initiative have set a magnificent example to all.

(M.C. gazetted 18th July, 1917.)

Capt. Sydney Edwin Silver, M.C., Essex R., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a raid. Not only did he train his men with the greatest thoroughness and care, but he set them an example of determination and energy during the operation which had a most marked effect upon its success, as well as upon the spirits of his men. He personally supervised every detail under heavy barrage, seeing to the replenishment of bombs and ammunition as well as to the removal of the wounded from No Man's Land. He set a magnificent example.

(M.C. gazetted 18th July, 1917.)

T./Capt. Edward Simons, M.C., S. Wales Bord.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty prior to and during an attack. He showed the utmost coolness and disregard of danger in improving his assembly position under fire, afterwards leading his company in the attack with great courage and initiative, and saving them many casualties.

(M.C. gazetted 13th February, 1917.)

Capt. Thomas Stewart, M.C., R. Scots.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At imminent risk of his life he crawled across a bridge which had been almost destroyed by enemy shell fire in order to get to his battalion headquarters with instructions. The gallantry and determination of this act were greatly increased by the fact that it was dark at the time, the air densely charged with gas, which necessitated a helmet being worn, and the solitary beam which was all that remained of the bridge was under shell fire. The same night and on the following one he displayed splendid fearlessness and energy in moving about the trenches under heavy shell fire, superintending the work of his men.

(M.C. gazetted 26th May, 1917.)

T./Lt. (A./Capt.) Robert Henry Templeman, M.C., Midd'x R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a determined raid by the enemy. The troops on his left having been forced back, he personally superintended under very heavy fire the formation of a defensive flank, which by his skilful dispositions he was successful in doing. His personal example of fearlessness and coolness inspired his men very greatly, most of whom were young soldiers and under heavy fire for the first time. He is at all times noticeable for his courage and untiring energy under all conditions.

(M.C. gazetted 11th December, 1916.)

T./2nd Lt. Harris Stephens Triscott, M.C., R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In spite of incessant enemy sniping at close range, he exposed himself fearlessly in reorganising one of his parties that had suffered severely by shell fire, thus completing the task of wiring in front of our newly established advanced posts. He set a splendid example of determination and devotion to duty.

(M.C. gazetted 4th June, 1917.)

T./Lt. (T./Capt.) William Crossley Wale, M.C., Gen. List.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an intense hostile bombardment he collected a party of volunteers and proceeded along a shallow trench, in view of the enemy, to the rescue of five men who were buried in a dug-out. The success of the party's efforts was entirely due to his fine personal example of coolness and determination. This officer has on many other occasions performed deeds of gallantry by which he has earned the admiration of the whole of his brigade.

(M.C. gazetted 22nd September, 1916.)

2nd Lt. (A./Capt.) William Gray Johnstone Walker, M.C., Gen. List.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in keeping his mortar battery in action for several days under intense hostile bombardment. His fire had great effect upon enemy strong points and dug-outs, and his conduct throughout was a splendid example of coolness and ability to all ranks.

(M.C. gazetted 26th September, 1916.)

Capt. Francis Edward Wenger, M.C., N. Staff. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under very heavy machine-gun fire he rallied a company that had been held up, reorganised the attack, and, after very severe hand-to-hand fighting, drove a large number of the enemy, with their machine-guns, into a cellar, where most of them were killed. He pushed forward his attack and accounted for a great many more, showing exceptional dash and a very fine offensive spirit.

(M.C. gazetted 3rd June, 1916.)

Lt. (A./Maj.) William Martin Wood, M.C., R.G.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded in the hand, he continued to set an example of pluck and tenacity under heavy shell fire that very largely contributed to the excellence of the work done by his battery.

(M.C. gazetted 27th July, 1916.)

T./2nd Lt. Thomas Newton Woof, M.C., attd. S. Staff. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding a raiding party. He led them through heavy fire of every description, reaching the enemy's trench with only one man. He entered it, however, although it was strongly held, and carried on a vigorous fight with bombs and revolver until forced to retire by superior numbers. He then took up a position in a shell-hole within a few yards of the enemy parapet, and maintained himself there for half an hour, in spite of heavy bombing by the enemy, in hopes that fresh reinforcements would enable him to make another attack on the trench. He remained until the signal for a general retirement was given. Throughout the operation he showed an exceptionally fine dash and utter contempt of danger.

(M.C. gazetted 18th July, 1917.)

T./2nd Lt. Alexander Frederick Worster, M.C., E. Kent R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding his company against a hostile raid. He collected every available man with the greatest coolness under intense barrage, and posted them at points of advantage, moving up and down the line encouraging his men with a complete disregard of danger. His great courage and personal example caused the raid to be repulsed with great loss to the enemy. Later, though heavily sniped, he brought in a wounded enemy from "No Man's Land," thereby obtaining important identification.

(M.C. gazetted 18th June, 1917.)

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

Capt. (now Maj.) Alexander Sanderson, M.C., Eng.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid upon enemy trenches. He did excellent work in reconnoitring and destroying the enemy's mining system; also blowing in two dug-outs, and very largely contributing to the success of our operations.

(M.C. gazetted 26th September, 1916.)

CANADIAN FORCE.

Capt. Samuel James Mathewson, M.C., Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid upon enemy trenches.

He directed the advance of two companies with the utmost skill and courage, and improvised and led a bombing party, with which he cleared a large section of trench which was holding up our advance. He kept in touch with the troops on his flanks, and, later, displayed exceptional coolness and leadership in conducting the withdrawal, bringing with him all his wounded and three enemy machine guns.

(M.C. gazetted 14th November, 1916.)

Lt. Evan Edward Price, M.C., Cav.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when brigade intelligence officer. Five nights in succession he crawled out 2,000 yards beyond the outpost line to the enemy's wire, and accurately located the precise point of attack. On the night of the attack he successfully led the first torpedo party to its objective, and then went through the wire with them into the enemy's trenches, where he remained throughout the engagement, obtaining valuable information. His fearless and skilful action very greatly contributed to the success of the enterprise.

(M.C. gazetted 11th May, 1917.)

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

Lt. Alexander George Melles, M.C., Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his platoon in hand-to-hand fighting in a village. Though the supports which were expected failed to appear, he carried out his task [that of a fighting patrol] unaided, exercising admirable control over his men, and setting a fine example of personal gallantry.

(M.C. gazetted 16th August, 1917.)

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to confer the Military Cross on the undermentioned Officers and Warrant Officers in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the Field:—

T./2nd Lt. Alfred Dunston Adams, Gen. List, attd. Bord. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of an advanced post. He held it for a considerable time under heavy hostile fire of all descriptions, and in spite of many casualties. Being eventually compelled to retire, he carried out the operation very pluckily, and held his men together on the new line for thirty hours. He has previously displayed the utmost gallantry under fire, and has consistently set a splendid example to his men.

2nd Lt. Harold Hedley Artus, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of trench digging parties. He worked for twelve hours under heavy fire of every description, rallying his party three times after being scattered by shell fire, and successfully completing the task. He shared the work with his men, setting them a splendid example of coolness and devotion to duty.

2nd Lt. William Atkinson, R.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when responsible for the ammunition supply to gun positions during a period of six days. He carried out his work admirably, invariably under heavy shell fire, notably upon one occasion when he had charge of a large ammunition convoy under a very heavy hostile barrage. In spite of many casualties to men and horses he showed the greatest coolness and disregard of danger, effecting the clearance of the convoy (64 wagons) from the danger zone after the whole of the ammunition had been unloaded at the allotted positions.

T./2nd Lt. Alan Harvey Ayscough, R. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when out with a patrol in No Man's Land. A sap head about 150 yards away was suddenly attacked on both flanks by the enemy. He returned to the sap head through a very heavy trench mortar barrage, and so disposed his Lewis guns as to enfilade both parties of the enemy, afterwards taking personal charge of the bombing section and inflicting such casualties upon the enemy that they were dispersed. His prompt and gallant action inspired all ranks with the greatest confidence.

2nd Lt. (A./Lt.) Alfred James Bailey, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on several occasions. With great fearlessness and promptitude he went to a trench which had been blown in by enemy shell fire, and, assisted by a gunner, rescued a signaller who had been buried, working in full view of and under heavy fire from the enemy. He set a magnificent example of coolness and gallantry under fire when his own trenches were wrecked by shell fire, and on numerous other occasions.

T./2nd Lt. Herbert Cyril Baker, A.S.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of an ammunition supply column. Coming under heavy hostile fire, one of his lorries got stuck where the shelling was most intense. With the utmost coolness and presence of mind he moved the loaded lorries away from the shelled area and then pulled the stranded one into safety, thereby preventing an accident which would undoubtedly have caused great loss of life and ammunition. During the whole time he was under heavy shell fire.

T./Lt. Harold Glasspool Baker, attd. Som. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a patrol of five men. Having penetrated an enemy trench which was temporarily unoccupied 500 yards in advance of our outpost, they were fired upon during their return by some of the enemy in shell holes. He, with an N.C.O., immediately rushed the enemy post, capturing two men and securing an important identification. The night was extremely dark with heavy rain, and it was very creditable to this officer that he should have been able to maintain his direction and locate the enemy right the first time.

T./Lt. (A./Capt.) William Patrick Balls, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding his battery. Although under heavy shell fire, he continued to observe and control his fire from an exposed position, displaying the utmost coolness and disregard of danger. He has on several occasions shown similar fearlessness and devotion to duty.

2nd Lt. Harry Kinnear Banks, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at a most critical and trying time. The narrow track up which the guns of his brigade were moving into action became blocked with dead and wounded and damaged vehicles, and under persistent and heavy shell fire he cleared the road and enabled the traffic to proceed. It was entirely owing to his prompt initiative and energy that good order was maintained and that the guns came into action before dawn.

2nd Lt. Frederick Charles Barker, Lond. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company forward during an attack in the face of intense rifle and machine gun fire, displaying an utter disregard of danger, and very great coolness and skill in reorganising the attack.

2nd Lt. Hugh Cyril Barnes, R. Suss. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as Brigade Intelligence Officer. At a time when most of the communications had been severed he remained at his post, under heavy fire of shells of all calibres, rendering clear and precise reports, which were of the greatest value to our artillery. He showed the utmost gallantry and coolness in an extremely trying situation.

T./Lt. Percy John Barnett, Gen. List and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on many occasions. His reconnaissance work has been particularly daring and successful owing to the pluck and determination with which he has faced bad weather and attacks from hostile aircraft in order to obtain his information. He has taken part in ten successful bomb raids, and his keenness on all occasions has set a splendid example to others.

2nd Lt. Cecil Roy Barrett, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in entering a burning gun-pit amidst exploding cartridges and rescuing one of his men. He then put out the fire himself, thus saving the gun from complete destruction, and showing splendid disregard for danger.

2nd Lt. Herbert Victor Barrett, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. As his brigade was going into action the column became disorganised by shell fire, which caused many casualties and blocked the narrow track. He at once took command, and by his splendid example of coolness and the clear orders which he gave under heavy shell fire order was restored, and the brigade was got into action before dawn.

2nd Lt. Spencer Seymour Baskett, R.G.A.,
Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at a most critical moment, when a hostile shell had ignited his battery ammunition dump. In spite of heavy hostile shelling he saved the greater part of the dump, aided by a corporal and a gunner, and working with the utmost fearlessness and devotion. Later on he was blown into the air and rendered unconscious whilst unloading ammunition.

Capt. Edwyn Ernest Hope Bate, Lond. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded, he led his men to their objective with great courage, keeping them together, and successfully resisting severe counter-attacks, during which he was wounded for the second time. His energy and fearlessness in organising and leading bombing attacks and generally supervising his defences, under heavy fire of every description, were beyond all praise.

2nd Lt. William Victor Beaumont, R. Dub.
Fus., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as Brigade Forward Observing Officer. He pushed forward through heavy enemy barrage, and for forty-eight hours sent back valuable information to his brigade from an exposed position under continuous heavy shell fire. He has previously done excellent reconnaissance work.

Capt. John Arthur Bell, R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a heavy bombardment. He proceeded along a road which was exposed to the most intense shell fire in order to attend to four wounded officers. He dressed their wounds and remained with them until they were evacuated by motor ambulance, which was only accomplished with the greatest difficulty owing to the heavy shelling. His absolute disregard of danger and devotion to duty amidst terrific shell fire were exceptionally splendid and beyond all praise.

T./2nd Lt. William George Bentley, attd.
N. Staff. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a working party in a communication trench. Although partially buried and stunned by a shell which had also buried and mortally wounded his Company Commander, he set to work as soon as he recovered consciousness to extricate the other officer. Although very badly shaken, he returned to his working party later on, and insisted on staying with them during the remainder of the night until their work was completed. He showed a splendid example of devotion to duty.

2nd Lt. (A./Capt.) Arthur Harold Birchall, Durh. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. Regardless of personal danger, he moved along the top of his trench under fire of every description, encouraging his men. Afterwards he went out with a serjeant, and located a number of enemy snipers, bringing four of them back unwounded to our lines. He set a very fine example of keenness and fearlessness.

2nd Lt. Hugh Wilbert Blakeney, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in establishing forward communications during an attack under exceptionally difficult circumstances. Although units were mixed up, and the ground was unknown, he worked for four days unceasingly, under continual shell fire and for a considerable part of the time without sleep or food, until he had overcome all the difficulties and rendered invaluable services towards the success of his brigade.

T./Lt. (A./Capt.) Carl Bollam, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a working party of 700 men. They were heavily shelled for the greater part of the night, but, owing to his splendid personal example of coolness and courage, the work, which was of a very urgent nature, was successfully completed.

Temp. 2nd Lt. Edward Ramsden Priestley
Bond, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a working party in a forward gun position. He displayed admirable presence of mind and resource when a dump exploded under hostile shell fire, causing casualties amongst his men. He dealt with the situation successfully and carried on with the work, and on the following night, whilst the wagons were being unloaded under heavy shell fire, he rescued the wounded and got them away to the dressing station. On both of these very trying occasions his splendid personal example inspired the men under him in a very marked degree.

T./2nd Lt. John Randolph Bothwell, M.G.
Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding machine guns during an attack. By the skilful handling of his guns, he reached the objective with the infantry, and broke up a local counter-attack. Although seriously wounded and under heavy shell fire, he refused to leave his guns, but cleverly changed their position and stopped a fresh enemy counter-attack. By his coolness and absolute fearlessness, he put new life into the defence and inspired all by his magnificent example. He has repeatedly shown the utmost gallantry in previous actions.

T./Lt. Robert Edward Bowen, Conn. Rang.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a mopping-up party. He did most valuable work in collecting prisoners and thoroughly probing the very intricate system of enemy dug-outs which fell to his share. In no case were any dug-outs passed over, so that the rear of our lines was kept absolutely secure from possible attacks.

Lt. (T./Capt.) Geoffrey Hilton Bowman, R. War. R., Spec. Res., and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has taken part in many offensive patrols, which he led on twenty occasions, in the course of which four enemy aircraft were destroyed and twelve others driven down out of control. Although outnumbered by five to one on one occasion he handled his patrol of four machines with such skill and gallantry that after a very severe fight he was able to withdraw them without loss, having destroyed at least two enemy machines and driven down one out of control. His fearlessness and fine offensive spirit have been a splendid example to others.

Lt. Charlie Bradbeer, R.G.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battery prior to and during an attack. Though heavily shelled he maintained his guns in action throughout, displaying marked coolness and skilful leadership, especially when moving them up to an advanced position.

2nd Lt. Douglas Fountaine Brodie, High. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in preparing and successfully carrying out a raid. On three occasions he made a thorough reconnaissance of No Man's Land, penetrating to the enemy's parapet, and on the third occasion shooting two of the enemy who were acting as wiring party. He led the raid in person, with great dash and complete success, accounting for four of the enemy himself, capturing others, and finally withdrawing his party with skill under very difficult conditions.

T./2nd Lt. Lawrence Smith Blanche Brown, M.G. Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a working party. During a hostile attack he noticed a gap between two units of our defensive line and on his own initiative he promptly took his working party into the line and filled the gap. He remained in this position throughout a night of very heavy shell fire, and by his courageous and timely action materially strengthened the left flank of his brigade.

Lt. (A./Capt.) Stephen Brown, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical moment, when his lines were being shelled and casualties occurring amongst men and horses, he personally superintended their removal, afterwards returning to the shelled area with his serjeant to search for wounded. His example of coolness and gallantry was beyond all praise, and his handling of the situation prevented a possible stampede.

2nd Lt. Arthur Graham William Browne, Shrops. L.I., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile raid. With a Stokes mortar he did splendid work on our left front at a time when two Lewis guns had been blown up, and dispersed several parties of the enemy. Afterwards, when his gun became useless, he assisted in the infantry bombing attack, remaining in the enemy's lines for three-and-a-half hours and displaying splendid gallantry and keenness throughout the operations.

T./Lt. Ewen Cameron Bruce, M.G. Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in salving tanks under heavy shell fire. He repaired and brought in two tanks which had been abandoned in full view of the enemy. By his energy, resource and courage he has salvaged many other apparently hopeless tanks, to the value of many thousands of pounds, and his personal example under shell fire and under most difficult conditions has raised the standard of salvage to a very high pitch.

2nd Lt. (A./Lt.) Cyril Hugh Buckley, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when under continuous and intense shell fire with his battery. He kept his men together and worked his guns day and night with the utmost devotion and gallantry, remaining at his post and directing the fire until the last gun was put out of action.

2nd Lt. Harry Bull, R.G.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under heavy and continuous shelling of his battery position. He led a party to the rescue of some gunners who had been buried in a dug-out, and brought them to a place of safety, displaying fearless initiative and energy under heavy fire.

2nd Lt. Kenneth Reginald Bull, R.W. Kent R., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, although wounded in the hand. He assisted to defend a position for seventeen hours, and crawled from shell-hole to shell-hole to bring in food, water and ammunition for the garrison. He was one of six, two of whom were wounded, and it was largely due to his cheerfulness and determination that the subsequent attack was successful.

T./2nd Lt. Frank Burns, attd. Seaf. Highrs.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. He led his party with the utmost skill and dash, and with his Lewis gun inflicted heavy casualties upon a party of the enemy who crossed his front in close formation. He reached the enemy's support line, and brought back a very clear and valuable report upon the enemy's trenches, bringing up the rear of his party with two of his own men, who were badly wounded, and a wounded prisoner.

T./Capt. (A./Maj.) Howard Francis Burt, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in maintaining the fire of his battery for three hours under an intense and accurate bombardment. He helped to remove the wounded, and personally assisted to extinguish a burning gun pit, amidst exploding ammunition, setting a splendid example to all ranks under very trying conditions.

T./Capt. Gerald John Lloyd Burton, K.R.R.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack on enemy trenches. He controlled his company admirably under exceptionally heavy shell fire, and by his own personal courage and example imbued a wonderful spirit in his men at a time when they were suffering many casualties.

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Keith Logan Caldwell, R.F.C., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when leading offensive patrols. On one occasion he led a patrol of five machines against twelve hostile aircraft, all of which he drove down out of control. He has personally destroyed five hostile machines, and has had over fifty contests in the air, in all of which he has displayed splendid skill and fearlessness, and has set an excellent example to his squadron.

2nd Lt. William Charles Cambray, R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst acting as observer to offensive patrols. On four occasions, at least, he has shot down enemy scouts and has also had numerous indecisive combats, in all of which he has displayed the greatest gallantry.

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Richard Harold Capel, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of teams unloading ammunition. Coming under sudden and intense gas and H.E. bombardment, his wagons and teams were thrown into the greatest confusion. It was a very dark night and the drivers were unable to see where to go in their gas masks. He removed his own, at very great risk of his life, and was able to extricate each team and to restore order again. But for his splendid devotion and coolness under heavy fire a serious block must have occurred, involving heavy casualties. He is now suffering from gas poisoning.

2nd Lt. George Sidney Carver, N. Staff. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In the face of heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, which was holding up our advance, he and one man approached to within a few yards of the enemy's post, located the fire, and enabled it to be silenced. Throughout the same night and the following day he continued patrolling under close fire, obtaining most valuable information—on one occasion making his way in broad daylight to within fifteen yards of an enemy strong point, though sniped at the whole time. His fearlessness and energy were exceptionally splendid.

Capt. John Bernard Cavenagh, M.B., R.A.M.C., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of bearers. He exposed himself to shell fire for forty-eight hours with splendid fearlessness, keeping all the time in touch with aid posts in the captured line, thereby ensuring a rapid evacuation of the wounded.

T./2nd Lt. Leonard Challis, E. York. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. He led his men with great courage and judgment, killing a sniper with his revolver and capturing a party of the enemy on his way to their trenches. Subsequently, by his promptness in stopping them he prevented his men from running into our own barrage and on into the enemy's trenches. He displayed very great coolness and fine leadership throughout.

T./Lt. (A./Capt.) John Chambers, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in getting his battery forward during an attack and handling it with the greatest efficiency and success. He established a forward observation post and registered his battery with great skill and courage in a remarkably short space of time, and has previously done similar excellent work.

T./2nd Lt. Frank Ewart Chandler, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Whilst engaged upon special work behind our front line, circumstances led him to suspect that a hostile raid was approaching, whereupon he manned the parapet and supplied his men with bombs. The raid followed at once, and was repulsed owing to his remarkable foresight and skilful dispositions, and as soon as all was clear again he took his section back and continued work. He has consistently done excellent work and set a splendid example of steady courage.

T./Lt. James Wallace Charlton, R. Innis. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He kept the direction for his battalion, and although wounded early in the day his grit and determination in carrying on enabled the objective to be successfully gained under his skilful guidance. He set a splendid example and gave no thought to his wounds until the situation was secure.

Lt. (A./Capt.) Richard Hamond Chaworth-Musters, Norf. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his company under heavy shell fire. He led them with great courage and disregard of danger to the attack of a strongly held concrete redoubt, capturing there twenty-eight of the enemy and a machine gun. He set a splendid example to his men.

T./2nd Lt. Roger James Cholmeley, Ches. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as Brigade Intelligence Officer. He spent five weeks in the front line previous to our attack, studying the enemy's system and acquiring information, which afterwards proved most useful. His keenness in volunteering for every raid or patrol and his fearlessness and untiring energy in collecting information for his brigade have earned the unanimous appreciation and admiration of all commanding officers in his brigade.

T./2nd Lt. Thomas Landale Christie, attd. Seaf. Highrs.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. Though held up temporarily by enemy wire he led his platoon through it and into the enemy's support line with the utmost dash and gallantry, capturing two prisoners and obtaining valuable information about the enemy trenches.

Lt. (T./Capt.) John Walker Clapham, W. Rid., attd. M.G. Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the capture of an enemy position. He kept his guns in action in spite of casualties, under heavy shell fire, performing his duties with ability and great determination, and affording valuable assistance to our advance by his untiring efforts.

2nd Lt. Harry Inglis Clapperton, Gord. Highrs.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid upon an enemy strong point. He led his men with the utmost determination, and though knocked over by a shell continued with them until their work had been successfully accomplished. He was wounded whilst withdrawing to our lines, but remained outside with his party until he had ascertained that all had returned. He displayed great courage and fine leadership under heavy enemy barrage.

2nd Lt. Harold Conquest Clark, Wilts. R., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of the advanced party of a fighting patrol. He led them with the greatest skill and coolness through the enemy's front to his support line, where he waylaid and successfully attacked a party of the enemy, killing and wounding them all. He then withdrew his own party, eight in number, with only two slight casualties, and returned with the identifications which he had been sent out to secure. His conduct has on all occasions displayed great keenness and devotion to duty.

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Alfred John Michell Clarke, Glouc. R., and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has led fourteen bomb raids, the majority of them against distant objectives, and his gallantry and skill have inspired the greatest confidence. Although continually heavily attacked by enemy aircraft, he has successfully inflicted considerable damage upon his opponents, as well as upon his objectives.

Capt. Lawrence Joyce Clarke, Lond. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in preparing communications on his Divisional front. He made personal reconnaissances under very heavy shell fire and went forward under heavy hostile barrage to restore forward communications at a time when the line had been severed by shell fire. He successfully achieved this most important task, and throughout the operations he has continually given evidence of his devotion and fearlessness in keeping up communications under heavy shell fire.

2nd Lt. Edward Coke, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as artillery Liaison Officer. At a time when all communication with his artillery group was severed, he made repeated attempts to restore the connection, and personally crossed a river under heavy fire in his efforts to mend the cable and to lay fresh ones. He showed the greatest gallantry and disregard of danger throughout the operation, and only desisted from his efforts on receiving the direct order from his Headquarters to do so.

T./Lt. Ronald George Collingwood, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on numerous occasions under heavy shell and machine gun fire. He maintained control and direction of his working parties under most trying conditions, twice rallying them when scattered by shell fire, and by his fine personal example of courage and determination successfully completing the important work upon which he was engaged.

Capt. (A./Maj.) John Robert Collins, R.G.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in observing for his battery and carrying out an effective report from a completely exposed position in advance of our outpost line. He and his two telephonists were under hostile shell fire and within close range of the enemy advanced posts, and were in great danger of being cut off; but they maintained communication throughout with great coolness and determination.

2nd Lt. Edgar Cyril Comley, R. Muns. Fus., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his platoon. When caught by enemy barrage, he displayed great coolness and utter disregard of danger, moving about amongst the men and encouraging them by his personal example. He also led an attack upon a strong point with the utmost gallantry and complete success, and finally did most valuable work in plotting out defensive trenches under heavy shell fire with a coolness that was beyond all praise.

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Arthur Coningham, R.F.C., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in attacking enemy aircraft. On numerous occasions he has displayed great dash and a fine offensive spirit in engaging the enemy at close range, and driving them down completely out of control.

T./2nd Lt. William Constantine, Bord. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in taking command of his company and leading them into action with the utmost courage and determination. It was not until they were relieved, thirty hours afterwards, that he was discovered to have been severely wounded over twenty-four hours previously. His endurance and devotion to duty cannot be too highly praised.

T./2nd Lt. James Cook-Gray, Bord. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at a time when all communication with the front line had been severed by intense hostile barrage. He repeatedly made his way through the barrage to advanced Company Headquarters, and brought back information to his Battalion Commander, who was thereby enabled to make suitable dispositions to repel the enemy, of whose advance he would otherwise have been totally unaware. This officer's fearlessness and devotion to duty were beyond all praise.

Capt. John Luis Cotter, R. Ir. Regt., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. Although wounded in the head, he continued to lead his men until he could go no further. For many days previous to the attack he had spared no effort in training his company for the operation, which owed its success very largely to his energy and keenness.

T./2nd Lt. Frank Wheatley Cowley, E. York. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. His party having gone too far, he withdrew them and a large number of others, and led them back to the front line under very heavy hostile barrage and machine gun fire. He shot two of the enemy himself as he entered the enemy's trench, where he also obtained valuable information, and afterwards returned to collect any stragglers that might have lost their way, displaying total disregard of his own safety and great coolness throughout.

T./2nd Lt. Matthew Henry Cox, A.S.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a convoy of lorries. Noticing ahead of him a lorry that had been set on fire by enemy shelling, he first took his convoy to a place of safety and then proceeded to the scene of the fire. On arrival he found four other lorries there to which the fire was rapidly spreading, whereupon he drove three of them to safety, removing the fourth by means of drag ropes. All the lorries were loaded with shells, and by his promptness and great courage he saved a serious disaster. Shells were bursting on the burning lorry all the time that he was at work.

T./2nd Lt. Marsden Ambrose Crawshaw, M.G. Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under very heavy shell fire. When two of his four guns were buried he made two attempts, at great personal risk, to recover them, and was eventually successful. On the same day he made a very gallant attempt to find other guns which were missing, and during the whole operation he showed a splendid example of courage and devotion to duty.

T./2nd Lt. Harry Thomas Culliford, A.S.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when delivering ammunition. He made temporary tracks after a road had been rendered impassable by shell fire, and succeeded in reaching the battery with his loads, making seventeen journeys across a mile of heavily shelled road. On completion of this duty he stayed and brought in wounded to the dressing station, having already been on duty for thirty-six hours. His action throughout was very gallant, and greatly inspired the men.

2nd Lt. John Clive Currie, R.F.A., Spec. Res., attd. R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when acting as observer to another officer. They faced a violent thunderstorm, accompanied by a gale of wind and blinding rain, which had compelled all other machines to return to their aerodromes or to make forced landings, in order to locate the position of our infantry in the front line. This they successfully did, having spent 1½ hours in the air under fearful conditions, and returned with an accurate and valuable report to headquarters.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of buried cable communications. He displayed the greatest energy and courage in supervising the work of leading in cables, frequently under heavy shell fire from the enemy's guns, and in remaining behind after digging parties had been withdrawn owing to hostile fire, in order to conceal all traces of the cable trench from the enemy. His fearless personal reconnaissances and fine example of determination to complete his work on all occasions greatly inspired his men and kept communications open during the operations.

T./2nd Lt. William Brewis Dent, S. Staff. R., attd. M.G. Coy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in handling his machine gun with the utmost dash and efficiency in support of an infantry attack. His own gun being put out of action, he went in search of an enemy gun, which he secured and got into action. His conduct was highly praised by the infantry whom he was supporting, and to whom he rendered most invaluable support.

Capt. Clarence Hamul Denyer, R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of divisional bearers. It was due to his fearless and capable handling of his party that the evacuation of the wounded was carried out with rapidity and success.

Lt. (A./Capt.) Alan Henry Dickinson, C.G., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on two occasions when in charge of working parties. Although wounded and knocked down by a shell, he displayed great skill in getting his party clear with few casualties, under very intense hostile shelling, remaining to the last himself to see that no wounded or killed were left behind. He withdrew his party beyond the barrage and carried on with the work.

T./Capt. Charles Dickson, M.D. R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of an advanced dressing station. Under an intense high-explosive and gas-shell bombardment the building was partially wrecked, and the patients were in danger of death from gas poisoning. He at once personally organised a working party to replace the anti-gas screens and take other precautions for the safety of the wounded; this necessitated working in the open under extremely heavy fire, during which his total disregard of safety set a most inspiring example to his men. By his energy and devotion the lives of many badly wounded men were saved.

T./Lt. (T./Capt.) Edward John Quayle Dickson, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on two occasions, in entering a dug-out which had been wrecked by hostile shell fire, extricating the victims and carrying them to the dressing station, three hundred yards away, under heavy and continuous shell fire. By this prompt and gallant action he and his N.C.O. were the direct means of saving many lives, as the place was again hit directly after his work was completed. He has frequently proved himself an extremely gallant officer, with an utter disregard for danger when assisting others.

T./Lt. Frederick Ernest Reginald Dixon, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading a wiring party to consolidate the front of a captured village. He displayed the greatest courage and determination under heavy shell fire, so inspiring his men by his disregard of danger that the work was successfully accomplished under most trying and dangerous conditions.

2nd Lt. Thomas Dodd, Durh. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as brigade signalling officer. He organised and maintained all communications during an attack with most exceptional skill and ability, establishing connection with each battalion as soon as their objectives had been gained. He moved about all day, and, though thoroughly exhausted, continued to supervise the communications with admirable zeal and devotion to duty.

Capt. (A./Maj.) Wallace Henry Glydd Drake-Brockman, R.G.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at a time when his billets and gun positions were for several hours under very heavy shell fire. His example of coolness and courage, together with his personal efforts, were responsible for a very large quantity of ammunition being saved after it had been set alight by enemy shell fire. He kept his guns in action during a period of particularly intense fire, and throughout displayed conduct of the highest standard of gallantry.

Lt. Michael Falcon Dudgeon, Dns.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a successful raid on enemy trenches. He fought his way down a trench full of the enemy, inspiring all ranks with confidence and admiration by his bold leading. He kept in touch with what was going on and continued to send back full and accurate information.

T./Lt. Rutherford Durham Duff, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, in holding his men together during the construction of a post under intense hostile bombardment. He displayed similar gallantry and powers of control the following night under heavy enemy barrage.

T./Capt. Charles Dundee, M.B., R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He worked for three days, bandaging the wounded under fire, and successfully evacuating every case in his battalion almost as soon as they occurred. Over five hundred cases passed through his hands, and he displayed a splendid spirit of energy and devotion.

T./2nd Lt. David Morris Edwards, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding two subsections of trench mortars with untiring zeal and skill, and complete indifference to danger, under an intense enemy bombardment. He continually reorganised and led his men, when severe casualties were occurring, and directed the fire of his guns with precision and coolness. His splendid example on this, as on many other occasions, mainly contributed towards the great success of the operations.

T./2nd Lt. Griffith Oliver Edwards, North'd Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding two platoons during an attack. His coolness and cheerfulness under heavy shell fire steadied his men, and later, when sent up to reinforce, he did so with great promptness and exactitude.

2nd Lt. Thomas Maddock Edwards, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His battery came under heavy shell fire whilst going into action, and a number of casualties ensued, amongst those wounded being himself. In spite of this, he mounted a horse and took command, as his captain having also been severely wounded was unable to carry on. He brought up four guns, and then returned for the remaining two, refusing to have his wounds attended to until he had done his duty. He had been hit in several places, and his coolness and splendid devotion to duty were beyond all praise.

T./Lt. Alfred Thomas Eggington, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of mortars. Though wounded and badly gassed, he remained at his post successfully directing a smoke barrage, which was to protect part of our assault. Shortly afterwards he was completely overcome by the gas, and had to be evacuated, having set an example of tenacity and devotion which inspired all ranks, and very largely contributed towards the success of the operations. He has on numerous occasions displayed the utmost courage and resource.

T./Lt. David Ithel Ellis, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when under an intense and accurate hostile bombardment of his battery. He worked incessantly throughout the night in order to keep his guns in action, by his splendid personal example and devotion keeping up the spirits of his men under circumstances of an exceptionally trying nature. On several occasions he has been the life and soul of his battery under the heaviest shell fire, restoring confidence and cheerfulness at a time when they were most difficult to maintain.

T./Lt. Edward Frederick Ellis, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst constructing observation posts. On two separate occasions he displayed the utmost disregard for his own personal safety when the parties he was in charge of had serious casualties. Under heavy fire he withdrew his party to a place of comparative safety, and returned and proceeded to collect the wounded and get them away, remaining for half an hour in the shelled area until all were clear. By his splendid coolness and personal example he so influenced his men that the work of evacuating the wounded was promptly and successfully achieved.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at a time when all communications were practically impossible owing to enemy shell fire. He volunteered to take a message, which he successfully delivered, though rendered unconscious by gas for some minutes whilst doing so. He then laid lines by himself, repaired several important wires, re-erected the wireless mast and practically re-established communication throughout his area. He then returned to ask if he could do any more. All this was accomplished under very heavy shell fire, and his coolness and gallantry were beyond all praise.

T./2nd Lt. Frederick Ewan Baldwin Falkner, R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical moment, when the whole line was held up by machine guns firing from a very strong concrete emplacement, he detailed a Lewis gun to engage the enemy in front whilst he, with a serjeant, worked round to the rear and charged the gunners. A fierce hand-to-hand fight ensued. As the serjeant had already been severely wounded on the way, this officer was left single-handed; nevertheless, with the greatest pluck and gallantry he killed two of the enemy and captured the gun and about thirty prisoners.

2nd Lt. George Webster Ferguson, R.
Highrs.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a raiding party. He himself went forward and loosened the chevaux-de-frise, opening a gap for his party to enter by. He then led them in person, and accounted for two of the enemy himself. He captured a prisoner and withdrew to our lines with complete success, having very greatly inspired his party by his personal example and enthusiasm.

T./2nd Lt. William James Fernie, attd.
Bord. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a raiding party. Having been discovered whilst endeavouring to blow up the enemy wire, and quick action becoming necessary, he led his men with great dash and determination straight at the enemy's parapet, where he remained during the fierce fight with bombs that ensued, controlling and directing his men with great fearlessness and admirable judgment.

Lt. (T./Capt.) Frank Fernihough, R.F.A.
and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in artillery observation and patrol work. He has continually distinguished himself by his fearlessness and determination to gain information, undeterred by hostile fire or adverse weather conditions, remaining unshaken through some very trying experiences, during one of which his machine was very badly hit and his observer's leg was shot away. He has furnished information of the greatest value on numerous occasions.

T./Capt. Charles Vernon Fitton, York &
Lanc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company to the assault on enemy trenches. After having successfully captured and consolidated his objective, he held a very important position for two days under an intense bombardment, which obliterated a large portion of his front line trench. His coolness and sound judgment had a most inspiring effect upon his men, maintaining their confidence under very trying conditions. But for his skilful dispositions the casualties would have been very much heavier than they actually were.

T./Capt. John Cecil Foster, Linc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At great personal risk he made several journeys across an open space under heavy shell fire in order to keep up telephonic communication with his battalion headquarters. His fearlessness and energy in dealing with the situation when it was becoming obscure through lack of information were most invaluable.

T./Lt. David Hammond Fraser, M.B.,
R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Whilst his battery was under very heavy gas bombardment a shell wrecked the officers' mess dug-out and buried two officers and five men. Lt. Fraser, helped by a corporal, most gallantly assisted to rescue the buried men and restore respiration, entering the dug-out several times, until he eventually collapsed from the gas. On recovering consciousness he again attempted to enter the dug-out, but was prevented from doing so. Later, he collapsed again and remained unconscious for a long time. It was due to his promptness and energy that no more than two of the gassed men succumbed.

T./2nd Lt. Eric George Freeman, Durh. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when taking part in a raid. He personally captured one of the enemy, and, though badly wounded in the hand, assisted a wounded man back to our lines, carrying him part of the way. He then went back into No Man's Land and attempted to find three men who were missing. He displayed the greatest coolness and courage, and it was owing to his personal example that the raid was a success.

2nd Lt. (T./Lt.) William Froggatt, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Having led a working party at night to a point where it was intended to dig a communication trench, he found it impossible to extend them owing to heavy enemy shell fire upon ground which had not been reconnoitred. Realising the importance of the work he left his men under cover and made a daring personal reconnaissance alone, by his prompt and very gallant action enabling the work to be proceeded with when the fire slackened, and successfully completed before daybreak.

2nd Lt. (T./Lt.) Ronald William Frost, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under heavy shell fire, in rescuing a detachment of his battery from a dug-out which had been blown in by hostile shelling. This action was done at great personal risk, and throughout the bombardment he continued to display the greatest coolness and courage.

2nd Lt. Felix William Gade, R. Fus., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of an attack. He successfully captured the objective, which was counter-attacked by the enemy during the night, a few of them succeeding in entering the trench. At a critical moment he met some of the enemy rushing down the trench towards him, whereupon he promptly fired his "Very" light pistol into the face of the foremost one, so startling him that he turned and was killed by our own men. His conduct and coolness throughout the night, under very heavy and continuous fire, were a splendid example to all ranks.

Lt. Arthur Havard Arnold Gem, Notts. & Derby. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when on patrol. He entered the enemy's main line of trenches with one man, where he located a trench mortar which had given much trouble. They were then attacked by twenty of the enemy with bombs, to which Lt. Gem and the private replied vigorously, accounting for several of the enemy before they withdrew. He brought back information of the greatest value, and it was due to this gallant action that a strong enemy machine-gun emplacement was destroyed by us very shortly afterwards.

2nd Lt. Charles Gibbens, Durh. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Despite heavy shelling he kept his men at work on a communication trench until the work was complete, rallying the men, and by his fine personal example encouraging them under very trying conditions. He also showed great judgment in keeping other parties in readiness to repel a counter-attack.

T./Lt. (A./Capt.) Herbert Ruffell Gibbons, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battery was going into action it was heavily shelled, and many casualties and great confusion ensued. In spite of being severely wounded he proceeded at once to disentangle the confusion in a most plucky and able manner, only desisting when compelled to by his wounds. His splendid coolness and devotion saved many casualties.

2nd Lt. Alfred James Edward Gibson, R. Ir. Rif., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in reorganising his company after the other officers had become casualties, and leading them to their objective with the greatest gallantry and a total disregard of personal danger. His fine leadership won the confidence and praise of every N.C.O. and man in the company, so that they followed him without hesitation to the assault. He afterwards displayed untiring energy in consolidating the position and in attending to the comfort of his men.

2nd Lt. Humphrey Arthur Gilkes, Lond. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as Battalion Intelligence and Signalling Officer. He made repeated reconnaissances under heavy fire, gaining valuable information and maintaining efficient communications throughout a period of several days.

T./2nd Lt. Alexander William Francis Gilmore, R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in taking command of his company when all other officers had been wounded and attacking a strong machine gun emplacement from which the entire attack was being held up. By his initiative and fine leadership the gun was captured with only slight loss, he ultimately rushing in and killing the gunner himself. He afterwards displayed untiring energy in encouraging his men, who were tired out, to consolidate their position.

T./Lt. Edwin Arthur Girling, Hamps. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding two platoons. Although subjected to heavy barrage in an exposed position where no orders could reach him he used his own initiative and kept his men under control, getting them forward and carrying on with the consolidation under very trying circumstances. It was entirely due to his fine example and disregard of his own safety that the work was successfully carried out.

T./2nd Lt. John Hastings Glendinning, R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company during an attack. He also took command of many dispirited parties of men by night and under heavy fire and formed them into a continuous line of defence, displaying the utmost energy and resource under trying conditions.

2nd Lt. (T./Lt.) Arthur Willoughby Falls Glenny, A.S.C., and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in co-operation with our artillery. By dint of great perseverance, skill and very gallant flying he has accomplished splendid work under very difficult circumstances. On one occasion, during a gale of wind, he successfully ranged three of our heavy batteries upon an enemy battery, which was completely obliterated. He has consistently set a very fine example to his squadron.

2nd Lt. (T./Lt.) Alastair Francis Gloag, W. Rid. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company to their objective through very heavy shell and machine gun fire, during which he was wounded in the head. He continued, however, to show a fine spirit cheering his men and encouraging them to hold on until finally compelled by overwhelming numbers to fall back upon a line of shell holes, which he held for some hours with great tenacity and courage. Throughout the action he set a splendid example to all ranks.

2nd Lt. Charles Melvill Goldsbury, Lond. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a raid. He was the first to reach the farm which was the objective, and in spite of enemy barrage and heavy rifle fire dashed on ahead and bombed the place, setting it on fire and capturing ten prisoners. He was severely wounded whilst returning, having remained behind in the burning building to search for a trench mortar. The success of the enterprise was entirely due to his splendid example of fearlessness and personal leading.

2nd Lt. Archibald Leslie Gracie, K.R.R.C., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as Battalion Signalling Officer. Throughout an intense bombardment he continued to show the very greatest coolness and gallantry, doing his utmost to maintain communication by every means in his power under circumstances of the greatest difficulty, and with complete disregard for his own safety. He also did exceptionally fine work later in the day when he had been put in command of a tunnelling company, keeping them steady, and finally enabling them and many others to withdraw across a river by his splendid personal example of coolness and cheerfulness during a very trying time.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a working party. Coming under heavy shell fire on arriving near the scene of their task he left his men under cover, and with the greatest daring and disregard of danger made a reconnaissance over open ground swept by shell and machine gun fire, which enabled him to tape out the work and lead his party to its successful completion. He has on many previous occasions displayed similar gallantry, notably in making personal reconnaissances under intense and accurate enemy fire for the purpose of effecting repairs to roads and other work of an urgent nature.

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Edward Gray, Durh. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding the front line for six days, during which his energy, example and absolute disregard of danger enabled the consolidation to be successfully achieved. His useful reconnaissances and initiative in sending out patrols and strong points very largely strengthened our line of defence.

T./Lt. Leäro Aylmer Henry Hackett, R. Ir. Rif. (frmly. R. Muns. Fus.).

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his company during an attack. In conjunction with another company he knocked out an enemy strong point, capturing 30 officers and 70 of other ranks, also five machine guns. Throughout the day he set a splendid example of leadership.

T./Lt. Wilfred John Hall, M.G. Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile raid on our trenches. At a critical moment he rushed up two machine guns and kept up heavy fire for thirty-five minutes upon the attacking enemy, although under heavy shell fire. He has constantly displayed great coolness and courage upon numerous occasions.

T./Capt. Charles Leslie Harding, Notts. & Derby. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in handling his company for several days with great skill and gallantry. Although his company headquarters were knocked out and he himself badly stunned for a long period, he remained at duty, setting a very fine example to his men.

T./Lt. (A./Capt.) Bertram George Gibson Harries, A.O.D.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as Railhead Ordnance Officer. Under a heavy bombardment he collected a fatigue party which had scattered, and by his personal example and energy off-loaded a train of special shell that was standing in the siding under fire. He thereby averted what might easily have been a very serious explosion, and throughout the whole of the operations his services have been invaluable as regards the handling and despatch of very large quantities of ammunition to gun positions.

T./2nd Lt. Arthur Leslie Harris, Gen. List.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of wireless communications. He re-established communications at a critical moment by personally carrying up a new set of instruments under heavy enfilade fire, displaying great coolness and complete disregard for his personal safety. Throughout operations his energy and devotion enabled communications to be continuously maintained with forward stations, though the line was repeatedly cut by shell fire.

T./2nd Lt. Michael John Hartery, R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as Battalion Signalling Officer. At a moment when the signal station was heavily shelled, he dismissed the signallers and himself took charge of the telephone. His splendid contempt for danger has at all times inspired those working with him with the greatest confidence and admiration.

Lt. George Lawrence Hastings, Dgn. Gds.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading raids on the enemy's defences on two occasions. His ability and fine personal example have proved of the utmost value to the success of our operations.

2nd Lt. Basil Dudley Hatchett, S. Staffs. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of two guns. Whilst directing the fire under heavy enemy barrage a shell burst near his bomb store in close proximity to his guns. Without hesitation he removed a live bomb which was on the point of exploding from the centre of at least 200 rounds and threw it away, when it at once exploded. By his prompt and very gallant action he saved the lives of the gun teams as well as in all probability the whole of the rest of the ammunition.

2nd Lt. Edward John Heaton, attd. Linc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under extremely difficult conditions. He did exceptionally fine work wire-cutting with his guns, in addition to which he volunteered to take charge of all carrying parties for the supply of ammunition, a duty which he successfully carried out, working night and day under very heavy enemy shell fire. He also displayed very great gallantry in observing for several days for his guns from a shell crater which had been evacuated by the outposts as untenable. The example which he set on this, as on all other occasions, was magnificent.

T./2nd Lt. Harry Heaton, Durh. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile raid upon his post. He moved about encouraging the men under heavy fire, until he was hemmed in by the sap being blown in. The successful defence of his post was greatly due to his fine personal efforts.

2nd Lt. George York Henderson, R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his company after his Commander had been killed. In conjunction with another company he captured thirty enemy officers and seventy of other ranks, also five machine guns. He personally knocked out one machine gun with rifle grenades. He showed great ability in handling his men, afterwards restoring the direction for his battalion when the landmarks were obliterated.

T./Capt. Augustus Joseph Hickey, R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of an advanced dressing station. He worked with the utmost energy and disregard of danger for forty-eight hours under shell fire, during which time he passed through more than 700 wounded. His skill and devotion saved many lives.

Lt. Philip Highfield Highfield-Jones, S. Staffs. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack upon a village he was in command of a company of moppers-up. Two of the attacking companies having suffered heavily under machine gun fire, he took command of the remnants, and with great gallantry and determination cleared the enemy out of the houses which they had occupied, inflicting heavy casualties upon them, and capturing eight prisoners and three machine guns. He showed great initiative and resource in the way in which he handled a difficult situation.

T./2nd Lt. Charles Hill, R. Dub. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on numerous occasions. He went forward continually, during hostile bombardments, to the front line, in order to obtain information of the situation. On one occasion, when telephonic or visual messages were impracticable, he personally carried a message through very heavy shell fire. His untiring energy was of the utmost value during a critical period in which we were consolidating our line.

T./2nd Lt. Harold Reginald Hill, S. Wales Bord.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a raiding party. Having twice failed to blow up the enemy wire owing to the torpedo used being faulty, he cut a gap himself and led his men into the enemy trench. Finding it unoccupied, he then led them across to the open into the enemy's main trench, where a fierce fight ensued, and after inflicting casualties upon the enemy he skilfully withdrew his party without loss. He has on previous occasions shown marked gallantry in raids and patrol work.

2nd Lt. Joseph Shirley Hill, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under very heavy shell fire. A shell burst at the mouth of his telephone pit, killing a major and wounding him and another officer. He extricated himself, and, although wounded in five places, succeeded in digging the officer out. He then carried him on a stretcher, with the aid of a bombardier, to the dressing station, through a very heavily shelled area, before having his own wounds dressed.

T./2nd Lt. Thomas Collier Hipwell, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in going out 300 yards in advance of our front line and bringing in an enemy howitzer, during which he and his party were subjected to heavy machine-gun fire. By his determination and personal example he secured the gun and got it away.

2nd Lt. Arthur Hodge, Manch. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his platoon against a hostile working party. He captured or killed the greater part of them after a hand-to-hand fight, in which he displayed the most skilful and determined leadership. He showed exceptional skill in leading his men through entanglements and other obstacles up to within fifty yards of the enemy without arousing their suspicion, though the night was a remarkably still one.

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Geoffrey Herbert Hooper, R.E., attd. R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When leading a patrol of four machines, he attacked ten enemy aircraft; during the engagement five of them were destroyed, two by himself. He had previously led a very successful night bombing attack on an aerodrome, in unfavourable weather, dropping bombs from a very low altitude, and doing a great amount of damage. He has invariably displayed great gallantry and skill when engaged in aerial combats.

T./Capt. Hugh Langton Hornby, R. Innis. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid upon enemy trenches. He led his men with great determination, and, although severely wounded after reaching the objective, refused to be carried back until he knew that everything was going well. He has always set a very fine example of courage and ability.

Capt. Guy Mulock Pilkington Hornidge, R. Ir. Fus., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a raiding party. The success of a very difficult operation was due entirely to his careful organisation and attention to preliminary details. He showed the utmost promptness and ability in organising patrols to recover the wounded, and his good leadership and splendid example of coolness greatly strengthened the morale of his men and dispelled any chance of confusion which might have arisen under the heavy enemy barrage.

T./2nd Lt. Walter James Hodgson Horrocks, Gen. List and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as a balloon observer. Although under accurate hostile shell fire, he remained in observation in spite of both balloon and basket having been hit by shell splinters, locating the gun which was shelling him, and refusing to descend until darkness made observation impossible. A few moments after he had descended the balloon was brought down by a direct hit. He has always shown remarkable energy and determination whilst engaged in observing.

2nd Lt. Cecil Henry Horsley, Ches. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding an assaulting company during an attack. His personal influence and fine leadership had a most inspiring effect upon his men, both before and during the attack, and he afterwards displayed the utmost energy and ability during the consolidation of the captured line.

T./2nd Lt. Thomas Houston, R. Ir. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a raiding party. He led his men with great skill and daring, collected some valuable information, repulsed at least one counter-attack, and personally covered the withdrawal of the rest of his party. Immediately afterwards he led patrols in search of wounded, which he conducted at great personal risk in a very thorough manner, although the enemy had already reoccupied some of their advanced positions. He set a splendid example of fearlessness and devotion to duty.

2nd Lt. John Purslow Howells, R.W. Surrey R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at a critical moment. He went with a patrol to the assistance of one of our advanced posts which was heavily attacked by the enemy, and successfully counter-attacked them when the post was in great danger of being surrounded. Although wounded in two places, he assisted in carrying back the wounded, and it was greatly due to his dash and initiative that the enemy's attack failed.

T./Lt. (T./Capt.) John Charles Pleydell Howis, Essex R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in withstanding enemy counter-attacks for thirty-six hours under most trying circumstances. His skilful dispositions, good judgment, and personal gallantry enabled a critical situation to be made secure, and our line to be finally consolidated.

2/Lt. (T./Lt.) Campbell Alexander Hoy, R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when acting as observer on offensive patrols. On four occasions he has shot down hostile scouts, displaying in every instance splendid determination and a very fine offensive spirit.

2nd Lt. John Hughes, R. War. R., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He was the first man of his platoon to enter the hostile trench, where he killed several of the enemy himself and personally bombed a machine gun and its crew before they could bring it into action. His initiative and skilful handling of his men throughout were beyond all praise.

T./2nd Lt. (A./Capt.) Oscar Stanley Hughes, R. Welsh Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy counter-attack. Although twice buried by shells and severely wounded during an intense bombardment, he refused to leave his company, remaining at his post and inspiring them under terrible conditions by his splendid spirit and heroism.

2nd Lt. Cyril Charles Montagu Hulton-Harrop, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battery with brilliant success under very trying circumstances. Although his emplacements were blown in, and his men exposed to the enemy's view, he worked day and night, remaining with his guns throughout, setting a fine example of determination and coolness, and keeping them in action until his work had been successfully accomplished.

T./Capt. Cecil Frederick George Humphries, High. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At great personal risk he directed operations at a fire, which resulted in saving eight trucks of ammunition from a burning train. Assisted by a serjt.-major, he uncoupled the eighth truck himself, whilst the ninth was burning fiercely and heavy shells exploding freely around them.

T./Lt. (A./Capt.) John Frederick Ireland, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battery at a very critical moment. Whilst changing positions, the battery came under sudden and concentrated heavy shell fire at a cross road, which caused heavy casualties. He behaved with the greatest gallantry, remaining at the place which was being shelled, and regulating the movement of his battery past the spot and besides personally attending to the wounded and destroying wounded horses under fire. He has repeatedly been brought to notice for his efficiency and fearless devotion to duty.

2nd Lt. Terence Carlyle Irvine, Sea. Highrs.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile attack upon his frontage. During a heavy barrage he kept moving about, keeping a careful watch upon No Man's Land, by which he was able to detect the enemy advancing in considerable numbers, and to rapidly and effectively direct the fire of his platoon upon them. No enemy entered our line, except two who were brought in as prisoners. He displayed very fine leadership and presence of mind.

2nd Lt. Ira Herbert Jackman, Lond. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his platoon. By his fearlessness and fine example he led his men forward under intense artillery and machine gun fire, and subsequently took command of his company when all other officers had become casualties.

T./Capt. Manley Angell James, Glouc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Previous to our attack, he took up a forward position under heavy hostile barrage in order to obtain accurate information as to the progress of our advance. He afterwards went forward and assisted to consolidate, as well as in the capture of a strong point, and having rallied the supports when they were disorganised by hostile fire he led them to their position. He then made a very daring personal reconnaissance of the whole line under heavy shelling and rifle fire that he might send back a report to his battalion commander, and his total disregard of danger and brilliant initiative throughout the action were largely responsible for its success.

T./Lt. Ronayne Bray Jennings, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a working party. Coming suddenly under heavy fire, he kept his men well in hand, and led them forward to the successful completion of their task. He has at all times set a fine example of courage and devotion to duty.

T./2nd Lt. Norman Edward Jervis, attd. R. War. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during and after an assault upon enemy trenches. He led his company with great dash and skill, capturing both his objectives. Though hit in the head immediately afterwards, and in considerable pain, he insisted in carrying on with the consolidation, remaining with his company for two days until sent to the dressing station much against his wish. His pluck and determination set a most magnificent example to his men. He has previously done consistently good work.

2nd/Lt. Evan Harries Jones, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when under heavy shell fire with his battery. Aware of the importance of keeping his guns in action in order to support an infantry attack by means of barrage, he moved from one gun to another urging the men to keep on firing, and by his cheerfulness and contempt of danger setting such a fine example that the guns continued firing for the whole of the appointed time.

Capt. (T./Maj.) Joseph Joyce, M.G. Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of machine guns. During an attack upon a strongly fortified position he moved about with complete disregard of the intense hostile shell fire, visiting all his guns and keeping them in action by his splendid personal example of coolness. Three of his guns were put out of action, and his teams had twenty-four casualties. His exceptional fearlessness and ability cannot be too highly praised.

T./ Lt. (A./Capt.) Sydney Banks Keast, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on numerous occasions whilst engaged in siting and constructing defences. His determination and great powers of organisation in dealing with working parties at night, under heavy fire and in exposed positions, were entirely responsible for the successful and rapid completion of the trenches, and he showed untiring energy and great fearlessness when constructing trenches within very short distance of the enemy's line.

2nd Lt. Philip St. John Howlett Kelleher, Leins. R., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded in the leg, he continued to lead his platoon for seven hours, successfully dealing with an enemy machine gun and team, which he outflanked and destroyed with only one casualty. He refused to leave his post until ordered to go to the dressing station by his commanding officer.

Lt. (T./Capt.) Roderick Leopold Keller, R. War. R., Spec. Res., and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in attacking hostile aircraft, destroying one, and driving down others out of control. His dash and offensive spirit on all occasions have been splendid.

Lt. William Daryl Olpherte Kemmis, Dns.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. When prevented by an enemy party from following the prearranged route, with great initiative and skill he led his men to the right place by another way, and headed a bayonet charge by which the final objective was successfully gained. His dash and quickness largely contributed to the success of the enterprise, and he subsequently did excellent work bombing dug-outs.

T./Capt. William Madden Knight, R. Innis. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded two companies during an attack, keeping them well in hand, and by his fine personal example and skilful leadership gaining the confidence of all the men in his vicinity. His orders were clear and complete, both during the attack and for the subsequent consolidation of the captured position. To his company belongs the credit of the capture of two enemy machine guns and a field gun.

T./Capt. Eric William Lafone, Durh. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding his company during an attack. He kept them well together under exceptionally trying conditions, when they were suffering heavily from our own guns, but by skilful leading he was able to shift his position and lessen the casualties, afterwards gaining the final objective. His untiring efforts were mainly responsible for the ultimate success of the operation.

2nd Lt. Barnaby Joseph Lanktree, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when working on a dump which was set on fire by heavy hostile shelling. Although repeatedly knocked down and severely burnt by explosions, he succeeded in extinguishing the fire, thereby saving a large quantity of ammunition and considerable loss of life. He displayed the greatest gallantry and determination, as he has also done on several occasions when getting ammunition forward under trying circumstances.

Lt. Thomas Smythe Lanyon, Shrop. L.I., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile raid on our trenches. Throughout an intense bombardment of all kinds of projectiles he moved about the line, encouraging the men and setting a splendid example to all ranks. At one moment he was buried by a trench mortar on his way to visit one of his posts; and finding, on reaching it, that the whole garrison had become casualties, he promptly made a block with fresh men and repulsed the raiders with rifle and machine-gun fire. His fearlessness and energy were most marked.

Capt. John Douglas Lapham, R. Scots.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in personally superintending repairs to an important road under heavy shell fire. By his fine example and disregard of danger he enabled the traffic to be quickly resumed, thereby very greatly assisting the operations, and he has shown the same courage and determination throughout in road construction under heavy shell fire.

2nd Lt. (T./Lt.) Reginald Owen Hassall, R. War. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as liaison officer. He was indefatigable in his efforts, making many journeys between the advanced troops and our old line, and by his timely and intelligent information doing much to aid the success of our attack.

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) John Hilliard Cairnes Lawlor, R. Muns. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company to its objective. Throughout the operation he displayed the greatest courage and disregard of danger, combined with a high power of command and marked ability and judgment in handling his men. His capacity for grasping every situation with rapidity and accuracy conducted very materially to the success of the operation.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in repairing a trench tramway which had been wrecked by shell fire, and restoring a bridge which was completely blown away.

He completed the work successfully, in spite of a very heavy fire, thus enabling ammunition and rations to be pushed up to the front line. He showed a splendid example of courage and determination under very trying circumstances.

T./2nd Lt. William James Leahy, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in charge of working parties. He rallied them under heavy fire, and by his personal courage and determination kept them at work until the two strong points upon which he was engaged were completed. He displayed great fearlessness and boundless energy.

2nd Lt. Jack Lee, Ches. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding a raid. His conduct throughout was of the highest order and a splendid example to his men; it was entirely owing to his fine leadership that the enterprise was successfully carried out.

T./2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) David Edward Liddell, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in carrying out a most valuable reconnaissance at great personal risk and entirely on his own initiative. The reliable information which he secured could not be obtained from air photographs, and was largely responsible for the effective nature of our bombardment.

2nd Lt. Harold Boyd Little, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He personally supervised all ammunition fatigues, and, although heavily shelled, he collected his parties and continued his work with the greatest coolness. On another occasion he assisted in rescuing several officers who had been buried.

T./2nd Lt. Arthur Henry Lloyd, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid upon enemy trenches, in which he destroyed a large number of gun emplacements, dug-outs, and ammunition recesses over a wide area in the presence of the enemy and in the short space of twenty minutes. His initiative in making personal reconnaissances prior to the raid enabled further extensive damage to be done to the enemy's trenches.

2nd Lt. Stuart Lockhart, L'pool R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when a hostile raid had penetrated our front line. Assisted by another officer, he led a counter-attack with such vigour that the enemy were outflanked and twelve prisoners taken. He then reorganised and consolidated the posts in the front line, displaying great initiative and sound common sense in a trying position.

2nd Lt. William Farrer Lonsdale, E. Lan. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst leading his platoon to the enemy's trench, which he seized and consolidated, superintending the work, and encouraging his men for some time after being severely wounded in the wrist. He continued to set the same fine example of pluck and determination until finally compelled to give in owing to the effects of the wound.

2nd Lt. John Cyprian Lott, E. Lan. R., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company to their objective with great dash and ability. During consolidation he set a splendid example of coolness and disregard of danger, moving about on the top and encouraging his men. On several occasions he has shown exceptional gallantry, within three days personally leading three bombing attacks against a strongly wired enemy position.

T./Capt. William Bird Loveless, R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in tending the wounded under heavy shell fire. Although wounded in the face early in the day, he did not leave his post, but continued with his work until he came out of action with his battalion, displaying splendid keenness and devotion to duty.

T./Lt. (A./Capt.) Edward Henry Lucette, North'd Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at a critical moment, whilst relieving another company. The guide having led his company to the wrong trenches, he at once made a personal reconnaissance under heavy shell fire and in broad daylight, and led his company to their proper position. He afterwards showed the greatest courage and determination in leading his platoon into position under heavy and accurate barrage, which practically wiped them out. He then at once reorganised his men, and had them ready to support the attack of another company. By his splendid personal example during the night he maintained control of his company, although nearly all his N.C.O's. and all but one officer had been killed or wounded.

T./2nd Lt. Raoul Lucovitch, Worc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on several occasions. In broad daylight and under full view of the enemy he crawled forward 700 yards up to the enemy's line and brought back information which enabled his Commanding Officer to occupy commanding positions previous to the attack. The same evening he led forward his platoon under heavy fire, established an advanced post of great tactical value, and remained in command of it, although wounded, for two nights. A few nights later he was severely wounded, but with great pluck and devotion refused to have his wounds dressed until all his wounded men had been attended to. His gallantry was beyond all praise.

T./2nd Lt. Vincent James Lynch, R. Ir. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of an offensive patrol. He attacked a company which was opposing his advance with splendid dash and determination, capturing two officers and forty-two men and a machine gun. He kept close touch with the enemy, obtaining much valuable information and setting a splendid example of initiative and skilful leadership.

T./2nd Lt. William James Lyness, R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when clearing a wood with his platoon. In spite of the very strong resistance which he met, his dispositions and leadership were excellent, and after heavy fighting at various points he captured a large number of prisoners and guns of various calibre. His splendid gallantry and coolness proved invaluable as an example to his men.

T./2nd Lt. Ronald Eden Macbean, D.G.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when leading the advance party of a raid. When held up by strong enemy covering parties and, consequently, unable to torpedo the wire, he led a bayonet charge against the enemy, accounting for their leader with his revolver. He was then compelled to withdraw by superior numbers, but continued in the face of heavy rifle fire to make attempts to secure identifications and to recover the torpedoes which he had been compelled to abandon. He set a fine example of dash and determination.

2nd Lt. Niel Macdonald, R.G.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when F.O.O. of his battery. Finding his observation obstructed by long grass, he advanced about 200 yards into No Man's Land, moving from shell hole to shell hole until he got a good view. He then returned for his wire, and laid it out by himself, observing for his battery for three hours, during which he was constantly sniped and in great danger from his own shell.

2nd Lt. Thomas Murray MacDougall, Lond. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when bringing up a train of pack mules with supplies to his battalion. With exceptional skill and fine judgment he sent his convoy singly through a heavy barrage, afterwards re-assembling them and delivering his supplies without casualties. This occurred in complete darkness, and his example of personal courage and decision were invaluable to his men.

T./Lt. Basil Keble Manbey, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when acting as Advanced Intelligence and F.O. Officer during an attack. He sent in very valuable information, and showed the greatest energy and fearlessness in obtaining it, pushing forward with the advanced patrols and going to and fro constantly under heavy shell fire to report on the situation.

2nd Lt. Matthewman Donald Manduell, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when under heavy shell fire with his battery. Aware of the importance of keeping his guns in action in order to support an infantry attack by means of barrage, he moved from one gun to another, urging the men to keep on firing, and by his cheerfulness and contempt of danger setting such a fine example that the guns continued firing for the whole of the appointed time.

T./2nd Lt. Geoffrey Edward Manning, E. Surr. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under heavy shell fire. He was instrumental in saving the lives of several N.C.O.s and men of his company who had been buried in a tunnel by an enemy bombardment. He was severely wounded whilst engaged on this duty.

T./2nd Lt. Edward Mannoek, R.E. and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In the course of many combats he has driven off a large number of enemy machines, and has forced down three balloons, showing a very fine offensive spirit and great fearlessness in attacking the enemy at close range and low altitudes under heavy fire from the ground.

T./2nd Lt. Oswald Colquhoun Marris, Ches. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst leading his platoon. At a moment when a gap occurred in our leading wave he promptly led his platoon up and filled it, thereby preventing our line from being broken. He accounted for eight of the enemy himself, and throughout the operations he continued to urge his men on by his own personal gallantry and cheerful example. He has frequently carried out daring patrols and reconnaissances.

T./2nd Lt. John Miles Marsh, N. Lan. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty throughout the attack and capture of an enemy position. By his initiative and energy he contributed very largely to the success of his battalion, in spite of heavy casualties and considerable resistance. He showed exceptional skill and determination in organising and leading a party to the capture of a most important strong point, which very greatly contributed to the success of the whole operation.

T./Lt. Edward Leslie Marshall, R. Innis. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at a critical moment. When his company was held up by machine gun fire he ran across an open and fire-swept zone and attracted the attention of a tank, which was the means of wiping out the gun. By this gallant act he saved very many casualties, and his fine leadership inspired his men and largely contributed to the successful gaining of the objective.

Lt. Frederic Adrian Joseph Evans Marshall, E. Kent R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid, in which he led his men with great skill and total disregard of personal danger to their objective, in the face of considerable opposition. By his thorough supervision of the line and his initiative he not only checked several counter-attacks but captured a number of prisoners, searching several dug-outs himself. All ranks were greatly inspired by his splendid example, coolness and courage, which greatly contributed to the success of the raid.

T./2nd Lt. Henry Edgar Marshall, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when firing gas shells. Some thirty rounds having fallen short between our supports and the front he went out in broad daylight and full view of the enemy, collected them and carried them to safety. This prevented them from being hit by enemy shell and our men from being gassed by their own shells.

Lt. (A./Capt.) James Douglas Mason, Ches. R., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company to their objective in the face of determined opposition. He personally led his bombers against enemy posts, accounting for many of them himself, and afterwards organised his company and consolidated the captured line with great promptness and ability. He has on all occasions displayed great gallantry under fire.

T./Lt. William Charles McCauley, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of an ammunition convoy. He took charge of the situation at a most critical moment, under heavy fire, when a serious block had occurred on a bridge. He dealt with the confusion promptly and successfully reorganised the traffic; and on many other occasions during the same night he was responsible for delivering the ammunition at the gun positions and bringing the convoy back through an intense barrage with comparatively light casualties. He displayed splendid resource and fearless devotion to duty.

T./Lt. John Lawson McConnell, High. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At imminent risk of his life he crawled across a bridge which had been almost destroyed by enemy shell fire in order to get to his battalion headquarters with instructions. The gallantry and determination of this act were greatly increased by the fact that it was dark at the time, the air densely charged with gas, which entailed a helmet being worn, and the solitary beam which was all that remained of the bridge was under heavy artillery fire. He successfully accomplished his task in the face of all these difficulties, displaying splendid fearlessness throughout.

T./Capt. Anthony John McCreadie, M.B., R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under heavy shell fire and in most trying circumstances. He worked alone and incessantly for thirty-six hours in the open attending to the wounded, and on two occasions he carried men under cover and dressed them. He evacuated all the wounded with admirable rapidity and efficiency, and his coolness and disregard for personal safety under fire afforded a magnificent example to all ranks. He has displayed similar gallantry on other occasions.

2nd Lt. Douglas Crosby McCulloch, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Whilst unloading ammunition a sudden burst of fire was opened upon his party, but with admirable coolness and presence of mind he was successful not only in dumping all the ammunition at the guns, but also in getting his teams away in safety. Later, aided by his B.S.M. and another man, he displayed great courage and energy in extinguishing ammunition which had been set alight by heavy shell fire. He has at all times given evidence of fearlessness, ability, and devotion to duty under very trying circumstances.

2nd Lt. Thomas Patrick McDowell, K.R.R.C., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a raiding party. Whilst returning with a wounded N.C.O. and a prisoner his party were caught by the enemy barrage, and several men were wounded just outside our wire. He and a corporal immediately ran out again under heavy fire from the enemy, and brought in a comrade and the prisoner, both of whom were wounded and had been left outside.

Lt. Reginald Carew McGrath, R. Ir. Regt., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at a critical moment during an attack. When the enemy were offering considerable resistance, and his company had suffered heavily, he took them in hand and led them forward with the greatest gallantry and determination, thereby saving the situation and enabling our advance to continue.

2nd Lt. Denis McHugh, R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his company was held up by machine-gun fire he organised and personally led parties to attack the guns, two of which he captured, killing and capturing the crews at the same time. He showed splendid leadership and determination throughout the advance, and was untiring in his efforts to make the consolidation secure after the position had been gained.

2nd Lt. Andrew Edward McKeever, R.F.C., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, particularly when on offensive patrol. He attacked eight enemy aircraft single-handed at close range, and by his splendid dash and determination destroyed one and drove five down completely out of control. He had previously shown exceptional fearlessness in attacking the enemy when in superior numbers, and in the space of three weeks he destroyed eight hostile machines, setting a very fine example to his squadron.

2nd Lt. James Alexander McLaren, L'pool R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a wiring party.

The work was urgent, and continuously interfered with by heavy enemy bombing, but by his personal example and total disregard of danger he impressed his men with the importance of the task, and completed it successfully. He has for a long time been in charge of the wiring parties. On the whole front of his brigade, and on all occasions he has proved himself a very gallant and capable officer.

2nd Lt. Harold McLennan, R.G.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in rescuing wounded under conditions of exceptional danger. At a time when his battery was under heavy shell fire and all had been ordered to cover, he called for three volunteers, and led them along a mile of road three times under an intense shell fire to bring in wounded men who had been left there. He had already displayed great courage, initiative and utter disregard of personal safety whilst attending to the wounded under fire early on the same day, and his splendid example was beyond all praise.

T./2nd Lt. James McMechan, R. Innis. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company during an attack. He personally showed them how close they could keep to the barrage, and with great courage and skill he outflanked and wiped out an enemy machine gun and its crew without a single casualty to his own men. His coolness and fine leadership contributed very largely to the success of the operation.

2nd Lt. Leonard Charles Miller, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in jumping into a gunpit that had been set on fire by hostile shelling and extinguishing the fire. His prompt and courageous act at great personal risk saved the ammunition and the gun from being more seriously damaged.

Capt. John Morrison Milne, R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When a dugout containing combustion products was blown in and the inmates buried he procured oxygen cylinders and played them into the dugout, thereby saving their lives. He also assisted most untiringly in digging out the men, who owe their lives to his promptness and gallantry under heavy shell fire.

T./Lt. (T./Capt.) John Theobald Milne, Gen. List, and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst leading offensive patrols. He has shown great determination and courage in attacking hostile formations, although in superior numbers, at close range. He has also done long and arduous reconnaissances and secured good photographs under very adverse conditions and heavy fire, displaying throughout an admirable spirit of fearlessness and energy.

T./2nd Lt. William Moloney, R. Muns. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his platoon under heavy shell fire throughout an attack. On reaching the final objective he pushed forward with a patrol and established himself in an advanced position, which he held until the next wave of the attack passed through. Although over 50 years of age, he had insisted on going into action with his company, and he displayed a magnificent example of coolness, fearlessness, and determination.

T./Lt. Thomas Francis Monks, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in advancing with the infantry and maintaining accurate and continuous communication with his brigade headquarters in the face of heavy hostile fire. He has on three previous occasions distinguished himself by gallant conduct of a similar nature.

T./Lt. Vincent Newton Moss, E. Kent R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. He led his party into the enemy support line, where he remained three hours reorganising them after heavy casualties. Although wounded, he personally supervised the repulse of a bombing attack, and remained to the last, finally withdrawing his party without further loss.

2nd Lt. David Arthur Moyles, R. Ir. Rif.,

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his platoon after being wounded immediately upon leaving the lines. He afterwards rushed an enemy machine gun which was firing upon his battalion, and put it out of action. He was severely wounded in doing so, and throughout this and all other operations he has consistently set a fine example of coolness, initiative, and devotion to duty.

2nd Lt. Sidney Murray, Mon. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when engaged in digging operations with his company. He led them through hostile fire to their task, during which they sustained several casualties, and he himself was badly shaken by a shell. He persisted, however, in carrying out the work, encouraging his men by his splendid personal example and utter disregard of danger, continually moving up and down in the open under fire and superintending the work. It was entirely due to his determination that the work was successfully completed in the face of heavy opposition. He has displayed the same fearlessness and energy under trying conditions on previous occasions.

T./Capt. William Nason, Notts. & Derby R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in going repeatedly through heavy barrage to the signal station from battalion headquarters. He rendered the greatest assistance in reforming his battalion under circumstances of extreme difficulty, during which he displayed a wonderful example of coolness and gallantry.

T./2nd Lt. Walter Notley, R. Innis. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. He took command of his company and led them with great skill and dash, capturing a number of prisoners. On the following day he commanded a carrying party for the front line, and it was due to his determination and energy that the supplies for the assaulting troops were maintained. He has at all times done excellent work with his platoon.

2nd Lt. Bertram Daniel Nottingham, Lond. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under heavy enemy fire he took a party across open ground to the assistance of a ration party which had been caught by hostile shell fire and had suffered heavily. He attended to the dressing of the wounded, and personally supervised their removal, displaying very marked courage and gallantry under continuous shelling, and his prompt action saved many lives.

T./Lt. John Dwyer O'Brien, R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at a very critical moment. When our attack was held up by three enemy machine guns he opened fire with Lewis guns and rifle grenades, rushed the guns, and killed and captured their teams. He showed extreme coolness and great dash under fire, setting a splendid example to his men and inspiring them with confidence and enthusiasm. He has on many occasions displayed striking courage, especially when employed in raids.

T./2nd Lt. William Ward Odell, Notts. & Derby. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in taking out a patrol at a critical moment and gaining very valuable information, which resulted in bodies of the enemy who were massing for attack being dispersed by our artillery fire. Throughout all operations he has consistently displayed the utmost courage and coolness.

2nd Lt. Thomas Wright Oliver, Manch. R., attd. M.G. Coy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding his section of four guns. He brought them into action with very great effect against the enemy, who were massing for a counter-attack, and later, when men were commencing to retire under an intense hostile bombardment he rallied them and led them back to their positions. He set an example of personal gallantry and coolness which were beyond all praise.

2nd Lt. (A./Capt.) Edgar Wells Page, S. Staff. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding the leading companies of an attack. Although wounded early in the attack he remained in command, setting a splendid example of coolness and courage under heavy artillery fire and inspiring all under him to consolidate the captured positions. On the following day, in spite of the pain of his wound, he pushed forward and occupied further trenches, where he remained established for thirty-six hours. His pluck and disregard of danger were deserving of the highest praise.

2nd Lt. (T./Lt.) Thomas Compton Pakenham, C. Gds., Spec. Res., attd. M.G. Coy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in getting his guns forward under heavy fire to support an infantry assault. He afterwards rendered valuable assistance in establishing communication between the guns in his vicinity and the infantry commanders.

2nd Lt. Ernest Walter Parker, R. Fus., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a raid. Having been informed that it was important to obtain a prisoner, he remained with his party for three-quarters of an hour in the enemy's lines, until he discovered an occupied post, which he attacked, killing six of the enemy and taking one prisoner. His coolness and determination were most remarkable.

T./2nd Lt. John Audley Parle, L'pool R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a raiding party. As they were about to return he found one of his officers lying unconscious on the enemy wire. He took him on his back and carried him 250 yards to our lines, through heavy enemy barrage and machine-gun fire.

T./2nd Lt. Andrew Patterson, R. Innis. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in working well forward during an attack with six battalion scouts and sending back information of the greatest value. In the forward positions he did splendid work, disposing of hostile snipers and capturing a large number of prisoners and valuable documents. His work throughout the day was excellent.

Capt. Hugh Armine Wodehouse Pearse, Beds. R., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at a critical moment during our attack. Seeing that the front line was held up, he quickly realised and restored the situation by throwing in his reserves at the right moment, which resulted in sixty-three of the enemy surrendering. He showed splendid dash and determination in the attack, and skilfully organised the work of consolidation afterwards. He has shown great coolness and gallantry on all occasions and can be trusted in any emergency.

2nd Lt. John Edward Pheyssey, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when getting ammunition forward to the guns. In spite of his having already made three journeys in forty-eight hours, under heavy shell fire, a distance of eight miles each time, he volunteered to make a fourth, in the course of which he was severely wounded. He displayed the finest devotion and very great coolness whilst carrying out this duty, and set a splendid example to officers and men.

2nd Lt. Douglas George Philippe, R. Dub. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although his men were greatly exhausted, he led them with such courage and cheerfulness that they were inspired with confidence by his personal example, and successfully consolidated the captured position. It was entirely due to his prompt action that two enemy guns and some valuable instruments were captured.

T./Capt. Samuel Ernest Picken, M.B., R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in going forward under heavy shell fire and attending to the wounded in advanced trenches and shell holes. He remained in the shelled area for a long period, working incessantly and efficiently at the dressing and evacuation of the wounded. He has always shown the same gallant spirit and devotion to duty.

T./Lt. James Allanson Picton, E. Surr. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. A large number of men having been buried in a tunnel by the enemy's bombardment, he proceeded with great promptness and gallantry to rescue them, though under heavy shell fire at the time. He volunteered to do this, though not belonging to the company, and by his personal example and disregard of danger several lives were saved.

2nd Lt. Ernest Borkman Pigott, R.G.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when F.O.O. during our infantry advance. His promptness and energy enabled hostile machine guns to be successfully dealt with at a moment when they would have undoubtedly held up our advance had he not detected and reported upon them. He has frequently shown great coolness and courage in laying wires at short notice and under trying circumstances and in maintaining communications throughout operations with great ability and success.

T./Lt. Eric Springfield Playle, Linc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile counter-attack. He displayed boundless energy in collecting and organising Lewis guns and teams, moving from post to post under enemy rifle fire, and personally supervising every detail of the defence. He set a very fine example of fearlessness, and did work of the utmost value for a continuous period of several days.

2nd Lt. Thomas Handley Porritt, C. Gds., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading a most successful raid into the enemy's lines. He was the first to enter the trench, and owing to intense barrage and the dilapidated state of the trenches it became necessary to reorganise his party. He accomplished this with great promptness and decision, continuing to lead his men and personally directing the bombing sections. He shot one of the enemy with his revolver, and when the signal to withdraw was given he personally superintended the covering party, and was the last to leave. The success of the raid was entirely due to his coolness and splendid leadership.

Lt. Frederick Thomas Alfred Power, R. Dub. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as Brigade Forward Signalling Officer. He pushed forward through enemy barrage and maintained communication with the firing line for forty-eight hours in a very exposed position under continuous enemy shell fire. Through his initiative and resource communication was successfully kept up with our troops whilst advancing for a mile over very difficult country. He set a splendid example of pluck and ability.

2nd Lt. Henry Percy Ralph, R.G.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in helping to extinguish a burning gun pit in which a large number of fused shells had been stored. His promptness and energy saved a violent explosion and the probable wrecking of a gun and much material.

2nd Lt. Alexander Ramsay, R. Sco. Fus., and M.G. Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in proceeding with great promptness and courage to a heavily shelled trench and attending to the wounded. By his timely aid and great presence of mind he undoubtedly saved several lives, as he was instrumental in getting the wounded bandaged and removed before further casualties from shell fire could occur. He set a very fine example to all ranks.

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Richard Raymond-Barker, Gen. List and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when leading a fighting patrol. He attacked a large hostile formation, destroying two of them. He has also done excellent work in leading distant photographic reconnaissances, notably upon two occasions when his skilful leadership enabled photographs to be taken of all the required hostile area in spite of repeated attacks from enemy aircraft. He has helped to destroy seven hostile machines, and has at all times displayed conspicuous skill and gallantry.

2nd Lt. Archibald Charles Reeves, R.F.C., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in artillery observation, contact patrols and reconnaissance. He has continually done very daring and excellent work at low altitudes with a fine disregard of hostile fire and adverse weather conditions, and he has contributed information of the greatest value by his enterprise and fearlessness on all occasions.

2nd Lt. James Francis Rennie, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With two of his men he made three attempts to extinguish a dump of heavy ammunition which had been set alight by an enemy shell. On each occasion they were knocked down and buried by the bursting shells, and their action was exceptionally gallant, as they were all the time exposed to heavy hostile fire.

2nd Lt. Vincent Clinton Rice, Yeo.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in a raid upon enemy trenches. He led his men through enemy wire with great dash and initiative, and though severely wounded owing to a shattered arm continued to fight until the withdrawal was ordered. He then assumed command, the O.C. having been killed, and brought the whole party back a distance of about 1,000 yards, bringing in all our dead and wounded.

2nd Lt. Cecil Roy Richards, R.F.C., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when on offensive patrols in attacking and shooting down hostile machines. On one occasion he shot down four in one day, displaying great dash and a fine offensive spirit.

T./2nd Lt. Ernest Rimington, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He supervised the construction of a strong point under very difficult conditions, keeping his men together under heavy fire from a hostile trench immediately in front of them, and by his personal example of coolness successfully completing the work.

Lt. Charles Leslie Roberts, M.G. Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as commander of the brigade machine-gun company. He handled his guns with remarkable skill during a difficult advance over unknown country, getting them into action far beyond the enemy front line and effectually covering our consolidation. By his energy and accurate fire he also prevented the enemy from delivering a counter-attack, and on all occasions he displayed the utmost coolness and disregard of danger under heavy and continual shell fire.

T./Lt. Magnus Rainier Robertson, Essex R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding the centre and most important party of a raid. He went from post to post, encouraging his men, and, although wounded in two places, most ably appreciating and dealing with a very varying situation. He brought up reinforcements at a critical moment, and frustrated all hostile counter-attacks, finally seeing all his wounded safely away and returning with the rear party under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire. He set a magnificent example of gallantry and disregard of danger throughout the operation.

T./2nd Lt. Thomas Rothwell, R. Innis. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded early in the attack, he led his company with great pluck and skill, and, having gained his objective, set vigorously to work upon the consolidation. Although much exhausted by his serious wound, he would not avail himself of medical aid until urged to do so by his company commander. He set a splendid example of devotion to duty.

T./2nd Lt. (T./Lt.) Alexander Roulstone, Gen. List and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when engaged in aerial fighting and in photographic reconnaissances. In spite of continual hostile attacks he has proved most successful in securing photographs, and on several occasions he shot down enemy machines out of control, displaying skilful manœuvring and great determination.

2nd Lt. Gerald Rowley, Ches. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. His conduct throughout the whole of the operations was of the highest order, and it was due to his splendid leadership and personal example that the objective was reached after overcoming all opposition. He has previously done good work on similar occasions.

T./Capt. Henry Philip Rushforth, Gen. List and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading bombing raids, the majority of which have been on distant objectives. Notably on one occasion, he led a most successful raid under extremely adverse weather conditions, in spite of which the objective was reached and bombed from a low altitude, after which the whole formation of eight machines returned in safety, after a total flight of over five hours. The success of the operation was due to his determination and fine leadership.

T./Lt. Charles Theodore William Sauerbeck, Durh. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on many occasions, whilst acting as intelligence officer. He repeatedly went through heavy barrages in the performance of his duty, never once faltering, though suffering severely from a wounded knee. He refused to be relieved while the battalion was in the line, and he is now in hospital and in danger of losing his leg from septic poisoning. His example of steadfast courage and devotion to duty was particularly splendid to all ranks.

Lt. Douglas Arthur Saunder, N. Staffs. R., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of cable parties. He and two men proceeded to a crater under heavy fire, repaired the lines which had been cut by a direct hit, and restored communication within two hours, working the whole time under very heavy shell fire with the utmost coolness and determination. He has on many occasions displayed the same fearlessness in the performance of his duties under fire, and the successful maintenance of communications was largely due to his untiring energy over a long period of operations.

T./2nd Lt. (T./Lt.) Owen John Frederick Scholte, Gen. List and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on many occasions whilst carrying out reconnaissances and especially whilst protecting machines returning from patrols. He has continually distinguished himself by discovering hostile aircraft whilst observing from high altitudes, and attacking them with great determination and success at close range. His vigilance, combined with his fine offensive spirit, have many times proved invaluable in frustrating hostile reconnaissances and driving their machines down out of control.

T./Capt. John Edward Scott, R. Muns. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding the two leading companies of an attack upon a village. He led them with the utmost courage and disregard of danger, and, during a subsequent heavy bombardment of the village, he saved many lives by his skilful handling and presence of mind. He also personally led a patrol with very great daring, and obtained valuable information.

2nd Lt. Marmaduke Marshall Shaw, Notts. & Derby. R., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding reinforcements for our front line. He sent back those who had had very severe fighting, and then held on until ordered by Divisional Headquarters to withdraw. He had little or no sleep, for two nights and three days. He showed splendid fearlessness whilst holding the trenches, and great skill and energy in consolidating his position.

2nd Lt. John Harold Shooter, York & Lanc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in carrying out a daylight patrol to clear up an obscure situation. Accompanied by a private, he showed most exceptional skill and daring in proceeding over unknown and difficult ground in order to ascertain the enemy's forward positions. They returned with very valuable information, having attacked an enemy post and dispersed its garrison, one of whom was shot by the private. Their courage and intelligence proved of the greatest assistance in locating the enemy.

2nd Lt. Alfred Greswold Short, Yorks. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid on enemy trenches. He led his platoon with splendid initiative and courage through a heavy trench mortar barrage, and, although slightly wounded, continued to conduct operations, himself capturing one prisoner. His fine leadership is worthy of the highest praise.

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Maurice Muir Simpson, High. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid on the enemy's trenches. He led his company with splendid dash and determination, in spite of stubborn opposition, into the trench behind the enemy's front line, and it was due to his fine leadership that this opposition was overcome, one prisoner taken, and twenty-two of the enemy killed.

T./2nd Lt. (A./Capt.) Vivian Sumner Simpson, Y. & L. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during and after an attack upon enemy trenches. He was the first to reach the trench, and to be engaged in hand-to-hand fighting with the enemy. Later, he displayed the greatest ability and energy in organising his company for the work of protection and consolidation. His work has been consistently excellent on previous occasions.

2nd Lt. Percival Denis Sisley, Beds. R., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his platoon was held up by superior numbers he showed both fine leadership and control, which resulted in heavy losses being inflicted on the enemy and his objectives being quickly gained and consolidated. His battle discipline was of an exceptionally high order.

T./2nd Lt. Charles Douglas Smart, Gen. List and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when acting as pilot to another officer. They faced a violent thunderstorm, accompanied by a gale of wind and blinding rain, which had compelled all other machines to return to their aerodromes or to make forced landings, in order to locate the position of our infantry in the front line. This they successfully did, having spent 1½ hours in the air under fearful conditions, and returned with an accurate and valuable report to Headquarters.

T./2nd Lt. Charles Newbald Smith, S. Staff. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in bringing up rations and water to his battalion under heavy barrage fire. He went forward alone over a fire-swept area and reported at Headquarters, and it was through his determined and admirable control of men and animals under fire and over unknown country that the urgently needed rations were received. He repeated this act of gallantry on the following night.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in laying out 500 yards of trench within 150 yards of the enemy defences, at great personal risk, whilst exposed to heavy and continuous machine-gun fire. Two nights later he led out a working party under heavy fire, dug the trench successfully, and brought his men back without a casualty. He has repeatedly shown a splendid example of coolness and utter disregard of danger when under fire.

T./Capt. William Somers, R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding his company. He engaged in personal combat with the enemy when mopping up the front line trenches. His company captured over 100 prisoners, and accounted for many others, as well as two machine guns and two trench mortars.

Capt. James Calvert Spence, M.B., R.A.M.C., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in proceeding to a battery that was suffering heavily from intense enemy shell fire, and continuing to search blown-in dug-outs and tend the wounded under heavy fire. He displayed exceptional coolness and gallantry on this occasion, and on many previous occasions he has carried out his duties with magnificent devotion.

T./Lt. Bertie Henry Stacey, Midd'x R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when his platoon was caught by an intense H.E. and gas-shell bombardment whilst working on a road. He went over the ground three times, collecting his men and making sure that no wounded were left behind, and then led his party to a place of safety. It was entirely due to him that his company continued to work under heavy shell fire on this occasion, and he has at all times set a very fine example.

T./Capt. Charles Henry Stainforth, R. Innis. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the capture of an enemy position. He was in charge of the wave which captured and consolidated our furthest objective, and displayed dashing leadership and absolute disregard of danger. He shot two of the enemy himself.

T./Lt. George Pomeroy Sterling, North'd Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of two platoons. Having reached the objective of his attack, he discovered that both his flanks were in the air, and that the enemy were advancing in force. He held on, however, with the greatest coolness and determination at this critical moment, under heavy fire, until ordered to withdraw and dig himself in in line with the troops on his flanks. This he successfully accomplished, setting throughout a fine example of skilful leadership and control under very difficult conditions.

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Donald Fasken Stevenson, Yeo. and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in carrying out three contact patrols in one day in bad weather, and at low altitudes. Although attacked by enemy machines in superior numbers, he drove them off, and by his fine reconnaissance work brought back valuable information. He has at all times displayed indomitable pluck and initiative.

2nd Lt. Henry Aicken Stewart, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in collecting a party and successfully extinguishing a burning dump of ammunition, which was exploding freely all the time they were at work. They were also exposed to heavy shell fire, and the gallantry and disregard of danger which were displayed by this officer and his party undoubtedly saved great loss of life and ammunition. He has previously performed excellent service in getting up ammunition to the gun positions under trying circumstances.

Lt. Oliver Stewart, Midd'x R. & R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has done consistent good work for six months, both on escorts and offensive patrols, and has displayed great fearlessness and skill during severe fighting at close range with enemy machines, successfully holding his own, although on several occasions outnumbered by them.

2nd Lt. (A./Capt.) Samuel George Stewart, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. He went forward 2,500 yards, through heavy artillery fire, to a house, where he remained observing for his battery all day, although the house was constantly struck, and he himself was wounded in the back. He returned late in the day, through an intense enemy barrage, to report upon what he had seen, and as communications by then had been cut, he bicycled to an infantry brigade to give his news in person. He was evacuated on account of his wound next day, having displayed the utmost pluck and devotion to duty at a very critical time.

2nd Lt. (T./Lt.) Francis le Strange Stone, Hrs., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile attack upon his position. He went from post to post, under severe shell fire, superintending the work of the machine guns, and making special dispositions against an assault. Previous to this he had carried out several dangerous daylight reconnaissances, under hostile observation, to enable him to place his guns, and his gallantry and disregard of danger were a very fine example to his men.

T./Capt. William Bruce George Stuart, Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his company during an attack. He led them with great dash and personal gallantry, capturing many prisoners, and later on doing excellent work in consolidating captured positions. Throughout the action his fine example of determination and enthusiasm kept his men going at a time when they were dead beat.

2nd Lt. Reginald Stuart Tarran, L'pool R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when a hostile raid had penetrated our front line. He and another officer led a counter-attack with such vigour that the enemy was outflanked and twelve prisoners taken. He was then placed in the support line, which he promptly and successfully reorganised.

T./Capt. (A./Maj.) George Stamp Taylor R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on several occasions, one notable instance being when he was in charge of a large "Labour Company" working party engaged in constructing light railways. They were subjected to heavy fire. By his coolness and presence of mind they were conducted out of the shelled area without any casualties, although the bombardment was intense. He subsequently displayed very great gallantry in personally digging out men who had been buried by shell fire and in cutting trenches across No Man's Land under very trying conditions, in which he set a very fine example of energy and courage under fire.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in taping out a jumping-off line for an infantry attack under exceptionally difficult and dangerous conditions. He crawled out, and successfully completed his task, working by means of a luminous compass. He was exposed the whole time to machine-gun fire from the enemy, who were posted in shell holes at close range. He had previously made a daring and successful reconnaissance of the captured ground under fire, in order that no time should be lost in getting his men to work. He set a magnificent example.

2nd Lt. Robert Thompson, North'd Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst on patrol. He led his small party with exceptional skill and good judgment to the attack of an enemy strong point, which he successfully bombed, and eventually withdrew without casualties. The fine leadership which he displayed was all the more praiseworthy owing to the fact that he had been misinformed in the first instance as to his objective, that he encountered a strong hostile patrol on the way which he most skilfully avoided, and, finally, that our mortars opened fire upon the strong point just as he was about to commence his own attack. He proved equal, however, to coping with the difficulties and delay caused by these incidents, and handled his men throughout with remarkable ability and determination.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded and badly shaken on the previous day, he led his party to where he had been ordered to construct a strong point, and though temporarily driven in by hostile shell fire he successfully completed the work. He displayed great pluck and splendid devotion to duty.

T./2nd Lt. Albert Edward Todd, R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his company when he was the only officer left. He had a most difficult task, meeting with strong opposition from machine-gun and shell fire, but he dealt with every situation as it arose with promptness and decision, setting his men a splendid example of coolness and gallantry. He had not been in action before.

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) William Henry Tosdevine, S. Staff. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although he received his orders too late to take the full advantage of the barrage, he led his company to the attack with the utmost skill and fearlessness, with the flanks exposed, and successfully gained his objective. It was due to his indomitable energy and great power of control that his men, who were greatly fatigued and harassed by shell fire, were got forward and encouraged to consolidate the final objective.

T./2nd Lt. Richard Michael Trevethan, Gen. List and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when on offensive patrols. He has continuously displayed the greatest dash and determination in attacking enemy formations, regardless of their superiority in numbers, and has shot down at least four, driving others down out of control.

2nd Lt. Austin Stanley Trotter, Bedf. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical moment, when his front line was held up, he called on his men, who had been badly shelled, to follow him, and rushed ahead of them. By thus reinforcing at the right moment, he caused the enemy to surrender in large numbers. He was then severely wounded in the thigh, but his personal gallantry and fine leadership had so inspired his men that they dashed on without him and gained their objective.

2nd Lt. John Leslie Turing, Seaf. Highrs., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid upon enemy trenches. This officer was in command of two sections acting as "moppers up." He had a very difficult piece of ground to cross to get to the enemy lines, but in spite of the platoon in front of him losing direction, he led his men with remarkable precision and judgment. He captured three prisoners, ascertained valuable information as to the enemy trenches, and returned with his men to our lines without loss of any kind, having displayed splendid coolness and sound leadership.

2nd Lt. Edward Maxwell Tyler, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when under very heavy shell fire with his battery. He entered a wrecked gun-pit amidst burning and exploding ammunition and suffocating fumes, and helped to remove the wounded and extinguish the flames, doing so at great personal risk. By this very gallant action he undoubtedly saved the wounded in adjoining dug-outs, and enabled the fire of his battery to be maintained at a time when it was most important to do so. He was twice all but overpowered by the gas fumes, but persisted in his work with the utmost pluck and determination.

Lt. Richard Barker Ullman, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in digging out three men who had been buried in a dug-out by enemy shell fire, with utter disregard of his own safety, during an intense bombardment of his battery. Later, when an ammunition dump was hit and set on fire, he promptly extinguished it. He displayed exceptional courage and devotion to duty on both of these occasions.

T./2nd Lt. Victor Unsworth, R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his platoon against a hostile dug-out, in which he killed and captured a number of the enemy who were strongly posted. Later, an enemy bomb was thrown at him from a shell-hole at close range; he promptly picked it up and threw it back, killing two of the enemy and saving the lives of his own men.

2nd Lt. (T./Lt.) John Vaughan, W. Rid. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Having led an attack with great fearlessness and dash under terrific fire of every description, he found that it was impossible to drive it home; whereupon he ordered his men to fall back on some shell holes and engage the enemy with rifle fire. He then organised and led another party in a flank attack upon the same position, displaying the same gallantry as before, but was again unable to penetrate the enemy's defences. Throughout the action his initiative and indomitable courage won the admiration of all, and he deserves the greatest credit for his unflinching devotion to duty and splendid example during a very exacting situation.

Lt. (T./Capt.) Claude Esné Vivian, R. of O., R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on two occasions when in charge of ammunition convoys. He displayed admirable coolness and presence of mind in organising his vehicles under very heavy shell fire at night, so as to get through with a minimum loss, and, later, by his personal efforts he cleared a track of dead and dying animals and of a burning lorry, thereby enabling the column of vehicles behind to get clear of the area, which was being very heavily shelled. He has at all times set a magnificent example when under fire.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on several occasions in taping out trenches under very heavy hostile fire. On one occasion, though shelled off the site three times, he and his N.C.O. returned at every opportunity and successfully completed their task, which took them two hours. He has also displayed splendid courage and determination in reconnoitring unknown ground with a view to taping trenches later, and has supervised large working parties with the utmost ability and skill, consistently setting a fine example of fearlessness under heavy fire.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under very difficult conditions during intense hostile bombardment. All communications had been cut, and he was sent out with a small party to repair the lines. By his gallantry and coolness he succeeded in keeping his party together and at work throughout the day, although the shortage of wire made it necessary to take the most direct route, which lay through the heaviest shell fire. In the dark, and during bursts of heavy shelling, including gas shell, he lost nearly all his party, but continued to lay the line with the one man who remained. He was eventually successful in doing this, and the line has been maintained ever since, largely due to his devotion and perseverance on this occasion.

T./Lt. Thomas Wallace, Welsh R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a patrol. Whilst examining enemy's wire and defences by moonlight, he encountered three strong parties of the enemy who were about to raid our trenches. He immediately attacked them with great determination and drove them off, and was then himself attacked by a fourth party on his flank. Being heavily outnumbered, he was finally compelled to withdraw, which he skilfully effected in spite of being hard pressed by the enemy, personally directing the retirement until badly wounded by a bomb. He then fell exhausted, and was carried back by a Lce-Corpl. and a Private, having saved our lines from being raided by his good leadership and quick grasp of the situation.

T./2nd Lt. Edwin Lloyd Ward, R. War. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading a raid into a strongly held enemy trench with complete success. He shot four of the enemy with his revolver, and the success of the operation was due to his courage and to the care with which he had rehearsed the raid on the preceding night.

T./2nd Lt. Theodore Lanternaier Wenger, M.G. Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in repairing a badly damaged tank under heavy shell fire and in full view of the enemy and driving it back to safety. He has consistently displayed a very high standard of determined courage and ability when engaged in salvage work, and has set a very fine example to all ranks.

Lt. (A./Capt.) Donald Nicoll Whitaker, R. Lanc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although knocked down and buried by a shell, which rendered him unconscious, during an intense enemy bombardment, he insisted on returning to his company, as soon as he regained consciousness, in order to conduct the defence of the advanced posts and trenches which they were occupying. He was a second time buried by a shell, but remained in command until the attack had been beaten off, setting a magnificent example of pluck and devotion to duty.

2nd Lt. John Whitham Whitaker, R.F.A.,
Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of trench mortars. He co-operated with a raid with complete success, although subjected during the preparation to heavy shell fire. It was owing to his efforts that the enemy wire was cut and the successful carrying out of the raid made possible.

Capt. Roger Searle Whitmore, Shrops. L.I.,
Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile raid on our trenches. Throughout an intense bombardment by every description of projectile he kept his line manned and successfully repulsed the enemy. He showed admirable skill and energy in organising the defence, and later in re-establishing the line when it had been practically flattened by the violence of the barrage.

T./Capt. Hugh Frederic Wickens, M.B.,
R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in attending to the wounded whilst the camp was being heavily shelled. The dressing station was totally unprotected, and when it was eventually destroyed by enemy shell fire he showed splendid initiative and coolness in re-establishing his station elsewhere, continuing to clear the wounded and do his work in the most gallant and devoted manner. He has on several previous occasions displayed conduct of the same high order.

T./2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Horace George Wild-bore, attd. Midd'x R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Owing to the guide having lost his way to the assembly trenches, he found himself with only a portion of his company in position at the commencement of the attack. He led them, however, with the greatest coolness and determination, advancing upon his objective until held up by heavy machine gun and rifle fire. He then consolidated his position and held it until relieved some forty-five hours later. He has consistently set a splendid example of coolness and disregard of danger when under fire.

T./Capt. Ernest Leslie Williams, Gen. List,
and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in co-operating with our artillery, often under extremely unfavourable weather conditions. On one occasion in particular, although very much hampered by mist and clouds, he ranged three of our batteries on to a hostile battery position and enabled them to demolish it. His splendid example has been of the greatest value to his squadron.

2nd Lt. Oswald James Williams, Durh. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical time, when his men had become disorganised owing to darkness, he went up and down the line through machine gun and shell fire, establishing communication with his flanks and consolidating his position. Although counter-attacked, he held his own until relieved on the following night, and it was entirely due to his fine example and absolute disregard of danger that a critical position was held.

2nd Lt. George Logan Wilson, London R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Hearing that some men had been wounded at night about a mile away, he obtained a stretcher and went to their assistance, accompanied by a private, through very heavy shell fire. Having rescued one man, he made a second journey and brought in another, performing this extremely gallant deed under circumstances of intense difficulty; the night was pitch dark, it was pouring with rain, and the ground was a mass of shell holes and deep mud. He showed splendid devotion and disregard of his own personal safety.

Lt. Philip Grimwade Wilson, Suff. R., attd.
M.G. Coy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile attack. With the aid of one man he released a machine gun section which was imprisoned with its guns in a blocked dug-out, under an intense barrage. He then brought them into action in an advanced position, and showed exceptional skill and gallantry throughout. His conduct is all the more creditable, as he had only arrived at the front three days previously.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company with complete success and great determination. On reaching the objective he went to the aid of one of his men who had engaged three of the enemy single-handed and assisted to make them prisoners, afterwards promptly organising his line and making sound and efficient dispositions against counter-attacks. His conduct throughout the action was marked by great ability and coolness under fire.

2nd Lt. Douglas John Winnicott, Notts. &
Derby. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a patrol. When held up by wire, he got into the open and attacked an enemy post at very close range. Next day he led his men with the utmost gallantry in the attack, showing great coolness and ability in organising his posts and getting his men to work. His fearlessness and splendid example under continuous enemy sniping did very much to encourage his men.

2nd Lt. Walter Bertram Wood, Hamp. R.
and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on many occasions, when engaged with hostile aircraft, during which he has shown a fine offensive spirit and the utmost fearlessness. He has had no less than twenty-three combats, in the course of which he has destroyed and driven down numerous enemy machines, frequently attacking several single-handed, and on one occasion fighting with his revolver when he had run short of gun ammunition.

2nd Lt. (T./Lt.) Harold Montague Worsley, Yeo.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of the defence of a post. He continued to move about amongst his men and through the barrage under a most intense and accurate bombardment, encouraging them and keeping admirable control of the situation at a most critical time. On a previous occasion he had taken command when his squadron leader was killed, and distinguished himself by similar gallantry. It was due to his courage and initiative on both of these occasions that the position was held and the enemy repulsed with heavy losses.

2nd Lt. (A./Capt.) William Burns Wregg,
R. Scots. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in superintending the consolidation of a captured position. He also displayed great initiative at a moment when our frontal attack was held up by enemy machine guns and wire, in reorganising an attack round the flanks, by which the trench was captured and consolidated.

T./2nd Lt. Montague James Wyatt, E. Kent
R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. Although wounded in two places, he led his party to the enemy's third line, where he remained for two hours. With a small party he engaged a number of the enemy, and inflicted heavy casualties, killing several of them himself. He showed a fine example of pluck and determination.

T/2nd Lt. James Barclay Murdoch Young,
R. Berks. R.

3/1188 C./S./M. William Baker, R. War.
R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. Noticing an enemy machine gunner who had been passed over by our first wave about to bring his gun into action upon the rear of our advance, he rushed at him, knocked him out with a bomb, and then captured the gun and the remaining six men of the team in their dug-out. By his coolness and prompt action he undoubtedly saved a number of casualties. Throughout the operations he set a splendid example of fearlessness and devotion, moving about totally regardless of his personal safety and supervising every detail of the attack and the consolidation. His work throughout the campaign has been consistently gallant.

8/12905 C./S./M. Cumberland Hill, R. Ir.
Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when all his officers had become casualties, in taking command of his company and leading it with great initiative and coolness to its objective. To do this he had to face severe machine gun fire, and lead his men over very difficult ground, but he performed his duties with remarkable skill, and having gained his objective, consolidated his position with energy and great rapidity.

15/11687 C./S./M. John Henry Kelly, R.
Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He captured an enemy field gun, and stood by it, prepared to turn it upon the enemy should they counter attack. As an old artilleryman, his experience enabled him to get the gun into position with rapidity and skill. His coolness and untiring energy have at all times been very noticeable.

8/13113 C./S./M. William Moffatt, R. Ir.
Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in taking command of his company during an attack when all his officers were casualties. He captured three machine guns and a number of prisoners, and led the advance throughout. He has displayed great gallantry in the field on previous occasions.

36551 S.M. Leonard James Richardson,
R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He proceeded from the main dressing station to a dump which was burning and exploding heavily, and set to work to remove and attend to the wounded, of whom he rescued at least twelve. Whilst thus engaged he was continually exposed to the most grave risk from exploding ammunition, flying debris and enemy shell fire, and was at one moment knocked over and severely shaken by an explosion near by. He continued, however, to work with magnificent energy and devotion, not withdrawing until satisfied that all the wounded had been evacuated.

15/11742 C./S./M. Robert Samuel Stevens,
R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company under heavy enfilade fire to the attack and capture of a strong concrete emplacement. He and two others forced their way in, bayoneted the gunners and took eleven prisoners. Their prompt and gallant action was the means of reducing a stubbornly defended point which had checked the advance of a considerable portion of our line. He set a splendid example throughout the day, and reorganised and consolidated the final objective with marked ability and initiative.

131692 C./S./M. Alfred Swan, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in guiding motor transport by night along a road which was under heavy gas-shell bombardment. Although gassed at the commencement of his duties, he displayed the utmost coolness and presence of mind in restoring order amidst considerable confusion, giving able assistance in getting away lorries and helping the wounded. In the end he was badly gassed for the second time. He set a splendid example to all ranks.

14597 S.M. George James Taylor, High. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under an intense bombardment which lasted for twenty-four hours. When the battalion ammunition store was blown in, he organised a working party under heavy shell fire, and personally superintended the recovery of the boxes. He then led a carrying party forward with ammunition on his own initiative, and although two of the party were killed by the intense shell fire, he successfully completed his task, personally filling the places of the men.

240099 C./S./M. George Stanley Ward, Yorks. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in encouraging the men of his company when they had been cut off from all communication from the rear. He rallied them when a counter-attack threatened, and saved the situation, and throughout the day continued to expose himself, with utter contempt of danger, in order better to observe the enemy's movements, setting a splendid example of fearlessness and devotion under very trying circumstances.

10/16093 C./S./M. Robert Selkirk Whelan, R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in capturing twelve of the enemy with the assistance of a comrade whilst they were reconnoitring our position. He also showed great courage and fearlessness in the face of machine-gun fire, bringing an abandoned enemy machine gun into action and enflaming the enemy with it, thereby facilitating our capture of a strong point. After this, he took forward a patrol and captured an enemy field gun, together with its escort, thirty in number. He set a splendid example of pluck and initiative.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

Lt. Kenneth McSwaine, A.S.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as railhead ordnance officer. Under a heavy bombardment he collected a fatigue party which had scattered, and by his personal example and energy off-loaded a train of special shell that was standing in the siding under fire. He thereby averted what might easily have been a very serious explosion, and throughout the whole of the operations his services have been invaluable as regards the handling and despatch of very large quantities of ammunition to gun positions.

Lt. Arthur Leslie Roberts, Fld. Arty.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battery with the utmost determination, skill, and energy for a period of ten days, under heavy hostile shelling, during which many casualties were sustained. On two successive days he displayed splendid promptness and complete disregard of danger in personally assisting to extinguish fires which had broken out amongst his gunpits and ammunition dumps. Accompanied by a serjeant he worked most gallantly under an intense bombardment, having first ordered the rest of his personnel to take cover, and was instrumental in saving a great amount of material as well as in preventing the position from being disclosed to the enemy's observation. He was seriously wounded whilst thus engaged.

CANADIAN FORCE.

Capt. John Ernest Affleck, A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He crawled along a shallow and much exposed trench to rescue a very severely wounded officer, whose life depended upon an immediate operation. With the assistance of a stretcher bearer he managed to get the wounded man out on a blanket to a place where he could be evacuated. The task was a very slow and dangerous one, by reason of their being completely exposed to enemy snipers, but Capt. Affleck did not hesitate to risk his life in order to do all that was humanly possible for this wounded officer.

Lt. James Parr Clinton Atwood, Cav.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst commanding his troop in an attack upon four lines of enemy defences. He established a collecting station, and when another troop in front of him had been thrown into confusion owing to their officer being wounded, he assumed command of them as well as his own men, and led them to their objective, thereby enabling a number of prisoners to be brought in who would otherwise have escaped.

Lt. Arthur Richard Batson, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a time when the situation was uncertain he went forward alone and cleared it up by a daring personal reconnaissance over open and fire-swept ground. He sent back a report of the greatest value, and on previous occasions he has made very valuable and gallant reconnaissances of the same nature.

Lt. Alfred Lucien Bourgue, M.G. Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of brigade machine guns. When enemy parties broke through our attacking lines he took charge of a platoon which had lost their leaders, and with exceptional gallantry and initiative led them in an attack which cleared the area of the enemy. This was his first experience in the trenches.

Lt. Loren L. Brown, Eng.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a carrying party. Coming under a heavy bombardment several of his men were killed and wounded. He dressed the wounded and put them in dug-outs, and after placing the remainder in safety he made two journeys through intense enemy barrage for stretchers, eventually succeeding in getting all his men to the dressing station. It was entirely owing to his splendid fearlessness, presence of mind and devotion that more men did not become casualties.

Lt. Nellis Victor Buchanan, Fld. Arty.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when acting as F.O.O. for his battery. He maintained his post in a forward sap continuously under heavy fire of every description, on several occasions having to go out into the open under fire to repair his line. He furnished very valuable and constant information to his battery, and was able to bring effective fire to bear upon the enemy when they came forward to reoccupy trenches which had been cleared by our raiding parties. His great coolness, courage and resource contributed very largely to the success of our operations.

Lt. Fred Gibson Butterfield, Cav.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a patrol. Although severely wounded by one of an enemy patrol whom he had pursued and captured single-handed, he continued at the head of his patrol until he collapsed, setting a magnificent example of pluck and determination to his men.

Lt. Duncan Campbell, Cav.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack upon four lines of enemy defences. He was in command of the leading squadron, and seeing that the leading troops had lost direction owing to their leader and serjeant being wounded, he went forward and rallied them to their objective. This prompt action enabled many dug-outs to be cleared, a number of prisoners to be captured, and very largely contributed to the success of the whole operation.

Lt. Henry Bruce Chown, Fld. Arty.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as F.O.O. He went forward with the first wave of an attack and continued to send back most accurate and valuable information and instructions to his battery for fifteen hours at a stretch, which enabled hostile artillery to be very effectively dealt with. He displayed great coolness and skill as well as remarkable powers of endurance.

Lt. James Turner Downey, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. Although wounded immediately after leaving our trench he continued to lead his platoon with great dash and determination, setting a splendid example of pluck and devotion to duty. On the way to the dressing station he stopped in order to give a personal account of the success of the raid at battalion headquarters.

Lt. George Wilfred Duggan, Cav.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Prior to operations against four lines of enemy defences he made daring and successful reconnaissances on four successive nights right up to the enemy's wire. By this he was eventually enabled to lead a torpedo party into the enemy's front line, and also displayed great skill and success in commanding a party which blocked an enemy counter-attack.

Lt. Richard Duncan, Mtd. Rif. and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in carrying out the duties of artillery pilot. When a hostile attack was imminent he carried out a reconnaissance at a very low altitude which enabled him to observe and report upon the position of the enemy infantry well behind their front line. He also accurately located their artillery, although his machine was much damaged by fire from the ground. He displayed splendid fearlessness and determination.

Capt. (A./Maj.) George Patrick Gordon Dunlop, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company against a strongly organised and garrisoned enemy position. His skilful reconnaissance prior to the operation, and his leadership during the fight, resulted in the success of the raid and the attaining of the objectives. Heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy, enemy dug-outs destroyed, and four enemy machine guns accounted for. He displayed exceptional skill in maintaining his communications, and his conduct throughout was conspicuous by his gallantry and powers of organisation.

Lt. Harold Eber Eastman, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a mopping-up party during a raid. Although his task was a difficult one owing to the darkness and the extent of the enemy's dug-out system, he showed fine qualities of leadership in controlling his party, and accounted for four of the enemy himself. A large number of the enemy were bombed in their dug-outs, and many dug-outs were blown up. He also captured a machine gun.

Lt. Harold Carter Garner, Engrs.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in superintending the placing and blowing up of our offensive mines under most trying conditions. Although severely wounded by shrapnel, he personally supervised the work, and by his fine example encouraged his men to carry out work which he rightly considered to be essential. His conduct throughout has always been of the same gallant description.

Lt. Charles Stuart Griffin, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in personally leading his platoon against concrete machine gun emplacements and enemy trenches in spite of heavy rifle and machine gun fire. He was completely successful in obtaining all his objectives, capturing sixteen prisoners and two machine guns. During the day he repulsed three counter-attacks. He displayed the greatest coolness and gallantry during the action and afterwards, and the success was due to his personal efforts.

Lt. George Claude Storey Johnston, Engrs.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in the completion of a jumping-off trench in advance of our front line. He had charge of this work for seven consecutive nights, during which he displayed magnificent fearlessness and resource, repeatedly passing up and down the front of the trench in order to encourage his men under very severe and harassing fire. His work in constructing advanced positions and making preparations for our attack has at all times been characterised by the utmost gallantry and tireless energy.

Lt. John Grant Knight, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in personally leading his platoon against concrete defences, three of which he captured in spite of very strong hostile opposition, also mopping up the enemy trenches and capturing fourteen prisoners. It was entirely owing to his leadership and dash that his objective was obtained, as his men had to climb over a steep embankment before they could commence the attack.

Lt. Roy Charles Lee, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After his platoon had been subjected to unexpected and intense bombardment for nearly two hours before zero hour, and suffered heavily, he reorganised them and led them to their objective with splendid fearlessness and determination, losing his platoon serjeant and all his N.C.O.s before reaching the position. He personally supervised the destruction of six deep dug-outs which contained a large number of the enemy, and, in spite of most determined enemy resistance with hand grenades, he successfully cleared their trench, making one of the most difficult parts of this operation a complete success. He displayed exceptional skill and gallantry throughout.

Lt. (A./Capt.) Alfred Barr Lindsay, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on repeated occasions during and after our attack under heavy fire. He personally directed the digging out of men who had been buried by heavy bombardment, and was the first to lead his men into the enemy trenches, passing from flank to flank encouraging them, and personally bombing a number of the enemy. He was the last to leave the enemy's trench, and afterwards organised Red Cross parties and led them forward, bringing back all our wounded. His conduct throughout the whole of the operations was exceptionally splendid and gallant, and his example was all the more valuable, inasmuch as the men had been considerably disorganised by the very violent bombardment to which they had been subjected at the outset.

Capt. James Wilson McCashin, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in handling a most difficult situation under considerable shell fire. When the light railway for which his battalion was responsible was blown up in many places by enemy shell fire, he organised working parties and effected repairs, which enabled the supply of ammunition to go forward without interruption. He exercised great qualities of leadership throughout, showed a fine example to his men, and his assistance was most valuable to his Commanding Officer.

Lt. Douglas Armstrong Mitchell, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. Although wounded in the leg just as he left the jumping-off trench, he successfully led his platoon to its objective, which was 700 yards distant, where, having inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy, he stayed with his men until the order to withdraw—two hours later—when he led them back and placed them in our lines before reporting his own wound. He has consistently shown great pluck and devotion to duty.

Lt. Henry Walter Morris, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid upon enemy trenches. Although his platoon had suffered heavily by an unexpected and intense hostile bombardment, he reorganised them and led them forward at zero hour, when he was the first man over the top, and pushed forward under intense machine gun fire to his final objective, which was reached entirely owing to his splendid personal example of fearlessness and determination.

Lt. William Wolseley Raymond, Engrs.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Accompanied by another officer, he made a personal and thorough investigation of a town under shell fire so intense that they thought it advisable to dispense with their party of eight men, and proceeded by themselves. No part of the town was left unvisited, and this although the conditions were trying in the extreme. The gallantry and coolness of this officer and his comrade were beyond all praise. He has also done very fine work in laying mines, despite very active opposition from the enemy.

Lt. (A./Capt.) John Christie Stewart, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. He commanded three platoons with great skill and determination, keeping touch on his flanks, and after mopping up two lines of enemy trenches successfully evacuating all his killed and wounded. He was the last to leave the enemy trenches.

Capt. (A./Maj.) John Stuart Erle Todd, Mtd. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a determined enemy attack upon his company. Under a heavy bombardment he coolly and deliberately made dispositions whereby he was enabled to cover the withdrawal of a working party that were out in advance of his frontage. He moved fearlessly from front to front, encouraging and inspiring his men under most trying circumstances, and his able handling of the situation resulted in the repulse of the enemy with heavy losses, and only slight casualties to his own men. His work has at all times been characterised by admirable thoroughness and quick grasp of any tactical situation.

Lt. James Baird Trotter, Cav.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack upon four lines of enemy defences. He remained with his troops for twenty hours nearly a mile in advance of our outpost line, in order to ensure the capture of the position from which our attack was to be launched. From this point he was able to seize that position, attacking and killing a strong patrol of the enemy, and thereby preventing the enemy discovering the approach of our attacking force. His skill and courage thus ensured the success of the operation.

Lt. Richard Scougall Cassels Webber, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although severely wounded in two places and suffering intense pain, he stopped on his way to the dressing station to dig out two of his platoon who were buried by a shell. He did not cease until his efforts had proved successful, working with splendid fearlessness and devotion under heavy shell fire. His coolness and determination on this and all other occasions when under fire have been most marked.

Lt. Henry Newton Wootton, Fld. Arty.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of an ammunition dump. He had ordered his men to shelter from an intense enemy bombardment, when a pile of ammunition was set alight by enemy shells. He promptly and fearlessly went out with one of his men, and separated the burning material, thereby saving the rest of the pile. He had just regained the entrance to his dug-out when he was severely wounded by a shell, which killed the man who was with him. His coolness and devotion under fire at a very critical moment set a splendid example to his men.

15017 Sqdn./S./M. Charles Johnstone Pollexfen, Cav.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid against four lines of enemy defences. At a moment when his troops were disorganised by heavy enemy rifle and grenade fire, he rallied them with great coolness and presence of mind, and charged the enemy, killing four and driving the remainder into our artillery barrage. He killed one of them himself, and by his splendid personal example and exceptional gallantry inspired his men with confidence at a critical moment, and restored the situation, enabling them to gain their objective.

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

2nd Lt. Norman Fenwick Little, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his platoon. Though he had a very short time in which to make his arrangements, his coolness and quick grasp of the situation enabled him to carry out his allotted task with efficiency and complete success. He maintained excellent control over his men, and set them a very fine example of courage and leadership. He personally killed several of the enemy, and obtained identifications.

Capt. Henry Dolphus McHugh, Cyc. Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when constructing a track. He completed his work with the utmost efficiency and thoroughness, afterwards giving valuable assistance to another officer. His exceptional coolness under fire set a splendid example to the whole of his battalion.

2nd Lt. Cuthbert Hargreaves Taylor, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his patrol with exceptional ability, and completed the task entrusted to him with thoroughness and rapidity. He has on all occasions shown himself to be a fine leader of men, and by his coolness and vigorous energy has set a splendid example to his platoon, especially at times when casualties were heavy and their task a difficult one.

2nd Lt. Thomas Lindsay Ward, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With a comrade he crossed a river by a damaged enemy pontoon, entered a village occupied by the enemy, reconnoitred it, and then entered an enemy dug-out, where he captured three prisoners and brought them back to our lines. The same night he led a patrol along the river bank and brought back a valuable report upon the state of the bridges. The extreme fearlessness and initiative which he displayed during both of these operations were responsible for much valuable information being obtained.

Lt. Edwin Royden Wells, Mtd. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his party through heavy shell fire in an attempt to gain information. Finding it impossible to take his men further owing to machine gun fire, he went forward alone, gaining valuable and definite information, and by his fine leadership and good judgment finally withdrawing his troop with very few casualties.

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of a 2nd Bar to the Distinguished Conduct Medal to the undermentioned Non-Commissioned Officer:—

240252 Sgt. C. Leadbeater (Leicester), Linc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a post on the left flank of his battalion during an attack. His position was one of great responsibility, to which, however, he proved himself thoroughly equal. He displayed the utmost energy in keeping touch and in pushing forward to harass the enemy, on one occasion leading a patrol and killing several of the enemy. Afterwards he located and attacked a hostile machine gun, and made a most gallant and successful attack against a superior force of the enemy, inflicting heavy casualties upon them. His fine personal example of fearlessness and initiative had a wonderfully inspiring effect upon his men. (D.C.M. gazetted 16th November, 1915.) (1st Bar gazetted 29th November, 1915.)

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of a Bar to the Distinguished Conduct Medal to the undermentioned Non-Commissioned Officers:—

14543 Sjt. P. Nolan (Walsall), S. Staff. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in voluntarily going a mile under shell fire to assist a platoon that was being shelled. He got them to a place of safety, and carried several casualties to the dressing station under heavy shell fire. His services have at all times been invaluable by reason of his exceptional courage and resource, which have inspired all ranks with the greatest confidence in him.

(D.C.M. gazetted 22nd September, 1916.)

8624 Cpl. (A./Sjt.) W. A. Tapsell (Abbey Wood), Linc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of battalion scouts. Having been ordered to reconnoitre in front of our advancing patrols, his party came under heavy and unexpected rifle and machine gun fire. In spite of this, however, after warning the patrols behind him, he continued to push forward until, owing to several casualties, further advance was impossible, whereupon he withdrew very skilfully with all his wounded back to our lines. Throughout the action he displayed splendid coolness and presence of mind and an utter disregard of personal safety.

(D.C.M. gazetted in this Gazette.)

5781 C./S./M. H. C. Wright (Lowestoft), E. Kent R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. A shell burst in a tunnel, burying some men and gassing others. He worked indefatigably to get them out, and, though suffering from gas himself, refused to go until ordered by an officer. His courage and energy saved several lives.

(D.C.M. gazetted 1st January, 1917.)

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the Distinguished Conduct Medal to the undermentioned Warrant Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and Men for acts of gallantry and devotion to duty in the Field:—

9637 Pte. T. Adams (Deptford, London), R. W. Kent R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when acting as company runner. He brought a message back from an isolated position, crawling for four hours on his stomach and under fire the whole way. It was the information he brought which enabled a successful attack to be carried out by his battalion the same evening. He displayed magnificent keenness and devotion to this duty, which was of a very trying nature.

267584 Pte. H. Alty (Westhead, Lancs.), L'pool R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a post. He was attacked on both flanks by superior numbers, and repulsed one party with his Lewis gun. It then jammed, and he retired to a shell hole in the rear, from which he brought rifle fire to bear on the enemy as they entered the post, finally retiring still further and regaining touch with the front line on his rear being threatened by another party of the enemy. His action disorganised the enemy's attack until reinforcements were to hand.

R/9618 Cpl. (L./Sjt.) J. H. Austin (Crawleydown, Sussex), K.R.R.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a dug-out. Though it was repeatedly blown in by enemy bombardment, he organised working parties with the greatest energy and coolness, keeping the entrance sufficiently clear to allow of observation and admit air. Later, when the place became absolutely untenable, he successfully withdrew his party, without further casualties, to our lines, displaying throughout a splendid example of cheerfulness and great presence of mind.

20626 L./Cpl. N. Bailey (Farnworth, Bolton), N. Lanc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in attempting to rescue a comrade from a blazing dug-out that had been struck by a shell. Aided by an officer, he was successful in extricating the insensible man at the second attempt, but he unfortunately died very shortly afterwards. L./Cpl. Bailey afterwards displayed the utmost fearlessness and energy in assisting to extinguish the fire.

10/17804 Sjt. (A./C.Q.M.S.) W. H. Batchelor (Stockport), Ches. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when with a ration party. He took command at a critical moment when the greatest confusion had arisen under heavy shell fire in a congested trench, reorganised the traffic, and with the assistance of an N.C.O. restored order, so that the relief which was in progress was not impeded. This had to be done under heavy and accurate shell and gas bombardment, in pitch darkness, rain and on slippery ground, and the initiative and energy of these two N.C.O.'s cannot be too highly praised.

24223 Sjt. F. Borlkin (Manchester), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when bringing up his gun and a water-cart to his battery position under heavy shell fire. At a critical moment, when the gun pole broke, he showed very great initiative and presence of mind in removing the water-cart pole and putting it into the gun, which he then brought into action. He then replaced the pole and brought the water-cart to its destination. Whilst thus engaged he ordered all the men except one to put on their gas masks and take cover.

18566 Sjt. H. Butler (Ash Vale), R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He worked continuously for thirty-six hours under heavy shell fire, and it was largely due to his daring, coolness, and splendid leading that the battlefield was so rapidly cleared of wounded.

44807 Cpl. (A./Sjt.) L. B. Castle (E. Greenwich), R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of brigade signalling. He laid all the lines under heavy shell fire, and though they were continually cut by enemy barrage, he continued to repair them, rendering most valuable service, with total disregard of danger. He was instrumental in getting the brigade forward party across a canal under heavy fire, and it was mainly due to his gallantry and devotion that the telephone service was maintained.

W/147 Drvr. W. H. Church (Bridgend, Glam.), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when bringing up ammunition to a battery position. He had four horses killed under him on different occasions, and on the last occasion was severely wounded, and his lead driver killed. In spite of this he controlled his team and carried on under heavy shelling until his wounds caused him to collapse, having set a magnificent example of pluck and devotion to duty.

200161 Sjt. R. H. C. Cooke (Liverpool), L'pool R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a daylight raid on enemy trenches. When his officer was wounded, he took command and led his platoon with complete success, capturing nine prisoners. He was wounded five times, on the first occasion whilst rendering first aid to his Commander, and he set a splendid example of gallantry and determination throughout the operation.

10161 Pte. (L./Cpl.) W. V. Cooper (Glen-garriff), I. Gds.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On his own initiative he determined to capture a blockhouse which commanded our position, and from which snipers were inflicting casualties upon our troops. Posting eight men to give him covering fire, he worked round the flank with four others, rushed the blockhouse, and killed and captured the garrison, over twenty in number. His splendid leadership and skilful disposition materially strengthened our position by the capture of this most important point.

47644 Drvr. A. Currie (Belfast), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in getting ammunition through to his gun position under difficult conditions. When the driver and the greater part of his team had been wounded, he unhooked the lead and centre horses and took the wagon on with the wheelers. The road was under very heavy fire the whole way, and but for his promptness and initiative the battery would have been short of ammunition. He has on many previous occasions displayed the utmost coolness and gallantry under trying circumstances.

21629 Sjt. J. Dugdale (Blackpool), N. Lanc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in rushing forward under heavy rifle fire to assist his officer in rescuing the pilot of an aeroplane which had fallen in "No Man's Land" some distance in front of our advanced posts. He and a stretcher-bearer succeeded in carrying the wounded pilot to safety, after the other bearer had been killed. His courage and coolness set a splendid example to all that witnessed the action.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of mortars. He remained at his post, which had become flooded with lethal gas to such an extent that the detachment had been compelled to leave in order to adjust their masks, merely adjusting the mouthpiece of his own mask. By this courageous act, and the splendid example which it afforded, the teams were induced to return, and he continued throughout to direct the serving of his own guns and of an adjacent one with complete success, keeping the fire up to the prescribed rate. His conduct has repeatedly shown similar proofs of gallantry and devotion.

191 Pte. H. Edgington (Dorking), E. Surr. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With two comrades he held a block in our trench against a strong party of the enemy at a most critical moment, when our advanced posts had been captured. Subsequently he posted himself and his comrades in shell-holes, causing such casualties to a fresh hostile attack that the enemy bolted back to cover. By the very great initiative and exceptional gallantry of these three men a very awkward situation was got well in hand.

16742 Cpl. A. J. Edwards (Liverpool), S. Lanc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when with a Lewis gun during an attack. When ordered to withdraw, all the officers having been hit, he took command of the whole company, making skilful and effective dispositions. Later, he searched "No Man's Land" for a missing officer, remaining out for a long time exposed to constant fire.

240351 Sjt. J. Elliott (South Kirby, Yorkshire), York. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion during a raid upon enemy trenches. He led his party into the trench against great opposition, successfully dealing with the enemy and setting a splendid example to all by his determination and fine leadership.

680625 B.S.M. W. Ewan (Preston), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under very heavy shell fire. He assisted in handling two of his guns to another position, and on the following night, after removing two more guns, he remained on the position till the last, superintending the loading and removal of the ammunition under an intense bombardment. He set a splendid example of fearlessness and devotion to duty.

10228 Cpl. F. C. Fairhall (Brighton), R. Suss. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a bombing sap on the flank of his battalion. He held it against a determined flame attack by the enemy, shooting all the team before they could bring their projector into action. When eventually forced to retire he did so with great skill, getting all his wounded away. Throughout the whole operation he displayed remarkable personal courage, and by his fine example greatly encouraged all who were with him.

R31544 Rfm. A. W. Faith (Vauxhall, London), K.R. Rif. C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a heavy hostile bombardment his dug-out was blown in. He and another man cleared the entrance and reached the river which was between them and safety. Finding that several of their comrades were unable to swim they crossed and recrossed the river for ropes, by means of which the whole party was safely got across. Had it not been for the courageous and resourceful action of these two men their comrades would not have escaped.

432015 Spr. H. Farnen (St. Helens), R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when at work upon a cable. A shell burst and severely wounded his fellow worker, whereupon he took him to the dressing station and returned to the cable alone. He continued to work under shell fire so violent that everyone else had taken cover, and when a shell destroyed his materials he went to fetch a further supply. On the way he picked up and carried a wounded man to the dressing station, afterwards obtaining his materials and returning again to his job. He displayed marvellous coolness and gallantry of the highest order.

240638 Sjt. J. Farrington (Bolton), N. Lanc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid on enemy trenches. He led his men with the utmost dash, and when his party was fired on from a concrete dug-out he rushed to the entrance, bayoneted two of the enemy and bombed four who were inside, killing them all. He displayed great gallantry and presence of mind at a critical moment.

10440 L./Cpl. J. Garstang (Preston), L.N. Lanc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With a comrade he established and maintained telephonic communication under conditions which rendered their work almost impossible owing to the extreme danger to which they were subjected. Heavy and direct machine gun fire, hostile barrage, and aeroplane bombardments were continuously directed upon them, but in spite of all, these two very gallant men continued to patrol the line and effect repairs which were constantly becoming necessary, thus maintaining communication between the front line and battalion headquarters at a most critical time. Their splendid determination and fearless devotion to duty cannot be too highly praised.

11339 Sjt. A. Gibson (Forfar), High. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid upon enemy trenches. He led his men through hostile wire in spite of a heavy trench mortar bombardment, afterwards going voluntarily into No Man's Land to search for missing men. He went right back into the enemy's trenches whilst the bombardment was still going on, setting a magnificent example of fearlessness and great devotion to duty.

6085 Sjt. J. R. Glare (Lambeth, London), R.W. Kent R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in holding on to a strong point for seventeen hours. After the troops on his flanks had been forced to withdraw he proceeded to bomb outwards, thus forcing the enemy to expose themselves to our fire. Serjeant Glare was foremost at all times in leading and directing the bombing, singing and cheering his men on, and displaying a very gallant spirit.

240262 L./Cpl. H. Gorse (Bolton), N. Lanc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid upon enemy trenches. He led an attack down the communication trench and bayoneted four of the enemy, afterwards carrying his wounded officer back across "No Man's Land" under a hail of snipers' bullets. His conduct won the highest praise throughout, and was worthy of the best traditions of his regiment.

240664 L./Sjt. O. Gouldthorpe (Barton-on-Humber), Linc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack he advanced single-handed against a machine gun which was firing from a house and bombed it, killing two of the gunners. Later, he established himself with a party in a forward post, under very heavy fire, from which he inflicted heavy casualties upon the enemy. Although wounded, he insisted on remaining at duty until the position was secure, displaying a very high standard of personal gallantry and leadership.

63316 Gnr. R. W. Hardwick (Nottingham), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in rescuing a comrade under very heavy shell-fire. When his wagon was wrecked and all the team killed or wounded by shell-fire, he carried a wounded comrade to the nearest dressing station. He was returning to the shelled area to remove a dead N.C.O., when he was stopped by an officer. His conduct offered a splendid instance of presence of mind, fearlessness and devotion.

18851 Pte. H. Hargreaves (Rishton, Lancs.), Shrops. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile raid. He continued to fire his Lewis gun over the top of the parapet after everyone in his platoon, including himself, had been wounded, and he continued until blown off the parapet by a shell and again wounded. His great courage and determination prevented the enemy from entering our lines at this point, and the conditions under which he worked could not have been worse. The trench was completely flattened out by an intense bombardment of heavy mortars and shells of all calibres.

M2/051606 Sjt. E. M. Hatchell (New Brighton), A.S.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He attempted to drive a car, under heavy shell-fire, to the rescue of a motor ambulance which had been hit and disabled. His car was smashed, and he then crawled along to the motor ambulance, temporarily repaired the extensive damage, and was able to drive it back to the dressing station. His great courage and exceptional resource under extremely trying circumstances were worthy of the highest praise.

18861 Pte. F. Hayes (Wigan), L. N. Lanc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when acting as stretcher-bearer. He and a comrade took out a stretcher into No Man's Land, under very heavy rifle fire, to rescue the wounded pilot of a wrecked aeroplane. His fellow-bearer was killed, but, with the assistance of a N.C.O., Pte. Hayes succeeded in carrying the wounded man back to our lines. He displayed the utmost coolness and gallantry throughout.

78894 Cpl. E. J. Hayhoe (New Southgate, London, N.), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under heavy fire. Although badly gassed, he continued to serve his mortar for six hours under heavy shell-fire, and, though his emplacement was hit three times, he repaired it and kept his gun in action. He set a magnificent example of pluck and determination.

27312 Pte. C. Hemsley (Forest Row), G. Gds.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in covering the retirement of a raiding party. He rushed forward single-handed and attacked eight of the enemy who were threatening to surround the party, thereby enabling the retirement to be carried out. He was the last man of our party to withdraw, and he carried a badly wounded comrade back to our own trenches.

23983 L./Cpl. J. A. Higson (Farnworth), L. N. Lanc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in making a valuable and very daring personal reconnaissance at a critical time, under heavy hostile barrage and aircraft fire. He crossed the open in order to do so, and brought back very valuable information as to the enemy's movements. Afterwards he swam a river with a rope to the assistance of twenty men who were unable to swim, and was instrumental in bringing them safely across. This gallant action was performed under continual hostile shell-fire.

66897 Gnr. J. R. Hill (Liverpool), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in maintaining communication under very heavy shell-fire by visual signalling when all other means had failed. After displaying great fearlessness and skill in successfully transmitting valuable messages, he found he could no longer get them through in this manner, so acted as runner, repeating his journey three times and passing through exceptionally heavy shell fire with his information. Throughout the day he was invaluable to the F.O.O. by reason of his pluck and energetic support.

10574 Pte. J. Hindle (E. Preston), L. N. Lanc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With a comrade he established and maintained telephonic communication under conditions which rendered their work almost impossible owing to the extreme danger to which they were subjected. Heavy and direct machine gun fire, hostile barrage and aeroplane bombardments were continually directed upon them, but, in spite of all, these two very gallant men continued to patrol the line and effect repairs which were constantly becoming necessary, thus maintaining communication between the front line and Battalion Head Quarters at a most critical time. Their splendid determination and fearless devotion to duty cannot be too highly praised.

241453 Pte. W. Hogarth (Mapewell, nr. Barnsley), R. Lanc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in lying up with a comrade in No Man's Land in order to examine enemy wire. Both were wounded, Pte. Hogarth severely so, so that he was almost unable to move. He, however, sent his comrade back with the required information, and dragged himself back after dark, having been hit in four places. His keenness in volunteering for patrol work and his gallantry in performing it have always been most noticeable.

L./19580 Sjt. H. Holmes (Scarborough), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of teams with ammunition. He brought them through heavy barrage, by which a team was knocked out and he himself severely wounded in the head and arm. Despite this he stopped a runaway team, reorganised the remainder, and brought them along until unable to proceed further, when he was taken to the dressing station, having ensured the delivery of the ammunition by his pluck and great devotion to duty.

241689 Cpl. J. Holt (Bolton), N. Lanc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a light trench mortar detachment. He had the important duty of covering the flank of one of our raiding parties, and when a counter-raid by the enemy came over his breastwork he attacked them vigorously with bombs and rifle fire, and, although outnumbered by five to one, compelled them to retire. Having done this, he opened fire with his mortar and fired ninety-five rounds to cover the right flank of our raiding party from the retiring enemy. This action was fought under an intense enemy barrage, and he displayed the utmost coolness and presence of mind throughout.

1209 Pte. W. Hughes (Glasinoyne, nr. Bangor), W. Gds.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when one of a liaison party with other troops. At a critical moment, when fire had been opened from a strong concrete emplacement upon the attacking troops, he charged the position himself, and was followed by the remainder, who were so inspired by his fearlessness and determination that they captured the post. His heroic action was heartily cheered by the troops with whom his party was co-operating.

11990 C.S.M. S. Jackson (Birmingham), S. Staff. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. Although not taking part in it, he went out under very heavy fire at a critical moment, having learnt that the raid was making very little progress owing to considerable opposition. He reorganised parties and led them forward, afterwards personally conducting stretcher bearers up to the enemy lines and clearing No Man's Land of wounded. His fearlessness and splendid initiative at a trying time proved invaluable to the success of the operation.

24532 Pte. S. F. Jefferies (Bristol), G. Gds.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a Lewis gun. Under heavy trench mortar fire he crept out from his post and attacked a hostile raiding party with enfilade fire, showing the greatest initiative and pluck in so doing, and bringing most effective fire to bear upon the enemy by his skilful selection of position. He has shown very great fearlessness and devotion to duty on many other occasions.

290337 C.S.M. T. Johnson (Rogerstone, nr. Newport), Mon. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst supervising working parties under a continuous heavy bombardment. His splendid courage gave the men confidence to carry on steadily with their work, and contributed very largely to its successful completion.

15650 L./Sjt. (A./Sjt.) S. Jones (Cosstessey, nr. Norwich), G. Gds.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when acting as company serjeant-major. Although wounded, he declined to leave his company until it was relieved, and his splendid courage and personal example very considerably helped his company officer in handling his men during the attack, and afterwards in the consolidation of their objective.

26262 Cpl. M. Jowett (Bradford), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst taking four guns into action. A sudden burst of fire was opened on the road, which caused heavy casualties amongst men and horses. Although suffering from poisoning by the fumes, he displayed great coolness and gallantry in attending to the wounded and clearing the road. His energy and presence of mind had a most encouraging influence on the badly shaken drivers throughout the operation, during which he himself was also wounded.

27864 L./Cpl. J. Keddle (Llangarren, Ross), Bord. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of his platoon. In spite of the forced retirement of the troops on his flanks, he held on to his position for thirty hours, under concentrated hostile fire, until relieved. His gallant action greatly facilitated the re-establishment of the line at that point, and by his courage and devotion to duty he set a splendid example to his comrades.

16404 B.S.M., J. T. E. Kendall (Leicester), R.G.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in assisting to extinguish a number of ammunition dumps which had been set alight by enemy shell fire and were already exploding heavily. But for his courageous and prompt action a great quantity of shell would have been destroyed, and other serious damage must have ensued.

49135 By. S./M. B. V. Kirby (Tewkesbury), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at a very critical moment. Whilst six ammunition wagons were being unloaded a sudden and intense fire was opened, and a scene of great confusion ensued; it was very dark, and the drivers were unable to see what to do in their gas masks. He removed his smoke helmet, and assisted the officer in charge to restore order, and by so doing saved a serious block in the traffic, which would have caused heavy casualties. His coolness and presence of mind under heavy fire set a very fine example at a time when it was most needed.

9498 Cpl. W. Hitchenman (Ripon), W. York. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a daylight raid. In spite of enemy machine gun fire he led his section on to the flank of the enemy's trench, bringing back two prisoners and accounting for several of the enemy.

1157 B. S./M. E. C. Landsberger (Aldershot), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Assisted by an officer, he succeeded in extinguishing two burning gun-pits containing ammunition. His splendid example and devotion to duty under very heavy shell fire did much to keep up the efficiency of his battery and the spirits of the men.

L./26643 Gnr. J. Laycock (Rotherham), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in keeping his mortar in action under exceptionally trying conditions. He continued to fire it under very heavy shell fire until it was buried by a heavy shell; the remainder of the team then took cover, but he got it into action again and continued to fire until it was put out of action by a direct hit, which also wounded him in the forehead. He displayed a splendid example of pluck and determination throughout.

16222 Pte. E. S. Lee (Upholland, Wigan), Manch. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a Lewis gun team. He and his gun and men were buried by a shell, whereupon he extricated himself and his gun and rendered great assistance in digging out and attending to the wounded. On another occasion he left his dug-out to help a wounded man, was blown back by a shell, but, nevertheless, returned and rescued his comrade. He also extinguished a heap of burning ammunition, and on all occasions he has shown the greatest fearlessness and gallantry.

91489 Bmbr. W. R. Lewis (Brecon), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in endeavouring to extinguish a burning ammunition dump at imminent personal risk. Heat and violent explosion eventually compelled him to retire, but by his disregard of danger and admirable energy in pouring water on the flames he saved a large quantity of bombs and other ammunition.

24785 Pte. R. J. Logan (Clydach-on-Tawe), R.W. Kent R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in extinguishing a burning shelter which had been set alight by the explosion of a cartridge dump. He performed this very plucky action under heavy shell fire, clearing away the burning material with his hands and getting severely burned in doing so. He was also wounded whilst so employed. His gallantry and devotion saved the lives of several of his comrades who were sleeping in the shelter at the time.

10053 Sjt. J. McAulay (Plean, Stirlingshire), S. Gds.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his platoon after his officer had been killed. He cleared two strongly held dug-outs, killing all their occupants, and whenever a sniper's post was located he made for it and accounted for several single-handed. Throughout the whole day he displayed magnificent courage.

12813 Pte. J. McDougall (Almondbank, Perthshire), S. Gds.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After all the stretcher-bearers had become casualties he made three journeys with wounded men from the outpost line to the aid post, under continuous and heavy shell fire. During the attack, when the whole of his section were knocked out before reaching the first objective, he picked up the Lewis gun and as much ammunition as he could carry, took it forward to the second objective, and brought it into action. His gallantry and determination set a splendid example to all.

28104 Artificer Cpl. (M. Cyclist) A. MacKinnon (Kilpheder), R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in carrying an important despatch from Brigade to Divisional Headquarters, a distance of over six miles, under heavy shell fire and with a severe wound in his leg. On arrival he had to be lifted off his machine, when he collapsed from loss of blood. It was owing to his disregard of danger and great devotion to duty that important information was delivered at a time when all other means of communication had been interrupted.

48262 Sjt. S. W. Mackrill (Bexley Heath, Kent), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in proceeding at imminent risk of his life to the rescue of comrades who had been wounded and buried by hostile shell fire in a wrecked shelter. He dressed the wounded under heavy shell fire the whole time, during which he and men who were helping him in his gallant work improvised a stretcher and got the casualties away from the position.

4804 C.S.M. J. McQuillan (Glasgow), H.L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, under a heavy gas bombardment, in visiting all the posts of a garrison at very great personal risk and encouraging the men, who were considerably shaken and confused by the gas. Afterwards he conducted a ration party with hot meals through the enemy's barrage to the same garrison, and finally went out to an advanced sap and repaired our wire during a heavy bombardment. His conduct throughout was marked by the very finest initiative and fearless disregard of danger.

T.Z.2901 P.O. P. Manning (Westerhope), R.N.V.R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of bombers on the left flank of a raiding party. He displayed great energy in attacking the enemy, of whom he killed three and captured three. By his coolness and determination he effectively protected the flank during the operation.

27223 Sjt. A. Mansfield (Rogate, Sussex), North'n R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He helped to form a defensive position at a very critical moment when our line was broken, and thereby held the enemy back for a considerable time. When his battalion was nearly surrounded by the enemy and casualties were very heavy, he made his way through intense hostile barrage to another battalion and explained the situation; by so doing he enabled the enemy's further advance to be checked. He finally returned to our lines with most valuable information, having set a magnificent example of initiative and devotion.

200021 C./S./M. A. E. Maplethorpe (Lincoln), Linc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of carrying parties for a company in the attack. He showed the utmost fearlessness and disregard of the shelling, which was heavy and continuous. Later, he went forward under heavy fire and reorganised a line of posts which had been blown out of their positions by a heavy bombardment, displaying again on this occasion the greatest courage and energy.

3643 Sjt. B. Massey (Newcastle-on-Tyne), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in entering a dug-out and bringing out four comrades who had been gassed and wounded by the explosion of a shell. Two of them have since died, but he undoubtedly saved the lives of the other two by his promptness and gallantry under heavy shell fire and gas.

836764 Sjt. W. Moffat (Kirkliston), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in working a mortar single-handed under heavy fire for several hours. When an enemy shell wrecked his emplacement, he rebuilt it without assistance in fifteen minutes and continued firing, though suffering from gas fumes and severely shaken. He displayed a magnificent example of pluck and determination.

352061 Sjt. F. A. Moon (Loughton, Essex), Lond. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid on a farm held by the enemy. He displayed the utmost calmness under heavy artillery fire, and, though wounded, he was the first to reach the objective, which he bombed with great vigour and determination. His fine example was of the greatest assistance in making the raid a success. He was seriously wounded again whilst returning to our lines through heavy enemy barrage.

50816 Gnr. (A./Bomdr.) T. W. Oswald, (Wheatley Hill), R.G.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under an intense and accurate enemy bombardment. Noticing that the camouflage had been set on fire, he rushed across the open amidst bursting shells to assist in extinguishing the flames. On his way back he again passed over exposed ground under heavy shell fire to assist his battery serjt.-major in removing a wounded comrade. He set a magnificent example of pluck and fearless devotion to duty.

201697 L./Cpl. J. A. Parker (Hecklington, Lincs), Linc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He saw a comrade wounded in a shell hole, after he had withdrawn the safety pin from a grenade. Realising that the man would probably be killed by the explosion, he jumped into the shell hole in a gallant endeavour to throw the grenade away. He was, however, too late, and was severely wounded himself when the grenade exploded. His act of devotion was beyond all praise.

L./27996 Gnr. W. S. Perry (Elland), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in trying to enter a destroyed dug-out which was full of gas in order to save an officer and two gunners who were lying unconscious inside. He was eventually carried unconscious to hospital, having endeavoured with the utmost heroism to force his way into the dug-out, until completely overcome by gas himself. He displayed utter disregard for his own safety, and performed this act of gallantry under a heavy enemy bombardment.

341033 A./L./Cpl. T. Pinkney (Vickers-town, Walney), R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when engaged in loading wounded on a motor ambulance. Coming under heavy shell fire, he continued to attend to the wounded with great gallantry and coolness, although twice men were killed beside him and the driver of the car was wounded. The car was also damaged, but he procured assistance in loading it up and then drove it himself under heavy fire to the Main Dressing Station, though his experience of driving cars was very slight. His conduct was magnificent throughout.

113077 Sjt. G. E. Poole (Buxton), R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a sub-section and four mortars. His officer having been wounded, he successfully carried on, in spite of numerous casualties, under an intense bombardment, during which two of his mortars were knocked out, by his tenacity and unflinching devotion to duty setting a magnificent example to all.

548149 Sjt. J. T. Preston (Greenwich, London, S.E.), R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on two occasions, when engaged in constructing concrete works under heavy shell fire. His exceptionally fine example enabled his work to be successfully completed, and so great was his keenness that he stayed on after his party had been relieved, continuing to work upon a dug-out until it was done, and during heavy shelling remaining outside the dug-out because there was not room for himself as well as his party inside. He was hit by a splinter, but did not leave until all was in order.

26962 Pte. H. W. Prior (Stansted, Essex), Essex R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile bombing attack. To check this he piled up ration bags, and sitting behind them fired over 100 rounds at the enemy, forcing them to build a bomb-stop. He then built a bomb-stop, which he held all day, and his action saved the whole of his platoon and enabled them to get back to our lines. His gallantry and determination were beyond all praise.

2361 Pte. J. O. Pritchard (Carnarvon), W. Gds.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in guiding a platoon of a relieving battalion to the front line, through a very heavy barrage, although wounded in fifteen different places early during the operation. He covered in all a distance of over three miles, and it was entirely due to his pluck and determination that a large section of the front line was relieved. He refused to have his wounds attended to until he had carried out his duty, after which he was carried back to the dressing station on a stretcher.

14873 Cpl. H. Randall (Notting Hill, London, W.), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an infantry attack. He personally shot with his revolver an enemy officer, and took five men prisoners. He then returned to the attack, and assisted to bomb and surround an enemy dug-out, in which a number of prisoners were captured. It was mainly owing to his gallantry and determined offensive spirit that this operation was successful.

795382 Sjt. E. Richardson (Bradford), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when under heavy gas shell bombardment with his battery. Amidst terrible gas fumes he left his dug-out, and went to the assistance of four men who had been buried in the adjoining one. Assisted by three others he extricated a badly injured man and carried him to the dressing station all the while under a heavy and ceaseless shower of gas shells. The following day he went out into the open to the rescue of his battery commander, who had been seriously wounded and lay helpless and exposed to heavy shell fire. His conduct throughout a strenuous and lengthy bombardment has been magnificent.

93487 2nd Cpl. A. Ritchie (E. Glasgow), R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading a party to repair a bridge under continuous and accurate enemy shell fire. He replaced casualties and completed the work with great initiative and courage. Shortly afterwards, whilst repairing another bridge, he was blown into the river by a shell, but though very severely shaken, he continued to work unceasingly, displaying marvellous pluck and determination.

48823 B.S.M. E. H. Simmonds (Leytonstone), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in assisting his officer to clear the road of dead and wounded men and horses at a moment when his battery had been thrown into great confusion, coming under heavy fire whilst changing position. His coolness and energy were of great assistance to his officer in controlling the remaining vehicles under fire.

18687 Sjt. E. B. Smith (Hednesford, Staffs.), S. Staff. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a platoon. Coming under heavy shell fire he split it up into small parties and personally conducted each out of the shelled area. He then returned and carried a wounded man to a dug-out, afterwards proceeding to dig out three men who had been buried. He was successful in this, and his splendid gallantry under heavy shell fire cannot be too highly praised.

4582 C.S.M. J. D. Smith (Glasgow), H.L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an intense hostile bombardment of a farm. He kept continually going round the posts, heedless of personal risk, and although twice knocked down and partially buried he kept on at his duty encouraging all N.C.Os. and men to "stand to" at a critical stage. His gallant conduct was largely instrumental in the successful defence of the farm.

15426 Sjt. T. Southworth (Accrington), E. Lan. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack on enemy trenches. Having followed his officer into the enemy lines he killed three of the enemy, and when his officer was wounded took command, leading his platoon ably during the subsequent operations. He did splendid work in consolidating the position, and his personal example had much to do with the success of the attack.

19043 Spr. (A./L./Cpl.) J. Stevenson (Southampton, E.), R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in surveying battery positions under shell fire. He completed his work with accuracy and success, notably on one occasion when he was in the midst of heavy hostile shelling.

86483 Spr. J. Stewart (Dundee), R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy had entered one of our mine galleries he and an officer attacked them with revolvers and caused them to retire. A mine was then exploded within a few feet, and his officer was overcome by gas, but, though badly shaken himself, Spr. Stewart assisted to rescue the officer until overcome by gas himself. It was due to the daring and gallant manner in which he assisted his officer that the enemy failed to secure a large portion of our mine galleries.

8536 Sjt. A. Sturgess (Reading), R. Berks. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid on enemy trenches. He attacked a machine gun single-handed, putting it out of action and killing and dispersing the team with bombs. He afterwards carried a wounded comrade back to our lines, having shown throughout the operation great dash and a fine disregard of danger.

89 Sjt. T. J. Tanner (Ipswich), Manch. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a torpedo party. He was of invaluable assistance to his officer, inserting and firing the torpedo under close range revolver and rifle fire. He afterwards remained out and assisted the raiding party through our own wire, though twice wounded during the operations. He displayed great gallantry and fearlessness under very trying conditions.

8624 Cpl. (A./Sjt.) W. A. Tapsell (Abbey Wood), Linc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in assisting to dig out nineteen men who had been buried in a dug-out by a gas shell. Finding it impossible, owing to the darkness, to work in a gas helmet, at imminent risk of his life he removed his own, and by his efforts successfully extricated some of the men. The dug-out was full of lethal gas fumes, and six of the men affected subsequently died. He set a splendid example of fearless devotion and self-sacrifice.

242630 Cpl. T. W. Taylor (Escombe), York. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy night attack upon our trenches. Although his bombing section was cut off from the rest of the company, he held on and bombed the attacking enemy from the rear, inflicting considerable casualties. By his coolness and courage he set an excellent example, and was responsible for the gallant conduct of his section.

37096 Spr. W. H. Thomas (Plaiستow), R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in establishing and maintaining telegraphic communication under a heavy bombardment, and over exposed ground, during which he was constantly fired on by hostile aeroplanes at close range. His work was completed by sheer pluck and determination, and he patrolled the line at night at great personal risk, in order to maintain communication.

M1/5696 Pte. (A./Cpl.) A. R. Wadsworth (Upper Holloway, London, N.), A.S.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when, with lorries which were loaded with ammunition a block of traffic occurred, and great confusion ensued owing to heavy shell-fire, all the drivers except one leaving their lorries to take cover. He remained at his post, reversed his lorry, and took it out of danger, eventually by his own efforts saving four lorries from destruction. During this operation he had to take cover in a ditch, where he remained for 2½ hours. He displayed exceptional gallantry and presence of mind.

13713 L./Sjt. T. J. Waterfall (Manchester), G. Gde.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a raiding party. Although seriously wounded in five places, he exhibited such valour, offensive spirit and powers of endurance that he succeeded in overcoming a numerically superior enemy and inflicted such losses on them that he was enabled to withdraw his party, amongst whom were three stretcher cases, to our trenches. His sound tactical dispositions frustrated an attempt to outflank his party, and he refused to be attended to until he had rendered a report of his raid to Hd. Qrs.

37748 Sjt. J. H. Williamson (W. Ealing, London), R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a working party. He kept them together under heavy shell fire, by which two of his gunners were wounded and the whole party badly shaken. By his courage and coolness the wounded were attended to and brought back to the dressing station under heavy shell fire. He set a very fine example.

13868 Sjt. (A/C.S.M.) G. A. Wills (Colchester), R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when engaged in laying cables. On account of its extreme urgency he persevered with his work under heavy shell fire, by his splendid example inducing the men of his working party to accomplish the task with complete success. He was finally very dangerously wounded.

35168 Sjt. H. Wood (Horbury, near Wakefield), E. York. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid upon enemy trenches. When his company commander was severely wounded he took command, and not only directed the withdrawal but carried his officer back for a considerable distance, bringing up the rear in spite of the enemy continuing to attack. His pluck and devotion were most marked.

240321 C.S.M. W. Wright (Bentley, Doncaster), Yorks. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. When in charge of a torpedo party he was responsible for laying the charges under the enemy wire. This duty he performed with the greatest skill and courage, though under constant fire at close range, afterwards laying out the tapes from our line to the point of entry into the enemy's line with equal success, though under continuous machine gun fire. He set a splendid example of determination and fearlessness.

93336 C./S./M. W. B. Young (E. Glasgow), R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a dump of stores. Although it was practically blotted out by a heavy enemy bombardment, he remained at his post, calmly and courageously issuing stores the whole time, and thus enabling the maintenance of bridges and communications to proceed without any delay. His devotion to duty and powers of organisation were invaluable.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

30 Sjt. T. Johnson, Arty.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in continually keeping his gun in action under the most trying conditions. His great courage and fine personal example under heavy shell and machine gun fire and hostile aircraft attacks were magnificent. He displayed great skill and resource in improvising loading stores, and carrying on until his gun was put out of action. He then personally attended to the wounded, carrying them to a place of safety under heavy shell fire at the imminent risk of his own life.

CANADIAN FORCE.

14445 L./Cpl. C. H. Atcherley, Cav.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a torpedo party.

During an attack upon four lines of enemy defences he pushed forward into our barrage and destroyed the enemy's wire, took his party through the gap and established a block in the enemy trench to prevent a counter-attack. His prompt and gallant action ensured a rapid passage of our main body into the enemy's trench, and undoubtedly saved many casualties, as the enemy's barrage opened on the wire immediately after our attacking party had entered the trench.

724051 Sjt. R. P. Barr, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of bombers. At a critical moment he established a block on an exposed flank, and with great gallantry and determination held in check superior numbers of the enemy until artillery support could be obtained. Throughout the entire action he encouraged his small party by his cheerfulness and personal example, undoubtedly giving the enemy the impression that the block was held in much greater strength than was actually the case.

129435 Sjt. W. R. Brown, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in carrying out a daylight reconnaissance prior to an attack. He encountered an enemy bombing party of four, two of whom he killed after a stiff fight, in which they rushed and endeavoured to bomb him. The information obtained by himself and his officer during this reconnaissance was of inestimable value, and largely due to his great coolness and pluck when faced by an awkward situation.

700317 Pte. G. H. Congdon, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in taking his gun forward to an exposed position and continuing to work it with a comrade after the rest of his team had become casualties. They repulsed a counter-attack and secured the position, and on his comrade becoming a casualty Private Congdon stood by his gun single-handed for 24 hours until both he and the gun were knocked out. He set a magnificent example of courage and devotion to duty.

117059 Cpl. J. Crouch, Cav.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of four bombers. He attacked and silenced an enemy machine gun which was firing at close range, afterwards attacking and inflicting heavy casualties upon a large party of the enemy, killing six, capturing twenty-two, and driving the remainder into our barrage. He then rejoined and reorganised his troop, which was without a leader, and took command, bombing sixteen dug-outs and displaying magnificent fearlessness and determination throughout.

117032 Cpl. C. R. Keene, Cav.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading a torpedo party under heavy hostile fire of every description, and clearing a way through two lines of enemy wire. He afterwards took his party through the gap and established a block, successfully preventing any attempt at counter-attack by the enemy, and he held this block, with his two men, until all three were wounded, having displayed exceptional courage and initiative.

703313 Sjt. Z. Kirby, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He repeatedly led his company, in the face of heavy machine gun and rifle fire, against enemy wire, taking the lead himself in the endeavour to clear the way. He afterwards was of the greatest service to his Platoon Commander, taking charge when he became a casualty, and displaying splendid energy and resource in holding a difficult position. He held out until so exhausted that he had to be carried out to rest, having shown most indomitable spirit throughout the day.

684010 Sjt. W. McCandlish, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. When his platoon was held up by a hostile machine gun, he skillfully surrounded and put the gun and its crew out of action, personally leading a bombing party round their flank under heavy fire with the utmost determination.

14926 Sqdn. S./M. A. McCorquodale, Cav.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack upon four lines of enemy defences. He was first through the enemy's wire, bombing four dug-outs himself, and assisting the evacuation of wounded under fire with the greatest coolness and disregard of danger. With the Commander, he was the last to leave the enemy position, having made a careful search over the whole area to ensure that no wounded or dead had been left behind.

222416 A./Sjt. A. R. MacNeil, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack, and the subsequent consolidation, he handled his men with the utmost skill, showing great courage and a quick initiative in placing posts where they were required. During the night he secured valuable information by patrolling the ground to his front, and on the following day he went out with a daylight patrol under heavy machine-gun fire, though he had already been on duty continuously for thirty-six hours, and taken part in two attacks. He showed a very fine spirit of keenness and devotion to duty.

129382 L./Cpl. (A./Cpl.) C. D. Nicol, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a Lewis gun team. Though suffering severe casualties from heavy machine gun fire from both flanks, he brought his gun into action and held the enemy in check. His gun becoming temporarily disabled, he maintained his position by rifle fire with his section, afterwards establishing a block at an important point and successfully consolidating his position. Throughout the action he displayed the utmost coolness, and set a splendid example to his men.

2587 Sjt. W. S. Parkinson, Cav

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack upon four lines of enemy defences. He led a bombing party with great dash, clearing 600 yards of enemy trench and bombing nineteen dug-outs himself, afterwards establishing a block with remarkable rapidity and preventing the enemy from making any further organised resistance. He displayed boundless energy and fearlessness.

153318 A./Sjt. F. Wigston, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Regardless of danger, he led a platoon into an enemy trench, afterwards rallying men who were considerably shaken by the explosion of a mine, and with them rushing another trench. He bayoneted the enemy who had fired the mine, and by his initiative and fine personal example enabled his platoon to reach their objective.

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

10/1466 Sjt. C. N. Devery, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company in an attack. He established two posts and defended them against counter-attack in overwhelming force. Just before withdrawing, he successfully made his way through heavy barrage with an order from his Company Commander to the supports. He set a brilliant example of gallantry and determination.

10/4215 Pte. M. Vesty, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in charge of a Lewis gun team. Left alone with the gun, he dispersed an enemy attack single-handed, inflicting many casualties upon them. By his coolness and great gallantry he undoubtedly saved the lives of his comrades, besides most effectively holding up a counter-attack at a critical moment. He set a splendid example of devotion to duty.
