

the enemy with his rifle. Later, he volunteered to bring back information, and successfully got through, though it seemed certain death.

4374 Sjt. T. L. Bowler, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in reorganising the company, together with another N.C.O., after all the officers had become casualties, and leading it forward to the final objective. On another occasion, after all the officers were casualties, he established his men in a most forward position, and hung on, under heavy fire, until ordered to withdraw after dark.

550 Sjt. H. A. Boys, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty with the battalion transport. The pack train was heavily shelled every day, and it was entirely due to coolness and prompt action that the pack animals were brought through the hostile barrage. When some of his animals were wounded he was instrumental in clearing the road and preventing a dangerous congestion of traffic.

123 Sjt. E. R. Bregenzer, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in reorganising his platoon after the officer had been killed. When the advance was checked by an enemy post he rushed forward, bombed the machine gun and captured fifteen prisoners. His dash and determination materially contributed to the establishment of our line in its new position.

618 C.S.M. J. L. Brown, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. When all the officers but one of his company became casualties he was largely responsible for its reorganisation under intense artillery fire. His control of the men and splendid example contributed greatly to the success achieved.

1919 Cpl. P. C. Callahan, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great dash and gallantry in an attack on a crater. He gallantly led his section forward, and in face of strong resistance bombed an enemy post and captured seventeen prisoners.

1096 Cpl. A. W. Cavanagh, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. When the advance to the second objective was held up, he organised and led a party against the enemy's position. Though wounded early in the attack, he remained at duty, and, single-handed, rushed a concrete shelter, putting the whole garrison of twenty out of action, thus allowing the advance to continue. He remained with his men until after the final objective had been consolidated, and by his courage and coolness set a splendid example to all ranks.

11 S./M. E. Clark, A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He constantly supervised the relays of ambulance bearers and the forwarding of stores and rations to the regimental aid posts. While engaged in this work his party came under heavy shell fire, and casualties were caused. He dressed a wounded man and got him to a place of safety, and then carried on, sending forward urgent stores. His coolness and contempt of danger kept the men together at a critical time.

250 Spr. (T./2nd Cpl.) D. T. Curdie, Engrs.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was one of a party engaged in the construction of a strong point, and when the two senior N.C.O.'s became casualties, he took charge, and set a fine example to his party, labouring almost to the point of exhaustion. Having returned about two and a half miles with his section, he volunteered to guide another working party back to the strong point across a heavily shelled area. It was owing to his skill, determination, and courage that the party was able to reach its position.

289 Pte. J. J. Doherty, M.G. Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. As a scout he gained most valuable information, which greatly assisted in the machine-gun work, and continually passed through heavy barrages when carrying messages. With another man he captured a machine gun and seven prisoners, and showed splendid courage and initiative.

1933 Pte. F. M. Fitzpatrick, M.G.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In an attack the man carrying the gun was wounded, and the gun left in the mud. He took his gun crew to the objective, and then went back under heavy fire and fetched the gun. When heavy artillery fire was concentrated on his guns, he moved them forward, and so escaped the bulk of the shelling. On being relieved, two men being badly wounded, he remained behind, bandaged them up and carried them to cover under a very heavy barrage.

594 C.S.M. F. J. Fleet, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his company with great skill during the consolidation of the final objective. He organised the ammunition supply, and arranged the wiring of the position under intense artillery fire. He set a splendid example to his men.

603 L./Cpl. L. G. A. Good, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When an enemy machine gunner killed his serjeant, he leaped out and bombed the position, killing the gun crew and capturing the gun. He then rallied the men and led them in the assault on the final objective.

378 Sjt. T. W. Gooda, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in helping to keep his company together under most trying conditions. With a very few men he pushed on to a strong point, rushed it, and captured many prisoners and several machine guns.

3323 L./Cpl. F. W. Goodland, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a Lewis gun section. The whole of his section were put out of action by an enemy barrage at the assembly position, but he got his gun and some
