

Lt. Gerald Esmond MacAlevy, R.A.M.C.,
Spec. Res.

For great gallantry and resource in evacuating casualties from rear aid posts under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire. Though frequently forced to move on account of hostile fire, he never lost touch with any of them, and it was entirely due to his untiring devotion that all the casualties were safely cleared.

Lt. Douglas John MacAndrew, H.A.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. Under heavy fire at close range, after the teams had been rendered immobile owing to the number of horses killed, and the order had been given to abandon the guns, he assisted in unhooking the remaining horses and helped the drivers to get away. He then assisted and remained with the wounded until ordered to withdraw.

T./2nd Lt. Raymond John Machin, W.
Rid. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took command of the company when the commander was wounded and led them forward. In spite of a painful wound he brought them to the objective and consolidated, remaining at his post for twenty-four hours until ordered to the dressing station. His example of courage and endurance greatly inspired his men.

Lt. (A./Capt.) George Ogilvie Mackenzie,
Ches. R., attd. Tank Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and initiative with his section of Tanks in action. On one occasion the Tank he was in received three direct hits. Although twice wounded he continued to guide his section in spite of heavy shelling, and successfully led the attacking infantry to their objectives. Again, when his Tank was disabled by shell fire, he joined the infantry and led a party to silence a hostile machine gun.

T./2nd Lt. Morris Hubert Acland Madge,
M.G.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and skill. The able manner in which he handled his section of machine guns enabled him to silence many of the enemy's machine guns, and he contributed greatly to the success of the operation. His example of coolness and complete disregard of danger did much to encourage the men under his command.

Capt. Francis Kearsley Mallett, N. Lan. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst commanding his company. On several occasions he rallied his men under heavy shell fire, and conducted the withdrawal of his company when ordered to do so with the greatest ability and success. He set a fine example of courage to all under his command, and was largely responsible for the good results obtained.

2nd Lt. Laurence Arthur Manly, Lanc.
Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. He led men forward with great determination in face of heavy fire, and held his post gallantly when the enemy counter-attacked. Throughout he showed great disregard for his personal safety, and set a very fine example to his men.

T./2nd Lt. Henry Eden Allan Marindin,
Shrops. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With his platoon he successfully rushed and captured an enemy strong point, killing some of the garrison and capturing four prisoners and a machine gun. The success of the enterprise was mainly due to his courage and fine leadership.

2nd Lieut. Frank Kitson Marsden, West
Riding R.

For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership. When his platoon had suffered heavy casualties he pressed forward and reached the objective, which he held with only two men until reinforcements arrived. When his company commander was wounded he took command of the company, and inspiring his men, who were worn and tired, with his own resolution, he led them forward to the final objective. His fine example of courage and leadership greatly helped the men during hard fighting.

T./2nd Lt. John Matthew Marshall,
North'd Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry in a raid. He dashed into an enemy post, shot eight of them and bombed a machine gun. He was then blown up by the explosion of a shell and had to be carried back. He behaved with splendid courage and determination.

Lt. Frederick Charles Mason, D. of Corn.
L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He led his platoon forward under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire, and did most valuable work, showing great coolness and determination and sending back valuable information.

T./2nd Lt. Henry James Mason, Essex R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He led his platoon splendidly, attacking and destroying three enemy machine-gun positions and killing the crews. He rendered most valuable assistance during consolidation of the final objective, and his conduct throughout was marked by courage and cheerfulness.

Temp. Lt. John Norman Mason, Reserve
R. of Cav.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the squadron was suddenly fired on at daybreak he collected three men on the spur of the moment and charged a large body of the enemy with drawn swords, inflicting several casualties and putting them to flight. He then fought his way back, assisting one of his wounded men some way until the man died. Thanks to his courage and determination, his squadron leader had time to rally his squadron and consolidate his position.
