Whitehall, December 19, 1922.

The KING has been pleased to award the Albert Medal to Havildar Major Rur Singh, 48th Pioneers, in recognition of his gallantry in saving and endeavouring to save life at Chagmalai in October of last year.

On October 18th, 1921, in the course of operations in Waziristan, a party of men were crossing the Shahur Tangi, and had reached some high ground in mid-stream, when they were cut off by a sudden rise of the water. The river rapidly became a roaring torrent; five of the men were swept away, and it seemed that the remainder were doomed. Havildar Major Rur Singh made several attempts to swim out with a rope, and eventually succeeded in reaching the men, but they were then exhausted and, the river rising still higher, the whole party was swept away. One man to whom the rope was handed by Rur Singh was pulled to the bank, while Rur Singh himself was washed as some distance down the stream alive, but considerably battered.
