ROBERT LONG, Col. Adj. Gen.

Mr LORD,

Middleburgh, 3d Aug 1809.

Since my letter of yesterday's date, I have received intelligence from Lieutenant-General Sir John Hope, of his having occupied Batz, and taken possession of the whole island of South Bceveland.

I have also the satisfaction to acquaint your Lordship, that upon the batteries being prepared to open, the fortress of Ramakins surrendered this evening, and I have the honour to inclose the articles of capitulation.

I have the honour to be, &c.

(Signed) CHATHAM.

To the Lord Viscount Castlereagh, &c.

TERMS of CAPITULATION of the Fortress of Ramakins, 3d August 1809.

Art. I. The garrison surrenders prisoners of war, with every thing that belongs to the fortress, whether ammunition, cannon, or government stores belonging to the French and Dutch, of every sort and kind.

Art. II. The garrison will lay down their arms this moment; and are to be disposed of as the British government chooses, and as has been the custom of war.

Art. III. The officers will be allowed to keep their swords, and will, with their soldiers, be permitted to keep their private baggage.

(Signed) ALEX. M. FRASER, Lieutenant-General, commanding his Britannic Majesty's troops before Ramakins.
WOUNIER, Captain-Commandant.

Strength of the Garrison.

2 captains, 1 lieutenant, 4 sergeants, 7 corporals, 2 drummers, 111 privates.

Total 127.

ADMIRALTY-OFFICE, AUGUST 7, 1809.

Lieutenant James Duncan, commanding his Majesty's hired cutter the Idas, arrived yesterday evening at this office with dispatches from Sir Richard John Strachan, Bart. and K. B. Rear-Admiral of the White, &c. addressed to the Honourable William Wellesley Pole, of which the following are copies.

*Venerable, off the Veer Gat,
August 4, 1809.*

SIR,

You have been already acquainted that I had hoisted my flag in the Amethyst, and that it was my intention to have preceded the expedition, in company with the Venerable, on board which ship Lord Chatham had embarked; but finding the public service might suffer from the Commanders in Chief being separated, I therefore shifted to the Venerable, and sailed from the Downs at daylight on the 28th ultimo.

I have now to acquaint you, for their Lordships information, of my arrival on the evening of that day in the Stone Deep, with the Amethyst and several smaller vessels, where I was joined by the Fisgard, Captain Bolton, who had with great judgment placed vessels on the various shoals off this coast. After dark, Lieutenant Groves of this ship, with some skilful pilots, in Deal boats, were dispatched to sound the Roompot channel, and to station vessels at its entrance.

Early next morning, the 29th, the division of Lieutenant-General Sir John Hope, conducted by Captain Bathurst in the Salsette, joined me, as did also Rear-Admiral Sir Richard Keats in the Superb. This zealous officer had the command of the blockading squadron off the entrance of the Scheldt, but observing the armament pass, he, with his usual promptitude, left that squadron under the orders of Lord Godier, and resumed the charge of Sir John Hope's division; I therefore directed the Rear-Admiral to shift his flag to the Salsette, and to proceed to the Roompot.

The entrance to that channel is very narrow, and as I was aware of Sir Home Popham's local knowledge of the insular navigation before me, I entrusted to that officer the service of leading Sir Richard Keats' division in, and which he did with great skill in the Sabrina, Captain Kirtoc; the whole were anchored in safety opposite Zeebruggen, situated between the islands of Schooten and North Beveland.

The afternoon Rear-Admiral Otway, with the left wing of the army, under Sir Eyre Coote, joined me in the Stone Deep, but it blew too fresh to have any communication.

On the morning of the 30th, Sir Home Popham returned with a letter from Sir Richard Keats, acquainting me that the division under his charge were all safely anchored; and I was likewise informed that there was sufficient space in the Roompot to contain all the ships, to which anchorage Sir Home Popham undertook to conduct them; and as it blew fresh, with all the appearance of an approaching gale, the squadron was instantly got under sail, and led in by the Venerable, when they all came to in safety off the Veere Gat.

As soon as the ships were secured, measures were instantly taken to prepare to land the army on the island of Walcheren. I did not wait for the gun-boats coming up, but ordered those who happened to be near the Venerable, together with the mortar brigs, to push in shore to cover the landing, and to force the Derhaak battery.

At half past four the boats put off under the direction of Lord Amelius Beauclerc, of the Royal Oak, and Captain Cockburn, of the Belleisle, and the troops were landed in excellent order without opposition; the firing from the mortar and gun vessels having driven the enemy completely from the Derhaak battery.

Having thus accomplished this first object, I lost no time in directing the bombs and gun vessels to proceed up the Veere Gat, off Camvere, and having given Sir Home Popham, who at the request of Lord Chatham had remained on shore with his Lordship, permission to employ them as the service might require, he the next morning began to cannonade Camvere, which had been summoned, but held out. The fire of the gun boats was exceedingly well directed, and did much damage to the town.

The officers and crews engaged in that service had a great claim to my admiration for their conduct. Three of our gun boats were sunk. In the afternoon it blew fresh, and as the strength of the tide prevented the bombs from acting, I directed the flotilla to fall back, preserving a menacing position.

At night, Captain Richardson of the Cæsar, who was in the Dyke on shore, threw some rockets at the nearest battery of Camvere, and soon after the commanding officer of the town sent out an offer to surrender. A copy of the terms acceded to by Lieutenant-General Fraser, and Captain Richardson, the senior naval officer on the spot, accompanies this letter.*

The army under Sir John Hope landed at south Beveland on the 1st of this month, and by a letter from Sir Richard Keats, of yesterday's date, I find the whole of the island is in our possession; the enemy's ships are all above Lillo, and those most advanced, as high up as Antwerp.

We are getting our flotilla through the Slough into the Western Scheldt, to prevent succours being thrown into Flushing by the canal of Ghent.

When the Rammekins battery is taken, we hope to pass the lighter vessels to the Western Scheldt, for the purpose of following up the other objects of the expedition.

I cannot conclude this letter without acknowledging the assistance I have received from Rear-Admiral Otway; and how much I approve of the arrangements he made for landing the division under Sir Eyre Coote, which was carried into effect by Lord Emelius Beauclerc, and Captain Cockburn, with much skill and activity. Sir Richard Keats, in the execution of the arduous duties he has had to perform, has shewn his accustomed zeal and judgment.

The captains, officers, and crews of his Majesty's ships are indefatigable in the execution of their respective duties, and I have much pleasure in adding, that there is a most perfect co-operation of the army and navy.

I have, &c.

R. J. STRACHAN.

P. S. I send this by Lieutenant Duncan, whose cutter, the Idas, was close in shore, and covered the landing.

SIR,

Venerable, off the Veer Gatt,
5th August 1809.

It is with great satisfaction that I am enabled to inclose, for their Lordships information, a copy of the capitulation of the fort of Rammekins,† which surrendered to his Majesty's forces, under Lieutenant-General Fraser, yesterday afternoon.

The possession of this post is of great importance to our further operations in the West Scheldt, as it will enable me, without molestation, to advance the whole of the flotilla, together with the Camilla and Pallas, by the Slough, and which I trust will effectually prevent any succours being thrown into Flushing, either from Cadsand, or by the Ghent channel.

I have also the honour of forwarding copies of Sir Richard Keats' accounts of his proceedings in South Beveland, by which their Lordships will perceive that the operations of the combined force under the Rear-Admiral and Sir John Hope have been very successful, and that the important post of Batiz has been evacuated by the enemy.

I came here to forward this dispatch to England, and shall leave the command of this division with Rear-Admiral Otway, and return to the flotilla, which I conclude is now investing Flushing.

It is my intention to hoist my flag in one of the small vessels in the Slough, that I may be near the head-quarters of Lord Chatham, and to conduct the various services in the West Scheldt.

I am, &c.

(Signed) R. J. STRACHAN.

Honourable W. W. Pole.

Sabrina, off South Beveland,
August 1, 1809.

SIR,

I have the satisfaction to inform you that Sir John Hope and seven thousand of his division of the army were landed on South Beveland this afternoon, since which I have been informed by message from him, that he was met on his approach towards Goes, by the magistrates, into which place he is at liberty to enter whenever he pleases. Three of the enemy's ships of the line, and six brigs, are at anchor off the east end of South Beveland, the others I conclude have moved higher up the Scheldt.

Three of the four sloops I brought up with me struck in coming up. I have hoisted my flag in the Sabrina, and am not without hopes of getting the remaining parts of the division on shore, and most part of the army supplied tomorrow.

I have the honour to be, &c.

(Signed) R. G. KEATS.

Half-past Seven, P. M.—The substance of this letter was sent by telegraphic communication from the Sabrina, at five o'clock. The six brigs are getting under sail, and moving up the Scheldt apparently, but the ships of the line are still fast.

Sabrina, off Wemeldinge, Aug. 3, 1809.

Soon after I landed I was informed by letter from Sir John Hope, that Bathz had been evacuated in the night; and as he informed me the communication was open between Walcheren and this island, and he had sent to Lord Chatham an account of the evacuation, I concluded you would hear it from thence, and went on to Bathz with a view to make observations, and from which I am this moment returned.

R. G. KEATS.

Rear-Admiral Sir R. J. Strachan,
Bart. &c.
