PUBLISHED BY AUTHORITY.

FROM TUESDAY, AUGUST 29, to FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1809.

DOWNING STREET, August 26, 1809.

A dispatch, of which the following is a copy, has been received from Major Maxwell, of the royal African corps; addressed to Lord Viscount Castlereagh, one of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

My Lord, Senegal, July 18, 1809.

When I had last the honour of writing to your Lordship, I communicated such information as I had received concerning the situation of the French colony of Senegal, and my opinion of the practicability of reducing it with a small force; I also mentioned the annoyance we had received at Goree and its vicinity, from their privateers, during the absence of ships of war from that station.

On the 24th June, Commodore Columbine arrived at Goree with the Solebay frigate, and brig Tigress, having the colonial schooner George, Agincourt transport, and several merchant vessels under convoy, and having communicated to him what intelligence I had lately obtained, we thought the reduction of Senegal practicable with the force we possessed, provided no obstacles should prevent our being able to pass the bars at the mouth of the river:

To this attempt I was induced by considerations which I trust your Lordship will conceive to be of weight. I was of opinion that the colony of itself would be an acquisition of importance to the nation, from its commerce; that by the French government, as it had always been much valued, its loss would be proportionally felt; and that by driving the enemy from their sole possession on the coast, his Majesty's settlements, and the British commerce, would be more secure, and more easily protected.

Having therefore procured some light vessels and boats, the best adapted for passing the bar, a detachment of the garrison of Goree, consisting of 6 officers, 6 serjeants, 4 drummers, and 150 rank and file, was embarked on board the Agincourt transport on the 4th of July, when we sailed, and anchored at the bar on the evening of the 7th.

Next morning Commodore Columbine was of opinion the troops might be passed over the bar, which was accordingly effected through much difficulty by the exertions of the navy. We unfortunately, however, lost a schooner and sloop, containing much of our provisions and ammunition, and the schooner George went on shore inside the bar. I landed the detachment, and 60 royal marines from the ships of war, on the left bank of the river, where I took up a position, with a view to wait till provisions could be passed from the shipping, and the schooner George could be got off. We then learnt that the enemy had made a formidable line of defence at the post of Babague, twelve miles up the river, where there is a battery, in front of which three canonniers, and four other vessels, were moored, and the whole protected by a strong boom drawn across the river. On the 9th we were attacked, but speedily repulsed the enemy, and drove them within their line at Babague; after which we returned to get off the schooner, which was effected on the following evening.

The 11th was employed in re-fitting the schooner and embarking provisions and water. The Solebay frigate, and Derwent sloop of war, were ordered to anchor opposite to the post of Barbague, and bombard it, which was executed with much effect. During the night, in shifting her birth, the Solebay unfortunately got aground, but in a position which enabled her still to annoy the enemy. On the morning of the 12th the troops were embarked, and the flotilla proceeded up the river, till just without gun-shot of the enemy's line of defence, and when every thing was in readiness for a night attack, we received information that it was the intention of the French commandant to capitulate.

Willing to spare an unnecessary effusion of human blood, the attack was postponed. On the morning of the 13th we discovered that the boom was broken, that the enemy had abandoned the battery and vessels, leaving their colours flying, and shortly afterwards a letter was received from Messrs. Degriigny and Durecu in the name of the commandant in Senegal, offering to capitulate. Mr. Heddle, surgeon to the forces, who had acted as my aid-de-camp during the campaign, was sent forward to treat with these gentlemen, and soon returned with the articles of capitulation, which I inclose, and which we ratified. I immediately took possession of the battery of Isle aux Anglois, and in the course of the evening of the battery of Guelendar facing the town.

Next morning the garrison laid down their arms, and were embarked. We then found that the force which had been employed against us amounted to 160 regular soldiers, and 240 militia and volunteers. We had no reason, however, to count on much opposition from the latter part of the enemy's force.

In accomplishing this service, the officers and soldiers of the army were anxious to equal their brothers of the navy, who on all occasions distinguish themselves. I feel much satisfaction in having enjoyed the confidence of Commodore Columbine, whose exertions and ability contributed so effectually to our success. I beg to bear testimony to the indefatigable and zealous exertions of Captain Titley, Lieutenant Bones, and the other officers of the royal navy and marines.

My warmest acknowledgements are due to Mr. Heddle for his zealous and spirited conduct. His ability in procuring intelligence of the state and condition of the enemy, added to his local knowledge, have tended, in an infinite degree, to effect the acquisition of this colony, and I am desirous to recommend him to your Lordship's notice. This officer, with Mr. Assistant-Commissary Hamilton, had the goodness to assist me during the campaign in conveying my orders to the troops.

I have to lament the death of an old soldier, Lieutenant Simpson, who died on the field from fatigue, in the affair of the 11th, on which day we had only one man wounded. The enemy had one killed and two wounded.

I inclose returns of the ordnance and stores found in this colony, and of the vessels captured at Babague.

I beg leave to mention that Captain Odium, who carries this dispatch, is a deserving officer, and to recommend him to your Lordship's notice.

I have the honour to be, &c.

C. W. MAXWELL, Major of the Royal African Corps.

ARTICLES of CAPITULATION, between Mr Heddle, acting as Aid-de-Camp, and possessing full power from Commodore Columbine, commanding the naval, and Major Charles William Maxwell, commanding the land forces of his Britannic Majesty, employed in an expedition against the colony of Senegal, on the one part,

And M. Degriigny, Commissary of Marine, Administrator in Chief of Senegal, and M. Durecu, merchant, possessing full powers from M. Levasseur, Commandant of Senegal, for the surrender of the island of St Louis and its dependencies, on the other part.

Art. I. The garrison shall be conveyed to France as prisoners of war, and shall not serve against Great Britain or her allies until regularly exchanged.

They shall march out with the honours of war, and lay down their arms at the moment of their embarkation. The colony shall be evacuated in the space of twenty-four hours after the ratification of the present capitulation.

The officers shall be permitted to carry their effects along with them.

Art. II. The officers and clerks belonging to the administration shall be permitted to remain one month in the colony, for the purpose of regulating their accounts; they shall have permission to return to France, or elsewhere, as opportunities may occur.

Art. III. All private property shall be respected.

Art. IV. No inhabitant of the island, nor European residing in it, shall be molested on account of his political opinions.

Art. V. Such French merchants as wish to remain, shall have permission to do so.

Art. VI. All vessels, houses, magazines, batteries, ordnance-stores, and all other public property, shall be surrendered in their present state.

Art. VII. All registers and acts deposited in the Erefier's office shall be surrendered.

Art. VIII. The posts of Euettandar and English Island shall be given up in the course of the day, and, if possible, the garrison shall also embark.

Art. IX. The auxiliary company, composed of two officers and forty-one men of colour, shall have permission to reside at Senegal, and be considered as natives.

Signed at the island of Babagay, at the hour of eleven A. M. of the 13th July 1809.

JOHN HEDDLE.
DURECU.
DEGRIGNY.

Ratified,

E. H. COLUMBINE, Commodore, commanding the squadron of his Britannic Majesty.

C. W. MAXWELL, Major of infantry, commanding his Britannic Majesty's land forces.

ADMIRALTY-OFFICE, August 26, 1809.

Copy of a Letter from Vice-Admiral Sir JAMES SAUMAREZ, Bart. K. B. Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Ships and Vessels in the Baltic, to the Honourable W. W. POLE, dated on board the Victory, off Nargen Island, 31st July 1809.

SIR,

I herewith inclose, for the information of my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, a letter I have received from Captain Charles Dudley Pater, of his Majesty's ship Princess Carolina, dated off Aspo, the 26th instant, acquainting me with his having directed an attack to be made by the boats of his Majesty's ships named in the margin,* under his orders, which were placed under the direction of Captain Forrest (who very handsomely offered to command the enterprize) on a flotilla of four of the enemy's gun-boats, and a brig in the neighbourhood of Aspo, which was attended with the greatest success; three of the gun-boats carrying two long eighteen-pounders, and an armed brig under his imperial Russian Majesty's colours, having been captured.

The undaunted bravery displayed by Captain Forrest, the officers and men employed under his orders, is beyond all praise.

The gun-boats have been lately built upon a new construction, and being extremely well adapted for the service in the Great Belt, I have directed them to be surveyed, and I propose to place them under the orders of Rear-Admiral Dixon, which I hope will meet their Lordships' approbation.

Herewith I inclose Captain Forrest's letter, the returns of killed and wounded in the boats of his Majesty's ships, and the loss sustained by the enemy, together with a list of the armed vessels captured in the above attack, which you will also be pleased to lay before their Lordships.

I have the honour to be, &c.

(Signed) JAS. SAUMAREZ.
