PUBLISHED BY AUTHORITY.

FROM TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, to FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1809.

QUEEN'S PALACE, NOVEMBER 1, 1809.

The following addresses have been transmitted to his Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department, and have been presented by him to the King; his Majesty was pleased to receive them in the most gracious manner.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lord Provost, Magistrates, and Common-Council of the city of Glasgow, in the council assembled, beg leave, along with our fellow subjects, to approach your Majesty's throne, with our warmest congratulations on the happy commencement of the fiftieth year of your Majesty's mild and beneficent reign.

When we look back upon the eventful period during which your Majesty has ruled over us, our hearts are filled with gratitude to the Supreme Being for having blessed us so far beyond the lot of other nations.

Towards a sovereign, whose private virtues add lustre to his exalted station, who in the correct discharge of all the moral duties, has exhibited a bright example for the imitation of his subjects, and who has, on all occasions, been the father and the friend of his people; we cannot but entertain the most lively sentiments of personal attachment and esteem.

Under the liberal system of toleration, to which your Majesty has uniformly adhered, we have witnessed the growth of pure and rational religion. Under the influence of your Majesty's equitable government, and impartial administration of justice, we have beheld our national industry flourish, our agriculture prosper, our commerce extended, and our manufactures improved beyond our most sanguine expectations.

Under your Majesty's auspicious patronage, we have seen all the liberal arts and sciences cultivated with zeal, and with an unprecedented degree of success. And while abroad, we have, for many years, observed nothing but the ruin of regular governments, and ancient institutions, or the establishment of military despotism; we have at home, under your Majesty's paternal protection, experienced all the blessings which a free and enlightened people can reasonably hope to enjoy.

In their contests with the enemy, your Majesty's armies have evinced, that their military skill is not inferior to their acknowledged valour. And under your Majesty's fostering hand, the naval power of your empire, the great bulwark of our liberties, and our national independence, has arrived at a pitch of greatness unparalleled in the history of mankind.

Impressed with a deep sense of the various inestimable benefits we have thus enjoyed, we fervently pray, that Almighty God may still bless, and long preserve a beloved sovereign to a grateful people.

Signed and sealed with the seal of the city of Glasgow, in name, in presence, and by appointment of the Magistrates and Common-Council of the said city, in council assembled, at Glasgow, the 28th day of October 1809, by

JAMES BLACK, Provost.

[Transmitted by the Duke of Montrose.]

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty,

The humble address of the Noblemen, Deputy-Lieutenants, Freeholders, Justices of Peace, and Commissioners of Supply, of the county of Aberdeen.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Noblemen, Deputy-Lieutenants,

Freeholders, Justices of Peace, and Commissioners of Supply of the county of Aberdeen, most humbly beg leave to approach the throne, with our sincere and heartfelt congratulations, on the commencement of the fiftieth year of your Majesty's reign.

While so many other states and empires have been convulsed and overwhelmed, this happy country continues to exhibit an illustrious proof of the stability and energy of that admirable constitution, by which, under the mild and just government of the most beloved and virtuous of kings, the safety, honour, and prosperity of the nation have been strengthened and preserved.

It is also a matter of just exultation, that, during an arduous reign of nearly half a century, arts, sciences, and commerce, have, under your Majesty's parental and auspicious protection, flourished and increased, in a degree unparalleled during any former period.

That the Almighty Ruler of the Universe may continue to bless this nation, by adding years, prosperity, and glory to your Majesty's reign, is our united and fervent prayer.

Signed in our name, and by our appointment, at Aberdeen, the 25th day of October 1809.

HUNTLY.

[Transmitted by the Marquis of Huntly.]

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty,

The humble address of the Bailies and Trustees of Port-Glasgow and Newark.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

At a period which the loyalty of all descriptions of your Majesty's subjects distinguishes, with grateful hearts to the Supreme, as a Jubilee for the blessing bestowed upon them of beholding the father of his people enter into the fiftieth year of his reign, we, the Bailies and Trustees of your towns of Port-Glasgow and Price Sixpence Halfpenny.

Newark, in council assembled, beg leave to approach the throne with our humble tribute of congratulation to your Majesty upon the joyous occasion, and the most earnest prayers to Almighty God, that he may grant health to, and add many years more to the reign of our beloved sovereign; and bring to a happy conclusion the arduous, necessary, and honourable struggle in which your Majesty is engaged against the common enemy.

Signed and sealed with the seals of the said towns in our name and presence, and by our appointment, in council assembled within the council-chamber thereof, the 25th day of October 1809.

JOHN SMITH, Eldest Bailie.

[Transmitted by Alexander Watson, Esq. Town-clerk.]

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty,
The humble address of the Lord Rector, Vice-Chancellor, Dean of Faculties, Principal and Professors of the University of Glasgow.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most loyal and most dutiful subjects, the Lord Rector, Vice-Chancellor, Dean of Faculties, Principal and Professors of the University of Glasgow, in senate assembled, humbly beg leave to approach the throne with the profoundest sentiments of gratitude to Almighty God for his great mercy to these realms, in preserving, during a long and arduous reign, a sovereign who has uniformly been the guardian of our religion and liberties; the patron of learning and of the arts; and who at the same time has exhibited a shining example of sincere piety, as well as of public and private virtue.

Deeply impressed with the value of our inestimable privileges, as subjects of the British empire, and, amidst the insolent threats of our enemies, rejoicing in the security which we continue to enjoy under your Majesty's wise and vigorous government, we, on this day of general exultation throughout your dominions, feel ourselves constrained by sentiments of duty and affection to the best of sovereigns, to testify our heartfelt congratulations on your entrance upon the fiftieth year of your important reign; and humbly to assure your Majesty, that we most cordially join the public voice in offering up our fervent prayers to the Supreme Disposer of events, that he may continue to bless your councils, and prosper your enterprises; that he may shield your sacred person, and prolong your valuable life to rule over us, and that, when full of days, you shall be gathered to your fathers, you may wear a crown of glory that fadeth not away.

Done in the senate-house of the University, and signed in our name, and by our appointment, by the Lord Rector; the seal of the University being also affixed, this 25th October 1809.

AR. COLQUHOUN, Rector.

[Transmitted by the Duke of Montrose.]

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful subjects, the Magistrates and Town-Council of Greenock, in common council assembled, beg to present to your Majesty the homage of our most profound respect and regard.

We feel strongly that the day on which your Majesty enters on the fiftieth year of your reign well deserves neither to be unnoticed nor treated with indifference by any of your subjects; not inferior to any of whom in loyalty, we hasten to offer to your Majesty our sincerest congratulations on an event so seldom permitted in the course of human life, and so full of honour to your Majesty's virtues. It is impossible to look back on so long a period, distinguished, under the divine favour, by one uniform tenor of the most worthy and estimable conduct on the part of your Majesty, without our hearts being filled with emotions of the most genuine gratitude and affection. Justly, indeed, have you rendered yourself the most popular person in the kingdom. While we are deeply impressed with the highest veneration for your Majesty, we consider it not less due to your exalted character, than peculiarly incumbent on ourselves to pay the tribute of our unalterable attachment to those admirable public principles, which first gave your Majesty's illustrious family so important a place in the constitution of this country, and upon the enlightened, vigorous, and faithful exercise of which, its stability, its glory, and its happiness, alike depend: these principles we are proud to avow it is our earnest desire to cherish and defend.

The astonishing political changes which have recently taken place in the world, and those with which it is yet threatened, force serious reflection on the most inconsiderate; they are eminently calculated to render, if possible, still more dear to Britons the spirit of their government, and the excellence of their laws.

We have ventured to express our duty to your Majesty under the warm feeling so congenial to us on this memorable day, yet we are conscious no base spirit of adulation can be imputed to us.

We humbly renew to your Majesty the firm assurances of our unceasing esteem, and our most ardent wishes for the honour, the prosperity, and happiness of your Majesty's family and government.

Signed in our name, and by our appointment, by our Chief Magistrate, and sealed with our corporation seal, this 25th day of October, in the year of our Lord 1809.

HUGH CRAUFURD.

[Transmitted by Lord Cathcart.]

Unto the KING's most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Magistrates and Town-Council, Incorporated Trades, and other Inhabitants, of your Majesty's royal burgh of Kirkcudbright, in a general meeting assembled, humbly presume to approach the throne, and upon this auspicious day, the fiftieth anniversary of your Majesty's reign, to offer our most sincere and heartfelt congratulations.

Endeared to your subjects by your wise and just government for a period approaching to half a century, we ardently implore that your Majesty's most invaluable life may be long preserved for a blessing to your people, and that the sceptre of these realms may be swayed by a prince of your illustrious house to the latest posterity.

Signed in our name and in our presence this 25th October, in the year 1809.

JOHN HENDERSON, Chief Magistrate.

[Transmitted by Lord Selkirk.]

Unto the KING's most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Noblemen, Freeholders, Commissioners of Supply, and Landholders, of the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, in general meeting assembled, humbly beg leave, upon a day consecrated by national joy, to approach your Majesty's throne, with our sincere and cordial congratulations. We rejoice that while the political establishments of other countries have been shaken by convulsions so inauspicious to public happiness, it has pleased the Almighty to extend, to the present era, the term of your Majesty's reign, and to establish your throne upon the dutiful love and affectionate attachment of your subjects. We hail, with animating hopes, the continuance of this national blessing, and we fervently pray that the same providence which has hitherto supported your Majesty under the arduous duties of royalty may continue to render a life, so interesting and so dear to your people, the object of its especial care, and benevolent protection.

Signed in our name and presence at Kirkcudbright, the 25th day of October, in the year 1809.

SELKIRK, Preses.

[Transmitted by Lord Selkirk.]

Unto the KING's most Excellent Majesty.

May it please your Majesty,

We your Majesty's loyal and dutiful subjects, the Magistrates and Counsellors of the burgh of Haddington, desire to mingle our voices with those of your Majesty's faithful subjects in every part of your dominions, in congratulating your Majesty on the occasion of your entering, this day, on the fiftieth year of your reign.

It hath been the will of the Almighty Disposer of all events, that a reign, which is almost unexampled in point of duration, should be still more remarkably distinguished, by the transcendent importance of the events which have marked its course.

Since your Majesty ascended the throne, we have witnessed the subversion of many venerable institutions; and the establishment of a new order of things in the fairest portions of continental Europe: we have seen nations and empires rise and fall, flourish and decay; and we have beheld revolution succeeding revolution, with a rapidity which no sagacity could foresee, and which history almost despairs to trace.

But, amidst all the storms which have shaken and desolated Europe, our native land has still prospered. The British empire, under your Majesty's benign and happy rule, has not ceased to be the chosen seat of rational liberty, of pure morality, and of true religion. Our public revenue, and our commerce have flourished in defiance of all the efforts of our enemies. The bounds of our empire have been immensely extended; and while our fleets and armies have taught the world to fear and respect our power, the most distant regions have witnessed the triumphs of British justice and clemency. Powerful abroad, we have at home been united and happy. The foot of an invader has not contaminated our native soil. While other less favoured lands have been visited by rapine, desolation, and murder, our dwellings have been the undisturbed abodes of tranquility and contentment. The blasts which have howled around our isle, have by us been heard only from afar.

These inestimable blessings we owe, under God, to the wisdom and to the virtues of our revered and beloved Sovereign; we acknowledge, with the most ardent gratitude, the paternal care with which your Majesty has so long and so affectionately watched over the interests of your subjects. Above all, with hearts deeply impressed with a sense of the blessings we enjoy, we thank your Majesty for that most impressive example of piety and virtue by which, during the whole of your reign, you have instructed us to walk in that path which leadeth to happiness, both here and hereafter.

That the same Almighty Lord of the Universe, who, as the pledge of our national property, hath permitted your Majesty thus long to reign over us, may still preserve your Majesty in health, peace, and godliness in the enjoyment of prosperity, and of domestic peace, and that he may bring you at last to the possession of that inheritance which is uncorruptible, and that fadeth not away, is our most fervent prayer.

Signed in presence, and by desire of the whole Magistrates and Counsellors of the burgh of Haddington, in common council assembled: At Haddington, this 25th day of October 1809.

JAMES DEANS, Provost.

[Transmitted by Sir George Warrander.]

To the KING's most Excellent Majesty.

Sire,

We, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Freeholders, Heritors, Justices of the Peace, Commissioners of Supply, and Clergy of the county of Elgin and Forres, beg leave to approach the throne, and, with one accord, to offer our sincere congratulations to your Majesty, upon your entering the fiftieth year of your reign.

On this auspicious day, we are led naturally and peculiarly to think on the blessings and the benefits we have enjoyed during your paternal reign. We feel with exultation and joy, that our constitution, the best which human wisdom ever devised, continues unimpaired; that our wise and equitable laws are impartially administered, even to the meanest of your subjects; that we enjoy internal peace and tranquillity; that the agriculture and improvement of the country are encouraged and prosper, while our national glory and independence are bravely maintained; and we are thankful to Almighty God for the protection he has afforded, during so long a reign, to our revered Sovereign, under whom, through divine providence, we have possessed such happiness,—a happiness which becomes doubly precious to us, when we contrast our own situation with that of the enslaved and oppressed nations around us.

That your Majesty's arms, both by sea and land, may be crowned with eminent success; that this success may be the means of procuring to us an honourable and lasting peace; and that your Majesty may be spared for many years to reign over a free, a happy, and a loyal people, are the fervent prayers of, may it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Freeholders, Heritors, Justices of the Peace, Commissioners of Supply, and clergy of the county of Elgin and Forres.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and at our appointment by

FR. W. GRANT, Preses.

Elgin, 25th October, 1809.
