Deponit is indicated for the prophylaxis of angina pectoris either alone, or in combination with other anti-anginal therapy. The glyceryl trinitrate is formulated in the adhesive layer in the form of dissolved and adsorbed molecules. By simple diffusion across the skin, the active constituent is thus released at a rate of 5 mg per 24 hours. Glyceryl trinitrate reduces the tone of vascular smooth muscle. This action is more marked on the venous capacitance vessels than the arterial vessels. There is a reduction in venous return to the heart and a lowering of elevated filling pressure. This lowering of filling pressure reduces the left ventricular end diastolic volume and preload. The net effect is a reduction in myocardial oxygen consumption. Systemic vascular resistance, pulmonary vascular resistance and arterial pressure are also reduced and there is a net reduction in afterload. Glyceryl trinitrate improves the myocardial oxygen supply by redistributing the blood flow along collateral channels and from the epicardial to the endocardial regions. Pharmacy Medicine
