My Lords, and Gentlemen,

I CANNOT close this Session of Parliament without returning to you My warmest acknowledgements for the diligence and assiduity with which you have applied yourselves to the several objects of public interest that have been submitted to your consideration.

I deeply regret the painful necessity under which you have found yourselves of renewing, for a further period, measures of extraordinary precaution in Ireland.

I entirely approve of the inquiries which you have thought proper to institute, as to the nature and extent of the evils unhappily existing in the disturbed districts of that country; and I have no doubt that you will see the expediency of pursuing your inquiries in another Session.

I continue to receive from all Foreign Powers the strongest assurances of their friendly disposition towards this country, and you may rely on My endeavours being invariably directed to the maintenance of general peace, and to the protection of the interests and the extension of the commerce of My subjects.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

I thank you for the supplies which you have provided for the service of the present year, and especially for the grants which you have so liberally made in furtherance of the interests of religion, and in support of the splendour of the Crown.

I am fully sensible of the advantages which may be expected to arise from the relief you have afforded to some of the most important branches of the national industry.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I have the greatest satisfaction in repeating to you my congratulations upon the general and increasing prosperity of the country

I am

I am persuaded that you will carry with you into your respective counties the same spirit of harmony which has distinguished your deliberations during the present Session; and that you will cultivate among all classes of My subjects those feelings of content and of attachment to the Constitution, upon the continuance and diffusion of which, under Providence, mainly depend, not only individual happiness, but the high station which this kingdom holds among the nations of the world.

Then the Lord Chancellor, by His Majesty's command, said,

My Lords, and Gentlemen,

It is His Majesty's royal will and pleasure, that this Parliament be prorogued to Tuesday the twenty-fourth day of August next, to be then here holden, and this Parliament is accordingly prorogued to Tuesday the twenty-fourth day of August next.
