TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1842.

EDINBURGH, September 1, 1842.

THIS morning, at Nine o'clock, Her Majesty the QUEEN arrived from Woolwich, on board Her Majesty's Yacht the Royal George, and landed at Granton Pier, under a Royal Salute from the Castle of Edinburgh, Leith Fort, and Her Majesty's Ships in Leith Roads, and immediately proceeded to Dalkeith Palace.

To the QUEEN'S Most Excellent Majesty.

May it please your Majesty,

WE, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lord Provost, Magistrates, and Council of the City of Edinburgh, beg leave to approach the Throne with the unfeigned expression of our allegiance and attachment to your Majesty's person and government. We humbly offer to your Majesty, our most sincere congratulations on your auspicious arrival in the metropolis of your ancient Kingdom of Scotland. It is with feelings of elevated gratification and national pride that we hail the presence of your Majesty this day in the midst of us, and that we now see realized a scene such as animated the spirits of our forefathers in far distant years. We are reminded that the City of Edinburgh was once the Capital of an independent Kingdom, tenacious of every high constitutional right, the residence of Royalty, and the seat of a Court. We rejoice to know that though Scotland is now only a portion of your Majesty's vast dominions, the people are no less the objects of your solicitude, no less sharers in the blessings of your beneficent Government. We will ever retain a grateful recollection of your Majesty's distinguished kindness in visiting Scotland at so early a period of your reign, affording to its people the opportunity, (not enjoyed for ages), of manifesting their devoted and enthusiastic attachment to a beloved Queen.

That your Majesty may long be blessed with domestic felicity and public honour, and that our latest posterity may enjoy the advantage of living under the government of Princes of your illustrious race, is our most fervent prayer.

Signed in our name, and by our appointment, and the Seal of the City affixed hereto, at Edinburgh, the 1st day of September 1842.

JAMES FORREST, Lord Provost.

To which Her Majesty was pleased to deliver the following most gracious answer.

The sentiments of loyalty and attachment conveyed in this Address are very grateful to my feelings. It is with much satisfaction that I find myself in my ancient Kingdom of Scotland, and that I am enabled to express to you in person the regard I have always entertained for my Scottish Subjects.

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

May it please your Majesty,

WE, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in the Commission of the General Assembly, eagerly avail ourselves of the privilege of approaching the Throne with our cordial congratulations on the highly interesting occasion of a visit of our august Sovereign to the ancient kingdom over which a long line of her royal progenitors held the sceptre, and which, ever since the accession of the House of Brunswick, has rapidly advanced in civilisation, in commercial enterprise, in the peaceful arts of industry, and in the loyal, independent, and orderly character of an intelligent and patriotic people;—effects which we attribute primarily to the power of divine truth, impressed on the heart by the faithful preaching of the word, accompanied by the inestimable advantage of a sound and practical education, based on the Holy Scriptures.

It has been hitherto, and we trust will ever be, the aim of those who have the spiritual oversight of the people of this land, to inculcate, along with the paramount obligations, privileges, and hopes of the gospel, the indispensable duty of allegiance to the sovereign power of the State, and cheerful subjection to the other authorities ordained of God for the punishment of evil doers, and the praise of them that do well; and, fortified by the experience of former times, our firm conviction is, that there can be no adequate security for the stability of the Throne, the permanent tranquillity of the Empire, and the perpetuity of the best National Institutions, except that which is derived from the purifying influence of our most holy faith, extended to all the pursuits of human life, so as to cherish the practice of that righteousness which exalteth a nation.

It has been highly satisfactory to successive General Assemblies, to receive annually from the Representatives of every Sovereign since this Church was finally established by law, the strongest assurances that it will be secured in the possession of all rights and privileges; and we entertain the earnest hope that your Majesty will ever extend your royal protection to an Ecclesiastical Establishment, which is acknowledged to have been productive of the most substantial national benefits.

That the Supreme Lord and King of the world, whose dominion ruleth over all, may preserve your Majesty in the possession of every temporal and spiritual blessing; that the nation may long rejoice under your beneficent government, and that, after a prosperous and peaceful reign, your Majesty, with the Royal Family, may eternally enjoy the inheritance of a better Country, which is an heavenly, is our most earnest prayer.

In name of the Commission of the General Assembly,

(Signed) DAVID WELSH, Moderator.
Edinburgh, 3d September 1842.

To this Address Her Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:—

For this loyal and dutiful Address I return you my thanks.

I acknowledge with gratitude the inestimable advantages which have been derived from the ministrations of the Church of Scotland. They have contributed in an eminent degree to form the character of a loyal and religious people.

I confidently trust that, by your example and conduct, you will continue to deserve my favour and protection. You may be assured that the solemn engagement into which I have entered, to preserve all the rights and privileges of the Church as established by law, shall be fulfilled by me with scrupulous fidelity.

TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE ALBERT.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We, her Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of the Church of Scotland, met in the Commission of the General Assembly, beg leave to offer to your Royal Highness our heartfelt congratulations on the happy occasion of your safe arrival, along with our Gracious Queen, in this northern portion of the United Kingdom. We have been highly gratified by all that we have heard of the dignified and honourable deportment of your Royal Highness, and other excellencies of character, worthy of the illustrious race from which you are descended; and we are grateful to Divine Providence for having vouchsafed to us the exhilarating prospect of the inestimable benefits which may result to our posterity from the occupation of the Throne of this Great Empire in time to come by a line of Sovereigns whose ancestors have long supported the interests of the Reformation.

It is our devout prayer that your Royal Highness, with our beloved Sovereign, and your royal offspring, may long be preserved in the enjoyment of health and comfort, and in the full possession of the ardent attachment of a grateful people, and at last, through the merits of our Divine Redeemer, exalted to the bright and incorruptible inheritance of Heaven.

Given at Edinburgh, in name of the Commission of the General Assembly.

(Signed) DAVID WELSH, Moderator.
Edinburgh, 3d September 1842.

To this Address His Royal Highness Prince Albert returned the following most gracious reply:—
To the Commission of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

I thank you most cordially for the kind congratulations, upon our first visit to Scotland, contained in the Address you have just presented to me.

I earnestly trust that the Church of Scotland may successfully pursue its exertions for the promotion of true religion and sound education, and thereby advance the best interests of a loyal and affectionate people.
