Rome, July 20.

THe differences which have been so often spoken of, between the Court, and the Ambassadors of the Crowns at present residing here, have been finally composed, the Edict which was the first occasion of them, for that it laid a new imposition on all imported Goods, not excepting those belonging to foreign Ministers being revoked; and to perfect the reconciliation, visits have passed between the Cardinal Patron and the Ambassadors of the Emperor and Spain.

Legorn, July 21. We have now certain advice, that on the 19 instant, three Gallies of our Grand Duke commanded by the Chevalier Camillo Guidi, upon advice of three Turkish Gallies being abroad, and that they had plundered the neighbouring Isles, directed their course towards them, and being come up with them engaged so smartly, that after two hours dispute the chief of those 3 Gallies was taken, the other two taking their opportunity to stand away; and so escaped, though two of our Gallies pursued them a good way; on board of that taken was 150 Turks, and 300 Christian slaves, and Amet Cerif once General of the Corsairs of Tunis, who now commanded these three Gallies.

Ditto, July 22. This day is brought in here the abovementioned Turkish Galley. And this day likewise the Sieur de Ruyter is sailed from hence towards the Levant.

Warsaw, July 23. Our Letters from the Court at Jawarow of the 13 instant, give us little cause to hope for a good a Peace with the Turks, who seem positively to declare that they will not part with Caminice; or any other the Conquests they have of late years made upon this Crown; and, its said, that the Polish Commissioners have farther acquainted the King, that the Turks demand, that the whole Ukraine shall be put into the hands of Dorofensko, and that the Poles continue to pay the yearly tribute, stipulated by the Treaty between our late King and the Port; so that after all, there seems but small appearance of a Peace, to which the Turks are without doubt the less inclined, for that they know the ill condition the affairs of this Kingdom are in. It is still reported, that the Grand Duke of Moscow will join his Forces with those of this Crown, to act against the common Enemy, but with what certainty we know not.

Venice, July 27. From Messina we have advice, that the 20 instant the Duke of Vivonne parted from thence with the French Gallies and Men of War that were there on his return to France, having taken with him the principal Authors of the defection of that City. On Saturday last happened here and in the neighbouring parts a most terrible storm of Wind, which hath done much mischief. The Chevalier Zorzi is parted hence to go and take possession of his command of General of Dalmatia.

From the Brandenburg Camp at Swan, Aug. 2. The Brandenburg Army continues still here, in expectation of the conjunction of the Imperial Troops under the command of General Cops, who are now within four hours march of us. Yesterday arrived an Envoy from the King of Denmark, among other matters to acquaint his Electoral Highness, that his Majesty will within few days be with his Army again in Holstein.

Hanover, Aug. 2. Our Duke is at present lodged in the Castle of Rechelingen, and his Army lies encamped about a League and half from hence; we cannot yet certainly learn what his Highnesses intentions are, though its said, that in case the Munster or other Troops fall into Bremen, he will march to the assistance of the Suedes there, according to the Treaty between them.

Straelsund, Aug. 3. The Swedish Army continues in our Neighborhood, several Troops are arrived from Livonia, to reinforce them, but not all that were expected: Our General Wrangel has beset all the passages which the Enemy might make use of to enter into this Province, so that at present we do not much fear them. We are assured that very considerable supplies will suddenly arrive from Sueden; and for that the better transporting them from time to time into these parts, the Fleet is fitting out at Stockholme with all possible diligence. Here is a report this day of a great design upon Stetin that hath been discovered; several persons having been corrupted to set fire to the Town in three several places, while the Enemy attacked it from abroad. The Major-General Gorze, who was taken Prisoner near Wilsack remains still here.

Beilegarde, Aug. 3. The 15 past, the Duke of Scomberg invested this place, the 21 the Trenches were opened, and the Siege carried on with so much vigor, that on the 27 the Governor began to capitulate, and the next day surrendered the Town to the French. The 12 instant is to be made an exchange of Prisoners that have been taken this Campagne on one and the other side.

Hamburg, Aug. 9. Our Magistrates have at last caused the Imperial Avocatoria to be published here, and have intimated to the French and Swedish Ministers residing here, that they desire they would depart this City, but for the rest they would fain maintain a Neutrality. It is certain that the Duke of Hanover has caused a Fort to be cast up upon the River Weser, at a Village called Rosamb, hath planted five pieces of Cannon and put 300 Men in it, to prevent the passage of the Munster Troops, who, its said, intend to pass down that River in Boats to Bremen. Deputies have been lately sent on the part of this City, to the Elector of Brandenburgh, to pray, as we are told, his Electoral Highness mediation, for the removing any dissatisfaction the King of Denmark may have conceived against us; and in the mean time we are not wanting to make all necessary provisions for our defence, for that we cannot rid our selves of the apprehensions we at present have, till we see his Majesty engage his Forces in some design which unconcerns us.

Luxembourg, Aug. 9. The City of Treves is now formally besieged by the Confederate Troops, yesterday the Trenches were to be opened, and the Attacks to be begun. Monsieur de Louvigny, who at present commands in this Province, parted hence yesterday with 1200 Men, Horse and Foot, drawn out of this Garrison, with several pieces of Cannon, to assist at the said Siege. The Marechal de Crequi, we hear, marches to the relief of the besieged; yesterday he lodged at Rémich, and this day he marched again.
