

riage; an Event, which, we trust in God, will render your Majesty the happiest of the Kings of this World, and be productive of a long Series of Blessings to your People. We acknowledge your Majesty's Wisdom in chusing, for the Partner of your Throne, a Princess descended from Illustrious Progenitors, equally distinguished for their steady Adherence to the Principles of Reformed Religion, and their firm Attachment to your Majesty's Royal House. Permit us therefore to applaud and felicitate your Choice of such a Princess, more distinguished by virtuous Accomplishments than any other Considerations, and for whose personal Merit nothing upon Earth, but the Possession of your Majesty's Royal Heart, can be a suitable Compensation.

Great Sir, victorious, as you are, in a War, undertook and carried on in Behalf of the Rights of your Majesty's faithful Subjects, may you still continue to be victorious, till your Enemies accept of such a Peace, as may establish the Honour of your Crown, the Welfare of your People, and lasting Tranquillity amongst the neighbouring Nations; and may your Majesty long live and flourish in the Enjoyment of all true Glory; blessing your People and blessed by them; universally admired; happy in your own, and in the Virtues of your Royal Consort; and more and more happy in seeing a numerous Offspring, possessed of all the amiable and valuable Qualities of their Royal Parents, to deliver down your Memory to future Generations, and to perpetuate (so long as this World will admit Perpetuity) the Commerce, the Prosperity, the Civil and Religious Liberty of Britons.

Your Majesty's Royal Nuptials, and Coronation, are Events that complete the Blessings we enjoy under an auspicious Reign, and are convincing Proofs of your Majesty's great Wisdom, by having fixed your Choice on a Princess endowed and accomplished with every Virtue, every amiable Quality, that can contribute to your Majesty's Felicity, and the Honour and Prosperity of Great Britain; from which we may flatter ourselves, succeeding Generations will hereafter be blessed with a Race of such Princes, as those, under whose Reigns we have for some Years, and at this Time, find our Liberties, our Religion, and every Branch of our Constitution defended with the greatest Glory, and protected in the most Sacred Manner.

May your Majesty's Felicity remain ever undisturbed; may your happy Reign continue long and glorious, exceeding in Happiness (if possible) the most sanguine Wishes of your grateful and affectionate Subjects.
