

in the mean While, with the greatest Rapidity, behind the French Army, and was already in Possession, on the 7th Instant, of Muhlhausen, Eichwege, and Wanfried: By this Means, the Enemy was watched on all Sides, though they have since made a little Opening to their Communication, by forcing our Posts at Ulrichstein, Pattenberg, and Franckenberg, by the Prince of Condé; and of Friedewalde by General Stainville. The Prince of Condé, by the last Advices, was still at Grunberg. He had endeavoured to force the Post of Hombourg upon the Ohme, in which he failed; as he likewise did in an Attempt upon the Left of the Hereditary Prince's Corps at Ramrot, on the 9th, at that Time commanded by Lieutenant General Hardenberg. The Hereditary Prince is since returned to his Corps from the main Army, and intended to march forward on the 13th Instant.

It is said, that the Trenches were opened before Almeyda on the 25th of July; and the Letters add, that the Spanish Troops are in great Want of Quarters of Refreshment.
