TO all Gentlemen, Ladies, and others, who keep Coaches, Chariots, or other Carriages,

By His Majesty's Royal Letters Patent under the Great Seal of Great Britain, is granted unto Owen O Keeffe, Coach-maker, at the Golden Unicorn in Long Acre, London, and John Miels, Coach-maker and Wheelwright, in Camomile-street Bishopsgate, London, the sole making and vending a new-invented Iron Axletree, and Box for the same to run in, which is so ingeniously contrived as to supply the Axletree and Wheel with Oil of its own self, without having Occasion to take off the Wheels to grease as other Wheels must be, whereby much Trouble and Expence is saved in Town and Country, and a great Deal of Time saved in Travelling. It is so contrived as to feed itself as it goes, which prevents Firing, an Accident that frequently happens; and Dirt or Water cannot get between the Box and Axletree, whereby the same runs smoother and easier on the Stones, and lasts much longer than those heretofore made. Gentlemen may see them, and be furnished with them, at the above Places, and no where else.

N. B. They are of the utmost Convenience also in Waggon, Carts, and all other Kind of Carriages; and the Expence differs but a little from the common ones.
