Admiralty-Office, October 2.

BY Letters lately received from Commodore Palisser, dated at St. John's in Newfoundland the 1st of last Month, it appears, that having dispatched a Sloop with a Letter to the French Governor at St. Pierre, to enquire into the Truth of the Reports which prevailed of the French having mounted Cannon, and erected Works on that Island contrary to Treaty, he, in Answer, received Assurances from the said Governor, that there was only one Four Pounder Gun mounted without a Platform, and with no other Intention than to answer Signals to their Fishermen in foggy Weather; that there were no Buildings or Works erected contrary to Treaty; and that the Guard consisted of no more than Forty-seven Men, and had never exceeded Fifty. It farther appears by the Commodore's said Letters, that there had not been, or were at that Time, at the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, more than one French Ship of War of 50 Guns, one Frigate of 26 Guns, and another of less Force, with two large Ships en Flute, the Destination of one of the said Ships en Flute being for Cayenne, and the other for St. Domingo: That none of those Ships had, and, the Commanding Officer assured the Commodore, none of them would, enter into any of the Harbours on the Coasts of Newfoundland. And the Commodore adds, that the concurrent Fishery in those Parts of the said Coasts, whereon the French are by Treaties permitted to fish, had been carried on in perfect Tranquility.
