Falmouth, Decemb. 6.

Yesterday came into this Port the Turky Merchant of London, richly laden; bound for Cadiz; and the Anne of Dublin, who came thence the 2d instant. Three or four Vessels are likewise arrived from Croscque, who confirm what we formerly told you, concerning what has passed at Bordeaux. Yesterday likewise arrived the Adventure from St. Maloes, who the fourth instant met at Sea the English Bordeaux Fleet, consisting in about sixty Sail, the Wind being at North-West.

Weymouth, December 11. This Week arrived here the Amity of this place, William Ferrel Master, from Bordeaux, whence he came Sunday last was Seven-night; in his Voyage he was met by a Privateer of Biscay, who commanded him on Board, very evilly entreated him, and took away two Hogsheads of Wine, and several small Guns and Musquets.

Bristol, December 11. This Week arrived here several Vessels belonging to this Port, viz. Five from Malaga; one from the Tercera, and two from France; as likewise a Vessel from the Canaries, bound for London, who was forced in here by bad weather.

Warsaw, Nov. 19. His Majesty having lately held a Council, in which a considerable number of the Senators of his Kingdom and of Lithuania were present; the first thing proposed, was concerning the Kings Coronation, which all the Senators prayed his Majesty to hasten; and though no time be as yet affixed, yet the general opinion is, it may be the first of February: The next matter was, concerning the Winter-quarters, on which Subject the Weywode of Bels, to whom the care of the distribution of the Winter-quarters is committed, desired that the said distribution might be ordered by the whole Senate, and that he might not be left to undergo the ill will of several Gentlemen, which could not be avoided in this matter; upon which it was declared, that the said Weywode should, without regard to any, proceed to do his duty, in the distributing of the said quarters, according to the practice of former times. The third point, was about composing the differences between the Generals of Lithuania, in which nothing was done. The Envoy from the Crown of Sueden, is at present at the Court, but is promised to be dispatched very suddenly.

Venice, Nov. 25. Here is lately arrived a Vessel from Alexandria, the Master whereof tells us, that he left there four Turkish ships bound for Constantinople, which durst not put to Sea for fear of the Christian Corsairs, who are very considerable in those Seas, and give the Turks great disturbance in their Trade. From Zant we have advice, that part of the Fleet of this Republick, was gone to Convey certain Merchant ships to the Levant, and the others continued to Cruise to secure our Navigation. The Chevalier Grimani is embarked on a Gally provided for him, in order to his passing into Dalmatia, being Proveditor General of that Province. Our last Letters from the Port, were very barren of News they only telling us, that the Grand Visier seemed very eager in his intentions for the carrying on the War against the Poles, who, by the way of Vienna, we hear, are at present in a pretty good posture, having forced the Turks and Tartars shamefully to retire.

Copenhagen, Novemb. 25. We are now sufficiently convinced of the falsity of the late report concerning a defeat of the Suedes near Gottzenbergh, by the Sieur Guldentien, Viceroy of Norway, who had indeed with a Body of 7 or 8000 Danes, advanced into the Suedish Territories, and put them into an Alarm, but is since returned to Norway, without effecting any thing farther, than the setting the Neighbouring Countrey under Contribution. We could not have expected that Wismar would have held out so long, and though we seem here not to doubt, but that his Majesty will become Master of it at last, yet it is feared that this late abiding in the Field in this season, will hinder the Armies being abroad so early in the Spring, and is to be wished. We understand that the Governor of the place is an old experienced Soldier, having served in the famous Siege of Candia; and that he does in all points make good the great opinion the Suedes seem to have of him. Our Fleet is now laid up, and the Dutch Men of War are returned home. The last advices we had from Stockholme, said that their Fleet was upon the point of setting out to Sea again; which we know not how to give credit to, considering how far the season is advanced, and how dangerous the Navigation is in the Balticque at this time of the year.

Vienna, Nov. 26. After all our hopes that the affairs of Hungary had been wholly settled, it seems there continues still great dissatisfactions among the contrary party. Here are lately arrived Deputies from the Prince of Transilvania, to mediate with the Emperor on their behalf, and if possible to make a composition of things. We are told that a Courier has been dispatched to the Port, with orders to the Imperial Minister there, to complain of the late Hostilities committed by the Garrison of Newhaufel; and to desire, that not only the Authors thereof may be severely punished, but likewise care taken to prevent the same for the future. The Bishop of Gurcke, the chief of the Embassy designed to Nimeguen on the part of the Emperour, prepares for his departure, which we are now told will be very suddenly. The last Week we received very good News from Poland, for our Letters gave us an account, that the Turks had passed the Niester, and were marching towards the Danube in great disorder.

Eslin:

Essingen, Nov. 1. We have for several dayes been in expectation of General Monteculi's departure from hence on his return to Vienna, but as yet we hear nothing thereof, which has made some believe his Excellency would continue here the whole Winter, though there be others that are of a contrary opinion, and persuade themselves, that he desires to be eased of the command of the Army, his age, rendering the cares and fatigues which are inseparable from it, insupportable to him; and that in order thereunto, he desires to return to Vicenna, that he may dispose the Emperor to appoint his Successor before the opening of the next Campaign: it seems to be the general opinion, that in such case, the Duke of Lorraine will succeed in the Command of the Army, and that amongst others Count Souches will assist him therein. We are told that General Monteculi is much concerned, to see his design of blocking up of Philipsburgh, which he had formed so much to the advantage of the Palatinate, and the common interest of the Allies, disappointed by the untowardness of the Directors of the Circles to whom the Troops did belong that were posted about that place, and as well he as the General of the Empire greatly complains thereof.

Spire, Decemb. 3. The French still make a Mine, as if they intend to make some attempt upon the Imperialists in their Winter-quarters; if not, Strasbourg has great reason to suspect their intentions towards them: and the truth is, the Magistrates and Inhabitants of that City, who know their carriage towards the French has not been very fair, are not without great jealousies, though what ground they have for them time must shew. The Imperialists at present entertain us with an account of the considerable Levies they are making against the next Campaign; and if it prove true what they tell us, they will have a very brave Army in the Field at Spring. The French on their part are not wanting to do the like, so that amidst the discourses of Peace, the several Parties seem chiefly intent upon the carrying on of the War.

Bremen, December 3. The Brandenburgh Troops, who had their Winter-quarters assigned them in the Countrey of Wursten, have sold the same to the Munsters for 4500 Rixdollers per month, and are marched towards the Countrey of Cleve. The Campaign is now wholly ended in these parts, but the Confederates give out that they will be very early in the Field again in the Spring.

Lige, Decemb. 5. It is not to be said, what Complaints the poor Countrey people make of the hard usage they receive from the Troops that are quartered in this Diocess, whom they are forced to provide with Meat, Bread, Beer, Hay, Straw, &c. and besides all this, are obliged to pay Contributions to the Spaniards. A strong party of Dutch was the other day within half a League of this City, and threatened to destroy all with Fire and Sword, unless Contributions be likewise paid to them. There are at present 6000 Dutch in Tongres, which they fortifie. The French demand 1700 Rixdollers per month of the Town of Weset; or in case they are not able to raise the same, to receive a Garrison, and to maintain it. The hopes we had amongst all these miseries of a free Trade with our Neighbors, begin to vanish again; for we understand, that new hindrances have lately hapned.

Dover, Decemb. 13. This morning the Ca*lais* Pacquet-Boat ventured to Sea, with a very hard gale of Wind at W. S. W. but the Flanders Mail remains still here, the Pacquet-Boats being all on the other side; and till the Wind abates, we cannot expect them.

Portsmouth, Decemb. 14. Some dayes since an Ostend Privateer took a small French Vessel laden with Salt, which the Master redeemed for a Sum of Money he raised here; but in his return to France, was met and taken by another Privateer of Ostend, who however enjoyed his purchase not long, for it hapned that as the Ostender was carrying his Prize home, two small French Men of War met them, and took both the Caper and his Prize.

Deale, Decemb. 14. The Wind continues very high at S W. and keeps the Dutch East-India ships (of which we have formerly told you) outward bound, still in the Downes, with about 200 Sail of Merchantmen more, most English, outward bound: And many ships come in daily from the Westward; and amongst the rest this day arrived His Majesties Frigate the Maryrose, from the Streights. Notwithstanding the ill weather we have had, the said ships in the Downes have not (God be thanked) sustained any considerable damage that we hear of.

Harwich, Decemb. 14. The Wind continuing for the most part Westerly, and very Tempestuous, hinders the arrival of our Pacquet-Boats from Holland; they are now all absent, the last sailing from hence on the 8th instant.

Whitehall, Decemb. 15. The 13th instant, his Excellency Sir Leoline Jenkins, Judge of His Majesties High-Court of Admiralty, one of His Ambassadors Extraordinary and Plenipotentiaries for the Treaty of Peace to be held at Nimeguen, took his leave of His Majesty, in order to his sudden departure.
