Constantinople,

Constantinople, April 1. Yesterday, very early in the Morning, a very alarming Fire broke out in the Quarter of Tophana, which burnt with great Fury for Twelve Hours, and, in its Progress to Pera, endangered several Foreign Ministers Palaces; but happily all escaped: Upwards of 600 Houses are consumed, and many Lives lost in the Flames. To complete the Calamity, the Plague is very busy, and carries off Numbers; at the French Palace three Domesticks have very lately died: The Foreign Ministers Palaces in general are ordered to be kept strictly shut.

By a Letter from the Agent of the East-India Company at Bassora, to the British Consul at Aleppo, of the 12th of February last, we are advised of the entire Reduction of Madura, where Isuf Cawn having some Difference with an Officer, who commanded a considerable Body of Europeans in his Service, they entered into a Scheme together of delivering up the Place to the English, without the Knowledge of the Cawn, whom they seized upon in the Night-time, and sent to the British Camp bound and tied down in a close Palanqueen: A considerable Booty in Gold was found in the Fortress, with a large Quantity of Rice, and Ammunition in general. We are further advised by the same Channel, that another Battle has been fought, and the Victory obtained by the British Forces, in Bengal; and that this Success has given so decisive a Blow to the Enemy in that Quarter, that they are entirely dispersed, and that the Visir, who commanded this Army, is fled to a very distant Country, in order, as it is said, to seek an Asylum in the Mountains.
