St. James's, February 8.

THIS Morning, at Four o'Clock, her Royal Highness the Princess of Brunswick was happily delivered of a Prince.

Naples, January 14. The Weather has been for some Time, and still continues, excessive cold. The Snow lies in the Streets of Naples, which is very unusual. Mount Vesuvius, covered with Snow, and throwing up Fire and a Quantity of black Smoak, makes a most extraordinary Appearance. An Eruption of Lava is daily expected, as the Agitation in the Mountain increases.

Yesterday this Court went into Mourning for four Months for the late Dauphin.

Copenhagen, January 21. The General Mourning for his late Danish Majesty, which is now regulated, commences the 2d of February, and is to continue full Twelve Months for all Persons of the First Class, wherein the Foreign Ministers are comprehended, and extends to Servants and Equipages.

Copenhagen, January 25. The Body of the late King of Denmark, having been embalmed, lies now in State upon a Bed prepared for that Purpose, in the great Salon, where Drawing-Rooms used to be kept at Court. After having been exposed some Time to the Publick in this Manner, it is to be removed to a magnificent Castrum Doloris in the Chapel Royal; and from thence, after another Interval, to be removed in Procession to the Cathedral Church of Rotschild, the usual Burying-place of the Danish Monarchs: But it is believed the Preparations for the Solemnity of this grand Funeral, cannot be ready before the Middle of March.

His Danish Majesty, and the Queen-Mother, come alternately to Town almost every other Day, to visit the Queen Dowager, and condole with her in her deep Affliction.

Vienna, January 22. The Archduchess Theresa, the Emperor's Daughter, has, for this Week past, been ill of a Feverish Disorder: but is now thought to be out of all Danger.

Venice, January 22. Yesterday in the Afternoon, the Funeral Obsèques were performed here for the late Great Chancellor, with much the same Pomp and Ceremony as are observed for a Doge. All the Secular Clergy of Venice walked in Procession with lighted Wax-Candles in their Hands, from St. Mark's Church, and through St. Mark's Place to the Church of St. John and Paul, followed by the School, or Confraternity of St. Mark, with great Numbers of very large Wax Tapers upon Silver Stands of prodigious Size. Instead of the Corpse, an Image of the Deceased, taken in Wax, was carried exposed upon a Bier, attended by the Mourners dressed in long Black Cloaks, ending in the Point of a Cone, very high above their Heads. The Vice-Doge, accompanied by the Six Councillors, and the Three Capi di Quaranta, and all the Secretaries, each with a Noble Venetian upon his Right Hand, closed the Procession. The Image, or the supposed Corpse, was deposited upon a magnificent Catafaico, or Scaffold, erected from the Bottom to the Top of the Church, and illuminated all over with Wax Candles. The Solemnity concluded with an Oration in Latin in Praise of the Deceased.

Berlin, January 25. Yesterday being his Majesty's Birth-day, he received the usual Compliments from the Royal Family, the chief Nobility, and Foreign Ministers residing at this Court. His Majesty, with the Royal Family, dined with his Brother Prince Henry. In the Evening there was an Opera, and afterwards a publick Masquerade, at his Royal Highness Prince Henry's, which was very numerous and magnificent, and lasted till Seven o'Clock in the Morning.

Berlin, January 28. Last Sunday his Majesty had a very numerous and splendid Levee; after which his Majesty dined in his Apartments with his Brother Prince Henry, the Prince Royal of Prussia, young Prince Henry of Prussia, the two Princes of Brunswick in his Service, and several General Officers of the Army.

His Serene Highness the reigning Prince of Anhalt Coethen arrived here a few Days ago, and has been presented to their Prussian Majesties, and the rest of the Royal Family, by whom he was most graciously received.

Whitehall, February 8, 1765.
