Florence, March 26. The Great Duke having been indisposed for some Days last Week, the Celebration of the Emperor's Name-Day, and the Ceremonies appointed to be performed on that Occasion, were postponed till the 21st, when his Royal Highness, assisted by Count Rosenberg, and Baron Neny, Secretary of the Order of the Golden Fleece, invested the young Prince his Son with the Ensigns of that Order. The Great Duke was seated on a Throne; and both he and Count Rosenberg wore the Collar of that Order, but not the Habit; though, in every Thing else, the Ceremony was the same as is performed at Vienna on the like Occasion. After this, the Great Duke preceded the Great Dutchess to the Chapel of the Court, to which her Royal Highness, with the young Prince on her Lap, was carried in a rich Sedan Chair, and was attended by the Grand Maitresse and the Ladies of Honor. On her Return from thence, she and the Great Duke received the Compliments of the Foreign Ministers, and permitted their Subjects to kiss their Hands, which is a Ceremony that is repeated on all publick Occasions. They afterwards dined in publick, and in the Evening there was a great Drawing-Room.
