St. James's, May 30.

THIS Day the Right Honorable the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons, of the City of London, in Common-Council assembled, waited on His Majesty; and being introduced to His Majesty by the Right Honorable the Earl of Hertford, Lord Chamberlain of His Majesty's Household, James Eyre, Esq; the Recorder, made their Compliments in the following Address.

To the King's most Excellent Majesty,
The humble Address of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons, of the City of London, in Common-Council assembled.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE wait upon your Majesty with our sincere Congratulations on the happy Delivery of our most Gracious Queen, and on the Birth of another Princess: And to assure your Majesty, that there are not, in all your Dominions, any Subjects more faithful, more dutiful, and more affectionate to your Majesty's Person and Family; or more ready to sacrifice their Lives and Fortunes in the Maintenance of the true Honor and Dignity of your Crown.

Long may your Majesty reign the true Guardian of the Liberties of this free Country; and be the Instrument, in the Hands of Providence, of transmitting to our Posterity those invaluable Rights and Privileges, which are the Birth-right of the Subjects of this Kingdom.

Signed by Order of Court,

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious Answer.

I Receive, with great Satisfaction, your Congratulations on the happy Delivery of the Queen, and the Birth of a Princess: And I return you my hearty Thanks for the Duty and Affection to My Person, and Family, and the Zeal for the true Honor and Dignity of My Crown, which you express upon this Occasion.

The City of London, entertaining these loyal Sentiments, may be always assured of My Protection.

They were all graciously received, and had the Honor to kiss His Majesty's Hand.

Straßbourg, May 11. The Dauphiness arrived here on the 9th Instant, about Noon, at the House built on Purpose for her Reception, on one of the Islands of the Rhine, by the Magistrates of the Town, pursuant to the King's Orders, and furnished from his Majesty's Wardrobe.

Her Royal Highness, attended by all her Austrian Court, alighted at the Part of the Building destined for them; and, after dressing, went to the Hall appointed for the Ceremonial of her Reception. The Count de Noailles, his Majesty's Ambassador Extraordinary for the Reception of the Dauphiness, attended, accompanied by the Sieur Bouret, Secretary of the King's Cabinet, and the Sieur Gerard, First Commissioner in the Department of Foreign Affairs, the Commissaries appointed by the King to assist at this Ceremony. The Full Powers being read, and the Acts of Delivery and Reception of the Dauphiness signed by the respective Commissaries, one Side of the Room was opened, and discovered the Persons appointed by his Majesty to form her Royal Highness's Court.

Then her Austrian Court were admitted to kiss her Hand, and afterwards retired.

When the Persons of her new Court had been separately presented to her Royal Highness by the Count and Countess de Noailles, the Dauphiness set out, with the King's Coaches, for the City, and was saluted in the Plain, by the Troops drawn out for that Purpose, having the Marquis de Vogué at their Head. Her Entry into the City was proclaimed by a triple Discharge of the Cannon on the Ramparts, and by the Ringing of the Bells of all the Churches. The Marshal de Contades, at the Head of the Field Officers of the Garrison, had the Honour to salute the Dauphiness at the Gate of the City; and the Magistrates had afterwards the Honour of complimenting her Royal Highness at the Entrance into the City, where a Triumphal Arch was erected.

The Dauphiness proceeded through the City, amidst the Regiments of Infantry of the Garrison which lined the Streets: As she passed by the Town-House, Fountains of Wine were playing, which was given by the Magistrates to the Populace: She alighted at the Bishop's Palace, where Cardinal de Rohan, at the Head of the Comtes of the Cathedral, had the Honour to compliment her Royal Highness.

After Dining in State, the Dauphiness permitted the Magistrates to present her the City Wine; this Ceremony ended with a Feast of Bacchus, performed by the Coopers, who diverted her Royal Highness by dancing with their Hoops. She afterwards went to the French Comedy, amidst the Acclamations of the People.

On her Return from the Comedy, all the Streets were illuminated by the Vigilance of the Magistrates; and the Play-House, and the Promenade de Broglie, which is over-against it, were, in like manner, illuminated; as also a Decoration of a very great Extent, which was erected by the Magistrates opposite the Bishop's Palace, and which represented a vast Colonnade, through the Arches of which were to be seen Gardens in Perspective: This Decoration, which in the Day-time made a Deception to the Eye, produced as great an Effect at Night, by the Disposition of the Lamps which enlightened it. It was placed on the Quay, and was separated from the Bishop's Palace by the River Ill, which runs by the Terrace-Wall of the Palace: It communicated with the Terrace by a Parterre contrived on Boats, which was placed there whilst the Dauphinefs was at the Comedy.

The Moment the Dauphinefs rose from Supper, Fire was set to the Shrubs which composed the Parterre on the Boats: These Shrubs were formed of Lamps of different coloured Fire. On the Top of the Decoration were exhibited, in an artificial Manner, the Cyphers of the Dauphin and Dauphinefs; and on the Parterre was an artificial Fountain of Fire, in the Middle of several Jets d'Eau, which made a very agreeable Contrast. About Midnight the Dauphinefs went to the Playhouse, where the Marshal de Contades gave a Ball, to which not only the most considerable Persons of the Town, Strangers of Note, and the Officers of the Garrison, but also several of the Burghers and their Wives, dressed in the old Country-Dress, and ornamented with Ribbands of the Colour of the Dauphinefs's Liveries, were admitted.

The 8th, The Persons of Note, who had been presented to the Dauphinefs, were admitted to her Court. She received also the Deputations of the Canton and Bishoprick of Basle, of the Village of Mulhausen, of the Superior Council of Alsace, of the Body of Nobility, and of the Lutheran and Catholick Universities. She went afterwards to the Cathedral, at the Door of which Prince Lewis de Rohan, Coadjutor, in his Pontifical Habit, attended by the Comtes of the Cathedral, and all the Clergy, waited to receive her.

After Mass, which was accompanied with Musick, the Dauphinefs dined in Publick at the Bishop's Palace, from whence she set out, at Four o'Clock, for Saverne, attended by all her Court, and by the Marshal de Contades, the Marquis de Vogué, and the Sieur Blair. Cardinal Rohan set out in the Morning to receive the Dauphinefs at Saverne. Her Royal Highness, after a Firework was played off, which had been prepared by the Cardinal, supped with the Ladies of her Household, and Those who had accompanied her to France.

Nancy, May 12. The Dauphinefs arrived here on the 9th. She was received at St. Nicholas Gate by the Field Officers, Marquis de Choiseul-la-Baume at their Head. This Gate was magnificently illuminated. The Dauphinefs alighted at the Hotel du Gouvernement, which was also illuminated. The next Morning the Supreme Court, the Chamber of Accompts, the Corporation, and the University, paid their Compliments to the Dauphinefs, who dined in Publick: After which she visited the Cordeliers, where is the Burying-place of her Ancestors, and set out for Bar. The Corps of Grenadiers de France lined the Street at her Arrival and Departure; and the Regiments of Schomberg, Dragoons, Orleans and Chartres, Cavalry, lined the Road. At Luneville she received the Military Honours from the Gendarmerie, commanded by the Marquis de Castries, and the Marquis d'Autichamps.

Chalons, May 12. Yesterday, the Day on which the Dauphinefs arrived here, the Sieur Rouillé d'Orfeuill, Intendant of the Province, went on the other Side of Saint-Dizier on the Borders of Champagne, where he had the Honour to receive her Royal Highness. Two Squadrons of the Royal Regiment, Dragoons, were stationed on the Road; and at a small Distance from Chalons, a Detachment of the King's Body-Guards. On her Arrival the Dauphinefs received the Homages of the different Companies, and of Six Girls, to whom the Town gives Marriage-Portions. In the Evening she went to the Comedy.

Her Royal Highness's Supper was preceded by a magnificent Fire-work, which was played off at the Sound of Martial Musick; and, as soon as she rose from Table, there was a superb Illumination, representing the Temple of Hymen. All the Quarters of the Town were illuminated, particularly the New Gate lately built on the Designs of the greatest Masters. The Populace, amongst whom was distributed Wine and Provision in Abundance, partook of the general Joy, which they testified by repeated Acclamations.

The next Day the Dauphinefs proceeded on her Journey through Rheims.

Verfailles, May 19. The King, being informed of the Approach of the Dauphinefs, set out from hence on the 13th, about Noon, with the Dauphin, Madame Adelaide, and Mesdames Victoire and Sophie, for Compiègne, where he received the News in the Evening of the Dauphinefs's Arrival at Soissons. The next Day his Majesty, attended by the Dauphin, Mesdames, and the Principal Officers of the Court, went to meet the Dauphinefs as far as the Bridge of Berne, in the Forest of Compiègne. The Detachments of the Household Troops, and the Vol du Cabinet, preceded and followed his Majesty's Coach in the usual Order. As soon as the Dauphinefs perceived the King, she alighted from her Coach, and went to meet his Majesty, supported by the Comte de Saulx-Tavannes, her Chevalier d'Honneur, and the Comte de Tessé, her first Ecuyer, and attended by the Comtesse de Noailles, her Dame d'Honneur, the Marquise de Duras, the Dutchesse de Pecquigny, the Marquise de Tavannes, the Marquise de Mailly, and by all the Persons whom the King had appointed to receive her on the Frontier: The Princess, when she approached the King, who had alighted from his Coach, threw herself at his Feet. His Majesty raised her up, and embracing her with great Tenderness, presented her to the Dauphin, who embraced her also. After this Interview the King stepped into his Coach, to return to Compiègne, taking with him the Dauphin and Dauphinefs. On their Arrival at the Palace, the Dauphinefs was conducted to the Apartment prepared for her. His Majesty and the Dauphin walked on each Side of her to her Apartment, where the Duke of Orleans, the Duke and Dutchesse of Chartres, the Prince of Condé, the Duke and Dutchesse of Bourbon, the Prince of Conty, the Comte and Comtesse de la Marche, the Duke of Penthièvre, and the Princess de Lamballe, were presented by his Majesty to the Dauphinefs.

After the King retired, the Gentlemen who attended his Majesty to Compiègne were presented to the Dauphinefs, and had the Honour to salute her. His Majesty afterwards supped in Publick with the Dauphin, the Dauphinefs, Mesdames, and the Princes and Princesses who were at Compiègne. The next Day the King, attended by the Dauphin, the Dauphinefs, and Mesdames, set out from Compiègne for the Chateau de la Muette, where his Majesty ordered the magnificent Set of Diamonds, which had been prepared for her, to be presented to the Dauphinefs. After Supper his Majesty and the Dauphin returned to this Place. The Dauphinefs did not arrive here till the next Morning about Ten o'Clock. The King went immediately to her Apartment, and staid there some Time. About One o'Clock in the Afternoon the Dauphiness went to the King's Apartment, from whence they proceeded to the Chapel in the following Order: The Grand-Maitre, the Master and Assistant of the Ceremonies, walked before the Dauphin, who handed the Dauphiness; the King, preceded by the Comte de Provence, the Comte d'Artois, and the Princes of the Blood, and followed by Madame, Mesdames, and the Princesses of the Blood, the Great Officers and Ladies of the Court. The King being in his Pew, the Comte de Provence, the Comte d'Artois, Madame and Mesdames, as also the Princes and Princesses of the Blood, ranged themselves on each Side as usual: The Dauphin and Dauphiness kneeled on the Steps of the Altar: The Archbishop of Rheims, Great Almoner, who came out of the Vestry the Moment the King entered the Chapel, presented his Majesty with the Holy Water, and afterwards went up to the Altar, which the King and his Attendants approached. This Prelate, after addressing the Dauphin and Dauphiness, began the Ceremony by the Benediction of Thirteen Pieces of Gold, and of a Gold Ring, which he presented to the Dauphin, who put the Ring on the Fourth Finger of the Left Hand of the Dauphiness, and gave her the Thirteen Pieces of Gold. The Marriage-Ceremony being finished, and the Dauphin and Dauphiness having received the Nuptial Benediction, the King returned to his Pew, and the Great Almoner began Mass; during which the King's Musick performed an Anthem composed by Abbé Gauzargues, Master of Musick to his Majesty. After the Offertory, the Dauphin and Dauphiness went to the Offering, and at the End of the Pater, a Canopy of Silver Brocade was spread over their Heads; the Bishop of Senlis, First Almoner of the King, supported the Canopy on the Side of the Dauphin, and the Bishop of Chartres, First Almoner of the Dauphiness, on her Royal Highness's Side; which was not removed till the Great Almoner had finished the Prayers. When the Mass was ended, the Great Almoner approached the King's Pew, and presented to his Majesty the Registers of the Marriages of the Royal Parish, which the Curate, who assisted at the Ceremony of the Marriage, had brought with him. The King, attended by the Dauphin and Dauphiness, and the Royal Family, the Princes and Princesses of the Blood, and the Lords and Ladies of the Court, was reconducted to his Apartment in the same Order which had been observed in going to the Chapel.

As soon as the Dauphiness was in her own Apartment, the Duke d'Aumont, First Lord of the Bedchamber in Waiting, ordered a Casket of Jewels to be presented to her Royal Highness from the King. The Ambassadors and Foreign Ministers had the Honour of being presented to the Dauphiness by the Countess de Noailles. The Lords and Ladies of the Court, who were not at Compiègne on the Arrival of the Dauphiness, had the same Honour the Day after the Marriage.

About Six in the Evening, the King, attended by the Royal Family, the Princes and Princesses of the Blood, and the Lords and Ladies of the Court, went into the Great Gallery, where there was a Drawing Room, when his Majesty played at Cards; and afterwards supped in Publick, with the Dauphin and Dauphiness, the Comte de Provence, the Comte d'Artois, Madame, Madame Adelaide, Mesdames Victoire and Sophie, and the Duke of Orleans, the Duke and Dutchess of Chartres, the Prince of Condé, the Duke and Dutchess of Bourbon, the Princess of Conti, the Prince of Conti, the Count and Countess de la Marche, the Duke of Penthièvre, and the Princess de Lamballe. During the Entertainment, different Pieces of Music were performed, under the Conduct of the Sieur Rebel, Knight of the King's Order, and Superintendent of his Majesty's Band. After Supper, the King, having conducted the Dauphin and Dauphiness to their Apartment, and the Benediction of the Bed having been made by the Archbishop of Rheims, Great Almoner, the King delivered the Shirt to the Dauphin, and the Dutchess of Chartres performed the same Office to the Dauphiness.

The next Day the King and Royal Family went, about Six in the Evening, to the Hall newly built for Plays, where the Opera of Periclus was represented. His Majesty afterwards supped in Publick.
