Warsaw, August 2.

WE begin again to be apprehensive of the Plague breaking out afresh. The Letters from the Parts which were lately infected mention positively its being in the Russian Ukrain; and in some Villages in Volhynia some Peasants have died with Symptoms which indicate that Disorder. We are assured, however, that the Proprietors or Directors of the Villages immediately used the necessary Precautions to prevent its Spreading, be the Distemper what it might.

Dantzick, August 14. Advices have been received here from different Parts of Poland, that the Plague has broken out again, not only in the Turkish Ukrain, but likewise in the Province of Volhynia. This unexpected melancholy News has thrown the otherwife distressed Inhabitants of Poland into the greatest Consternation.
