Warsaw, November 4.

IF the Almighty by his Providence had not interfered, a Gang of the most desperate Villains would have perpetrated an Act which all true Poles would have read in their Annals with Horror and Astonishment. Yesterday Evening about Nine o'Clock, as the King was returning in his Coach to his Palace, from the Great Chancellor's, Prince Czartorzinsky, his Majesty was suddenly attacked at the Corner of the Capuchin-Street, near the Bishop of Cracow's Palace, by six Confederates, headed by a Captain of Horse, named Koczinsky, who had formerly been in the Service of Prince Czartorinsky, but is now one of the Confederates. His Majesty not being attended by his usual Escort of Uhlans, but only accompanied by some Pages and Servants, the Assassins stopped the Coach, and immediately discharged their Carbines and Pistols, several of the Balls going through the Coach. Two Freyducks, who were behind the Coach with Flambeaux, immediately leaped down to defend it; one of whom was desperately wounded, and soon after expired; the other received several Wounds from a Sabre. An Aide du Camp, who was in the Coach with the King, and a Page, were wounded, and nothing belonging to his Majesty was found but his Hat. This happened in one of the most inhabited Parts of the Town, so that the greatest Alarm was occasioned among the People, who ran out on the first Noise, and the Troops of the Town and the Russians, who were patrolling in all Parts, came up, but could not trace the Road the Villains had taken. All that could be found was the King's bloody Hat, which caused an universal Consternation for his Majesty's Life. In the mean Time, Koczinsky and his Gang had joined twenty-five other Confederates, who were posted at the Corner of a Street waiting the Event. As soon as they had dragged the King out of his Coach, they took him between two Horsemen, holding him by the Hands, and drew him in that Manner by the Arsenal over the Wallize out of the City beyond Bilano, a German Mile and Half from Warsaw. They now found, by the Shouts they heard, that the Russians were in Pursuit of them; whereupon Koczinsky, either through Fear, or Remorse of Conscience, desired the Captain of the Horse, who commanded this desperate Party, to retire to some Distance with the greatest Number of them, thinking that otherwise they could not fail to be soon discovered; which Desire the Captain complied with, and left his Majesty in the Hands of Koczinsky and four others; which four however Koczinsky presently after contrived to get rid of by sending them to see how near the Russians were come. He then threw himself at the King's Feet, and implored Pardon, with the strongest Assurances that he would carry his Majesty back safely to Warsaw. He produced a Paper, in which he was bound with the others by the strongest Oaths, (which Transaction passed at Czenstochau) to deliver the King, dead or alive, to the Confederates. He received his Majesty's Pardon, and then led the King out of the Road amongst the Bushes by Bilano. After they had travelled an Hour in the Dark and excessive bad Roads, they arrived at a poor Cottage, where his Majesty threw himself down quite exhausted on a miserable Bed, and fell asleep. From hence Advice was sent to General Cocceii, who came immediately with a Party of Horse, and had the Pleasure to lodge his Majesty, about Four in the Morning, safe in the Castle. His Majesty, besides the imminent Danger of his Life, had every Distress to combat with, and this aggravated by two Wounds on his Head, one by a Sabre, and the other by a Pistol-Ball, which only grazed.

As the Alarm and Consternation had been very great, so it is not easy to express the Joy every one felt at knowing his Majesty was once again safe in the Castle. A general Thanksgiving was offered up to God for the Preservation of his Majesty's precious Life, and Te Deum celebrated in all the Churches, with the Discharge of 100 Cannon. The Conspirators had been in the City some Days, having got in by means of some Waggon laden with Hay, but had not been able to find an Opportunity of getting Possession of the King's Person till the Evening this execrable Scheme was put in Execution, as above related.

Stockholm, November 5. The States have been twice assembled in Pleno this last Week. In the first Assembly there was a Debate upon the Instructions for the Committee of Expedition, which have laid so long upon the Table in the House of Nobles; and it was resolved to make a Representation to the other Orders, to engage them to alter that Part of these Instructions which relates to the immediate Expedition of what has been resolved by Three Orders, though the Fourth has not declared its Opinion.

In the Second there was a Division in the House of Nobles, upon a Report from the Secret Committee in Favour of an Addition demanded by the Queen Dowager to her Revenue; and it was carried to agree with the Committee by 315 against 289. The Majority were for putting it off till the Estimate of all Expences of the Government was settled. This Affair lies upon the Table in the other Orders.

Long absent and much wanted,

MR. Francis Pickering (whose Father resided formerly at Oporto in Portugal, and afterwards at Madrid.) He lived some Years with his Uncle, Mr. Grenier, at Lisbon, and upon his Death left his Aunt, Mrs. Grenier the Widow, in the Year 1759, being then about 22 Years old, with an Intention, as is supposed, to go to a Relation of his, Mr. Galbally, at Cadiz, who had sent for him, and by whose Orders he had taken up Money for his Expences. He was then accompanied by a Black Man Servant; but has never been heard of since.

The Black, it seems, was seen some Time afterwards in Algarve, but soon disappeared on understanding that Enquiry was made after him, to know what was become of the young Man; so is suspected to have murdered him, for the Sake of his Money.

If the said Francis Pickering be now living, he may hear of something greatly to his Advantage: Or if any one can give an authentic Account of his Death, it will be handsomely acknowledged.
