

Fireship came into the Road (there not being room for more to come in ;) that the French Fireship was burnt without doing any execution ; that the Glorieux (in which was the Count d'Esfree) laid the Arms of Leyden on Board, which took Fire, and was burnt, and set the Glorieux likewise on Fire, which driving on Board another Dutch Ship called the Kruyningen, set her also in a flame, as that did the French ship the Marquis ; that two other of the Enemies ships being extremely disabled, were taken, and the remaining two were very much damaged in their Masts and Rigging. That on our side six Men of War (of small force in comparison to those of the Enemy) with three other Vessels were burnt, and three stranded. By our next we may be able to give you a more particular and succinct account :

Brussels, May 28. This morning the Duke de Villa Hermosa received advice from the Duke d' Arschor Governour of Haynault, that the Most Christian King parted yesterday from his Army on his return to Paris ; that the same day the Army lodged near Binche, intending, as is said, to go and encamp at Pieron near Charleroy. The Mareschal de Schomberg, we hear, commands a separate Body between the Sambre and the Meuse, and the Baron de Quincy a flying Camp near Audenard. The Prince of Orange's Army continues quartered in the Country of Dendermond, in expectation of the arrival of the Auxiliary Troops, which are to form an Army under the command of the Duke de Villa Hermosa, of which only the Munsters are as yet on their march. Our Letters from Treves of the 22 say, that the Duke of Lorraine advanced towards Sarbruck, where he purposed to join the Imperial Army.

Pisto, June 1. On Thursday last the French Army, consisting in 24 Battalions of Foot, and 250 Troops of Horse, besides Dragoons, under the command of the Duke of Luxemburg, decamped from Kieuraing, and marched to Givra that night, from whence it advanced to the Grand Chaussee, and yesterday passed by Gemblayes, intending to encamp at a place called the Seven Stars, not far from Perwez. Here are various conjectures and discourses concerning the Enemies design, which, in all appearance, is only to fetch off a great Train of Artillery, in all about 160 pieces of Cannon, (being those that were taken at Limburg, and other places) and to convey them to Charleroy ; which we rather believe, because they tell us that there was in the Army a great many spare Carriages, and that they write from Maesricht, that 160 pieces of Cannon had been embarked there, to be carried by water to Huy, where they would be put on shore again, and thence conveyed by Land to Charleroy. It is said that Mareschal Schomberg has an Army of near 20000 men between the Sambre and the Meuse, with which he may either join the Mareschal de Oreghin in Lorraine, or the Duke of Luxemburg, as there shall be occasion. The Mareschal d' Humieres is with a Body of 6000 men at Enam near Audenard, and Baron Quincy with another Body at Pont Pierre, to cover their places on that side. The Prince of Orange will now in 8 or 10 dayes be in a condition to enter upon action, unless hindered by the backwardness of the Confederates, who are to come into these Countries, of whom only the Troops of the Bishop of Munster are as yet on their march, for the Lunenburg and Osnabrug Troops still remain in their Winter-quarters. We have nothing new from Luxemburg, our last Letters said, that the Duke of Lorraine marched between the Saar and the Moselle, that he had possessed himself of a small Castle on the Saar, and that he had sent a considerable detachment towards Sarbruck, to secure that passage for the Imperial Army.

Antwerp, June 2. People here are very willing to believe that the French are going to dismantle and quit Maesricht, upon the advice they receive from Liege, that the Sieur Calvo had received some important Orders from Court, upon which he had appointed a meeting of the principal Burghers, of whom it was thought he would demand a Sum of Money, to save them from being pillaged, when the Garrison should draw out from thence, and that a great many Cannon were ordered to be conveyed from thence to Charleroy. The Duke of Luxemburg is advanced as far as Perwez between Maesricht and Charleroy, many apprehend he will attack Leeuwé or Louwaine. The Prince of Orange will in few dayes have his Army compleat, and then we hope to hear of something extraordinary. From Cambray they write, that the breaches and ruines made in the Fortifications as well of the City, as of the Citadel, during the late Siege, are not yet begun to be repaired ; and from Valenciennes they tell us, that those Inhabitants, upon paying the Monies required, were excused from building Citadel as was at first ordered.

Paris, June 2. The King is come to Versailles, according as we told you in our last, having left his Army in Flanders under the command of the Duke of Luxemburg, who is since advanced to Perwez, between Maesricht and Charleroy, to secure a great Train of Artillery which the King has ordered to be conveyed from Maesricht to Charleroy, and when that is done, it is believed our Army will go and encamp at Pieron, from thence to observe the Enemies motions. Our Letters from Metz say very little of the Duke of Lorraine, it not appearing as yet what his designs are ; we are told that the King hath sent all the Troops of his Household to join the Army which the Mareschal de Schomberg commands between the Sambre and the Meuse.
