

Munster, consisting in between and 8 and 9000 men, having with them 31 pieces of Cannon and 11 Mortars are come to Diest, and will be to morrow at Louvain, whither our Maître de Camp General the Count de Rasch goes to take a view of them. The Osnabrug Troops have likewise passed the Meuse, and encamped the 2 instant about a League on this side that place, where the Bishop of Osnabrug is in person at the head of them. The Luxemburgs are also on their march, but are forced to take a great way about, by reason the Duke of Neuburg will not permit them to pass through his Territories. When all these Troops are come together, we reckon they will make about 20000 men. On Sunday some part of the Prince of Orange's Army began to march, yesterday Count Waldeck followed with the main Body, and this day his Highness with the Rear-guard; they take their way towards Ghent, and will encamp at Marykirke; what his Highness farther design is, time must shew. From Namur they write, that on Sunday last a reinforcement of 1500 men entred into Charlevoix, which place the French seem to expect may be besieged, all the Wood being cut down round it, and that part of the Country which can be laid under water drowned. We have Letters from Luxemburg of the 2d instant, by which we are told, that the Baron de Mercy being sent with 3000 Horse to guard a Convoy of Provisions from Sarbruc, he was the 30 past attacked in his Rear near Koningsmackeren by 5000 French Horse commanded by the Sieur de la Haye Lieutenant-General, who succeeded so far in his attempt, as to take some of the Wagons that were in the Rear; but that Baron Mercy turning head upon the Enemy, killed two hundred of them, together with the said Lieutenant-General, forced the rest to retire, and carried his Convoy safe to the Army. The Letters add, that the Duke of Lorraine had made a Battery on the Moselle, at a place called Raggi, where he had planted four pieces of Cannon, to guard a Ford in that River; that Marschal Crequi was encamped in sight of the Imperial Army on the other side the Moselle; that the Front of the French Army reached from Mexiers to Richemont, and that they had made a Bridge over the Moselle about a Mu ket shot from Tibonville. It is farther said, that Marschal Crequi had detached 3000 men towards Alsace to join the Sieur de Monclar, who it seems is not strong enough to make head against the Army of the Circles, commanded by the Duke of Saxe Eysenach. From Vienna they write, that the Rebels in Hungary are 9 or 10000 strong, and that they expect an assistance of 6000 men from the Turks.

Atwerp, July 6. Letters from the Duke of Lorrains Army of the 29 past tell us, that his Highness finding the Forage begin to fail, marched the 27 from Ephy, about two in the morning, without sound of Trumpet or Drum, and came to Fleur, a League from Metz; which the Enemy perceiving decamped likewise in all haste, and marching on the other side the Selle, encamped over against Flewy. The next day very early the Imperial Army marched again, and encamped at Argany. Marschal de Crequi immediately followed him, and passing with his Army through the City of Metz, marched down the Moselle (which was on his right hand) and posted himself over against the Imperial Army, which afterward removed to Emery, where the Duke of Lorraine was providing wood to make a Bridge over the Moselle. That the 29 the French decamped again, marching in Battalia, and came to the River Orne, where they encamped, possessing themselves of the Bridge of Richemont two Leagues from Tibonville; and, it is said, Marschal Crequi has caused another to be made upon the Moselle, about a Musket shot from Tibonville. That the front of his Army reaches from Mexiers to Richemont, and that the two Armies are encamped within sight of each other, the Moselle being only between them, upon the Bank whereof the Duke of Lorraine has caused four pieces of Cannon to be planted at a place called Reggy, where there is a Ford to guard the same. Yesterday the Prince of Orange decamped with his Army from his quarters in the Country of Dendermonde, and passed the Scheldt at Melle, intending to take his quarters at Marykirke. We are told that Marschal de Montmorency was to decamp this day from Ninove, and to march toward Oudenard, to attend the Prince of Orange's motion. The Troops of Munster are come to Diest, and Count de Rasch goes to meet them at Louvain. The Osnabrug Troops are likewise past the Meuse, and will follow very speedily. The Brandenburg, Neuburg, and Paderborn Troops, are, it seems, to continue at Maschick, to block up Marsick on that side, or at least to cover those parts from the incursions of that Garrison.

Paris, July 7. We have nothing new from the Armies, the Imperial according to our last advices was posted between Metz and Tibonville, and the Marschal de Crequi near them, being separated by the Moselle. What was said of the defeat of the Imperial Convoy is confirmed, and it is said 200 of the Enemy were killed on this occasion, and as many taken prisoners.
