Extract of a Letter from Mess. Ware and Son, of Whitehaven, Printers, addressed to Mr. B. Cornwell, Conduit-street, Hanover-square, London, dated June 28, 1786.

S I R,

MR. WILLIAM WOODBURN, of Whitehaven, in the County of Cumberland, a Person in an advanced Age, had been, for the last Two Years, subject to Pains in the Bowels, which, though at first not very violent, had gradually increased till the Disorder became very alarming. Assistance had been called in from Time to Time, and a Variety of Medicines applied, but without any good Effect; on the contrary the Malady became still greater, and a Train of other Complaints succeeded, which deprived the Patient of his natural Rest, emaciated his Body, almost totally destroyed his Appetite, and threatened a speedy Dissolution. Without any Prospect of finding a Remedy for these complicated Evils, but in the Hope of procuring a temporary Relief from the most excruciating Pains which generally attacked him with great Virulence in the Evening, he was prevailed upon (chiefly by the Persuasions of a Neighbour who had experienced the salutary Effects of it) to try your Oriental Vegetable Cordial. The first Quantity taken as prescribed by the Bill of Directions, reached the Disorder: He instantly felt an Alleviation of the Pain: At the proper Time he repeated the Dose; a Change took Place in a few Hours throughout his whole System, and the next Day he eat with such an Appetite as he had been a stranger to for several Months. Before one Half of the Second Bottle was used he found himself perfectly restored; his Appetite was good, his Sleep sound and refreshing, and his whole Frame invigorated in a Manner which astonished all who had seen him in his late debilitated Condition.

It is now Three Months since his Cure was effected, during which Time there has been no Return of the Disorder, nor any Visitation whatever foreign to those Infirmities which are connected with the Period of Life he has arrived at.—In Gratitude to the Author of so valuable a Medicine, and through Friendship to those who may now labour under the same Afflictions which were lately so severely felt by him, he has authorized this Public Declaration of his Case, fully convinced that (under the Blessing of God) he owes this extraordinary Recovery to the Virtues of the Oriental Cordial:

We have several other Testimonials of the Efficacy of this Medicine, some of which will be particularized at a future Opportunity.
