They then went to the Council Chamber, where an Address was presented from the Mayor, Bailiffs and Commonalty, and most graciously received by His Majesty, who was at the same Time pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthood on Richard Tawney, Esq; Senior Alderman of the City of Oxford. Their Majesties with the Princesses then visited Christ-Church College, and returned to Nuneham the same Evening, at about Half an Hour after Six o'Clock.

[ The Address from the University of Oxford. ]

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Oxford, deeply impressed by this repeated Instance of your Majesty's gracious Condescension and Goodness, beg Leave to signify, in the strongest Manner, the increased Satisfaction we receive from the Royal Presence among us after the happy

Deliverance, which it has pleased the Divine Providence to grant your Majesty, from the late alarming and horrid Attempt to deprive these Kingdoms of that invaluable Life to which we owe the inestimable Blessings of Protection and Security, the genuine Effects of a mild and equal Government.

With similar Sentiments of Pleasure and Satisfaction we behold the most exalted and most amiable of her Sex relieved from those Sensations of anxious Solitude which nothing could effectually remove, but the Reflection that the Attempt, however desperate, was not the deliberate Act of Malice or Disaffection, but the wild Effort of a disordered Mind.

We shall not fail, with our Thanks, to offer up our sincerest Prayers to that Being, in whom alone are the Issues of Life, for the continued Safety and Prosperity of your Majesty, and your Illustrious House; on which the Welfare of the Nation at large, and of this Seat of Religion and Learning in particular, most essentially depends.

Given at our House of Convocation this Twelfth Day of August, in the Year of our Lord, 1786.

His Majesty's Most Gracious Answer.

SUCH dutiful Sentiments, on My second Visit to this Seat of Learning, accompanied by affectionate Congratulations on the Protection of Divine Providence, manifested by the Failure of the Attempt on My Life, call forth My warmest Thanks. I am not less sensible of your Expressions towards the Queen.

The University of Oxford may ever depend on My Inclination to encourage every Branch of Science, as the more My Subjects are enlightened, the more they must be attached to the excellent Constitution established in this Realm.

[ The Address from the Corporation of Oxford. ]

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

WE, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Mayor, Bailiffs and Commonalty of the City of Oxford, in Common-Council assembled, influenced by the purest Motives of Gratitude for every Blessing we could hope or wish for under your Majesty's mild and auspicious Reign, with the most heartfelt Satisfaction congratulate your Majesty on your late providential Escape from the Hands of an Assassin. An Attempt so outrageous and daring upon a Life sacred and inestimable in the Eyes of all Mankind, could only be conceived by one, whom Nature or Infirmary had rendered incapable of knowing your Majesty's Virtues; and it is Matter of high Consolation to us, as well as it must have been to your Royal Breast, to hear that it came from a Person of that unhappy Description.

Deeply concerned as we are for your Majesty's Welfare, we cannot resist the Impulse of our Feelings in beseeching your Majesty, that the most effectual Means may be taken to prevent in future so disastrous a Calamity a Calamity from a Pain threatening your Majesty's Subjects; and not only in Words, but with Hearts filled with Veneration and Respect for your Sacred Person, we most devoutly pray the Almighty to continue His Protection to the best of Kings.

Given under the Common Seal of our Corporation, this Twelfth Day of August, 1786.

ATTACHED by Sentiments of the strongest Affection to your Majesty's Sacred Person, and deeply impressed with the Importance of your Safety, we cannot hear of the sudden Danger which lately threatened that invaluable Blessing, without being impatient to express our Consternation and Horror.

The desperate and shocking Attempt on your Majesty's most precious Life would indeed present too gloomy a Reflexion, if our Joy on your providential Escape

Escape did not instantly arise in the same diffusive Proportion: And, whilst we contemplate with Gratitude the Care of Heaven in your happy Preservation, our Admiration is excited at the consummate Fortitude and Composure of your Royal Mind, and that tender Humanity, which could, at such a Moment, exert itself toward the miserable Author of so distressing an Alarm.

We therefore, with peculiar Sensibility, embrace the present Opportunity of renewing our Professions of Love and Loyalty to your Sacred Person; and of addressing our Prayers to the Giver of all good Gifts, that your Majesty may long continue to reign over an happy and a grateful People.

It is an Alleviation of their Pain, Royal Sir, when they reflect, that the Act, which they lament, appears to be the Effect of natural Insanity; any other they trust it cannot be: And they humbly express a Wish, that your Majesty's Paternal Condescension may never again expose your Royal Person to so flagitious an Attempt.

May your Majesty long live in the full Enjoyment of the dutiful Obedience of your Subjects, and of the Love and Affection of your Royal Consort and Progeny; and late, very late, may your Majesty be succeeded by your well-beloved Son, and Inheritor, they doubt not, of your Majesty's many Princely Virtues.

In reflecting, with Consternation and Horror, on this atrocious Attempt, and the dreadful Consequences which must have ensued if the frantic Arm that aimed the Blow had not been rendered impotent, we cannot but reflect at the same Time on a Circumstance which affords us an additional Cause of Congratulation, as the Event has occasioned your Majesty to experience one of the greatest of all Satisfactions that can arise in the Breast of a good Prince; for if ever a general Address was presented by a People to the Throne of a Sovereign, dictated by the sole Motive of affectionate and undissembled Gratulation, it is that which your Majesty is at this Juncture receiving from the unanimous Voice of the whole Nation. That your Majesty may long, very long, continue thus to reign in their Hearts, is the ardent Prayer, may it please your Majesty, of your Majesty's loyal Subjects in this your Borough and Town of Marlborough.

The Lord Viscount Dalrymple, first Plenipotentiary.

His Serene Highness the Landgrave, supported by Baron de Wittorff, Minister of State and Grand Chamberlain, and Baron de Boynebourg, Grand Marshal of the Court.

Coming into the Audience Chamber, the Procession advanced, with Three Reverences, to the Sovereign's State, and the Ensigns were laid upon the Table, the Landgrave and Plenipotentiaries taking their Seats, and all others going to their respective Stations. After a short Pause, the first Plenipotentiary rose up, and addressed His Highness in a Latin Oration, which was answered, by the Landgrave's Command, by Monsieur de Burgel, Minister of State, President of the Court of Appeals, and of the Chamber of Finance; all Persons standing.

Then Garter delivering the Commission to the first Plenipotentiary, he presented it to the Landgrave, who gave it to Monsieur de Burgel to read; which having done, he returned it to His Serene Highness, who delivered it to Garter.

After a Pause, Garter, with the usual Reverences, summoned His Serene Highness from his Chair of State, and the first Plenipotentiary advancing, His Serene Highness having been invested with the Mantle of the Order, Garter pronounced the Admonition. The Hood also having been put on, they invested him with the Collar, Garter pronouncing the Admonition. They then presented the Book of the Statutes to His Serene Highness, who delivered to the Plenipotentiaries a Certificate of his Reception of the Order, and Nomination of a Proxy.

Lastly they placed the Cap and Feather upon His Serene Highness's Head, who, making a Reverence to the Sovereign's State, sat down in his own, and the Plenipotentiaries in their Places.

His Serene Highness was then congratulated by the Plenipotentiaries, the Great Officers of State, and all present; and the Procession returned in the same Order as it came, His Highness's Train borne by Two Gentlemen of the Chamber, Monsieur de Gilse, and Monsieur de Hanstein.

A splendid Banquet was prepared in the Great Hall, where the Plenipotentiaries sat on either Side the Landgrave. At the Entrance of the Second Course, Garter proclaimed the Sovereign's Stile, and then the Landgrave's. His Serene Highness drank the Health of the Sovereign, the Queen and Royal Family, and the Knights Companions of the Order. The Plenipotentiaries then drank the Health of the Landgrave, and Prosperity to the Illustrious House of Hesse-Cassel. There was a Second Table in a Hall adjoining, where martial musical Music played at each Health, and at Intervals during the Dinner.

In the Evening, the Court assembled again, and His Serene Highness received the Compliments of the Ladies; after which there was a Supper.
