Deale, March 4.

LAST Night arrived at Dover the Mail from London Navy, after having been stop'd 24 hours in the French Camp. What was said of the taking of Ghent, proves a mistake; for we are assured, that the Burghers make a stout resistance, and that they have formed 14 of 25000 men into Regiments, and settled a good Pay upon them.

Naples, Febr. 8. The Convoy lately arriv'd with the Marschal de la Feuillade at Messina, consisted in ten Men of War; four Fire-ships, sixteen Pendants, and about twenty Tartanes laden with Ammunition and Provisions. Our Viceroy has writ ten circular Letters to all the Barons of this Kingdom, requiring each of them to raise a Horseman, and to provide him with Horse and Arms, or else to pay 75 Crowns in lieu thereof, by which means his Excellency purposes to raise 600 Horse, which he designs for Sicily.

Genova, Febr. 27. The Edgar arriv'd here Yesterday noon, and this day the Rainbow, Britannia, and Charles, laden with Herrings, and the Constantinople Merchant, the Maryland Merchant, the William and Thomas, and the Success, are now coming, as likewise the Crown, and another Ship, from Bristol. Sir John Narborough with the rest of the Herring Fleet, and others, is part by for Legorn.

Vienna, Febr. 20. We are assured that the Duke of Lorraine is preparing to return to the Army with all diligence, where his presence seems very necessary, for that the Enemy is already in motion.

Strasbourg, Febr. 28. The French Troops which came into Alsace from their quarters in the Franch Comte, are march'd towards Nancy; except a small Body, which the Sieur de Meulan has at present in the Neighborhood of Brisac. From Metz we have an account by Express, that the King was gone from thence to Stenay, and that from thence he would continue his march into Flanders.

Cologne, March 4. Our Magistrates have finally resolv'd to raise the 40000 Crowns demanded by the Emperor, which are to be paid to the Duke of Neuburg, who, together with his Dutchels, are going to Brabant, to be there at the Lying in of the Emperors dear Daughter.

Marseilles, March 1. Three dayes since arriv'd at Thoulon two French Men of War from Messina, one of which brought over the Duke of Provence, who the next day proceeded on his journey to Paris. At Boulogne another Convoy is fitting out for Sicily.

Stenay, March 2. The 21. past their Majesties arriv'd at Metz, from whence the King went to Thionville to view that place, and returned the same day to Metz. The 24, the King visited the Fortifications of the City, and of the Cittadel. The 25, their Majesties parted from thence, and went to Marcheville. The 26 they lodg'd at Perdun, where the King ordered the Fortifications to be gone on with, with all the diligence possible. The 27 their Majesties arriv'd here. The first instant their Majesties parted hence, the King taking his way towards Flanders, in order to the besieging of Ghent.

Amsterdam, March 11. All the News this day in Town is, that the Marschal de Humieres having on the sudden assembled the French Troops in Flanders, was march'd with them, to Ghent, which is brought by the Letters arriv'd this afternoon from Amsterd. Many people are unwilling to give credit thereto, but according to all circumstances, it is most probable to be true. At the same time the Letters we receive from the Muse, alarm us likewise with the dangers of the Enemy on that side, they speak as if the Sieur de Montal, Governour of Charleroy, had besieged the Castle of Charlemont; and that a considerable Body of men had likewise appear'd in the Neighborhood of Namur.

Hague, March 8. The Account we gave you in our last of the Siege of Ghent, is most true. The 4th instant the French King arriv'd in the Camp, the next day the Trenches were open'd, and on the 5th the Besiegers began to make use of their Cannons. The Besieged, we hear, have killed about 10000 men, and formed them into Regiments, being resolv'd to make what defence they can; but the Enemy presses the Siege with so much vigor, that it is feared they will not be able to hold out long. The Prince of Orange was, according to our last Advice, as Mallares says, is said his Highness intended to pass the Sabelde at Amsterv. and to enter into the Countrey of Waes to cover Sus van Ghent, and the other places belonging to this State on that side. It is writt'n from Laage, that the French of Waes are going to make an incursion into the Countrey of Fluwers.

Brussels, March 7. We are continually alarm'd by the Advices that are brought, either of the motions of the Enemy, and yet we cannot learn what place they intend first to attack. What appears to us at present the most probable is, that they will besiege Charlemont and Namur; their preparations on this Muse being very great, as well at Waes as at Brabant. Yesterday we heard much shooting, which we judg'd to be about Amur or Charlemont. While the Enemy is thus busie on that side, and that Count Waldeck is marching with all the Dutch Troops towards Wasselt, the Duke of Allesburg, command'd by Monsieur de Longueval, being likewise join'd with them, their Troops in Fluwers are likewise drawn together under the command of the Marschal de Humieres.

Ditto, March 4. At length the French have discover'd their design which is to press upon Ghent. On Tuesday last that City was invaded. On Wednesday the Protestants came in and began to break ground to fortifie the several quarters; the next day the Cannon arriv'd, and they began to prepare several Batteries. The Duke of Verdun, upon the first News he received hercof, sent the Marquis de Rheneburg hath endeavor to get into the Town, but he is returned, and gives an account, that the Army of the Besiegers consists in 35000 Foot, and 20000 Horse; that their main Force lies on this side of Ghent, with 10000 Horse in the Front of them; That Monsieur Cordonnier has a strong Horse-quarter at Mulstein, that from thence the Marquis de Chamilly, Governor of Audenarde, commands, till he joins the Marechal d'Humieres quarter, who commands all along by the Castle to the Brussels Gate; That Baron de Quincy, with a great Body of Horse and Dragoons, commands all the Out-quarters towards Dendermond and Lokeren; hath laid two Bridges over the Schelde, and hath a strong advanced Horse-guard as far as the Bridge at Lokeren. Count de Nancré, Governor of Aeth, commands the quarters towards Audenard; and at Drongben and Marykirk, are two quarters more, but we know not who commands them. Upon the Canal of Bruges they have raised several Forts, and their advanced Guards stand half way to Bruges. On Tuesday last the French King arrived at Valkenciennes, having made that day a journey of 16 Leagues. On Wednesday he came to Tournay, where Monsieur de Louvois met his Majesty. Yesterday he came to Audenard, and is expected as this day in the Camp, and to-morrow they will begin their Attacks. We cannot expect the place will hold out, unless the Burghers take upon them the defence of it. In the Citadel are not above 300 men, and in the Town are six Regiments of Horse, and one of Dragoons, but those very weak. Wednesday last at night the Prince of Orange arrived at Lumen on the other side of Diest, where he joined his Army, and immediately ordered a great detachment to march towards Namur, upon the appearance there then was, that that City would be besieged; but since, without all doubt, they have been countermanded. His Excellency, so soon as he understood his Highness's arrival, sent to inform him of the motions of the Enemy, and at the same time Monsieur Dickfield, the Dutch Minister, went hence to attend his Highness. We are told that the Duke of Newburg is apprehensive the French will make an incursion into his Countrey, while the Armies are on this side. The French, we hear, have taken by Assault a Work which covers St. Peters Gate at Ghent.

Ditto, March 8. On Sunday the Duke de Villa Hermosa went to Malines, where the Prince of Orange was, to concert with his Highness the measures that are to be taken for the Relief of Ghent, or at least for the securing such other places as lay most exposed. It is said his Highness intended to march as this day, and that in the mean time he had sent another Regiment to the Sas van Ghent, and some Troops to Hulst, and had given Orders for the opening the Sluyces, and overflowing the Countrey about those places, his Excellency having caused the like to be done about the Head of Flanders. Yesterday morning early Lieutenant General Almay marched from hence with two Regiments, to join the Prince of Oranges Army. As to Ghent, all the account we have, is, That on Saturday night the Trenches were opened, that on Sunday morning they began to play with their Cannon upon the Town, that they have two Attacks, one against the Castle, and the other against St. Peters Gate; That Don Antonio Mandrano, Governor of Newport, who for having fought in a Duel was a Prisoner there, hath, by the consent of the Burghers, taken upon him the command of the Town; that he hath modelled the Burghers into several Regiments, being resolved to merit his Pardon by his behaviour on this occasion. Baron de Roche, who was sent by his Excellency to Namur, is returned, and hath acquainted his Excellency that there are not at present any of the Enemies Troops in that Neighborhood.

Newport, March 10. The Burghers of Ghent, having our Governor, who was a Prisoner there, at the Head of them, make a brisk defence. The Passengers that are come hither from Bruges, say, they heard great shooting all day yesterday. The Burghers have planted their great Banner upon the walls, as a mark of their Resolution to defend the place to the utmost; so that we are in hopes the Enemy will not find the work there too easy, as perhaps they imagined.

Paris, March 5. From Flanders we have an account, that the Marechal d'Humieres having drawn all the Kings Troops together in those Parts, had with them besieged Ghent; that the King was expected in the Camp as yesterday; that the Trenches were to be opened as this day; and that it was not doubted but the place would be taken by the middle of the next week. From Italy we have an account of the arrival there of the Marechal de la Feuillade.

Ditto, March 9. The Letters we receive from the Camp before Ghent, are of the 6th instant; they tell us, that the Trenches were opened the night before, with the loss only of one man killed, though the B sieged fired very briskly. The Kings quarter is between the two Rivers, the Schelde and the Lys. There are two Attacks. The Lines and Bridges of Communication are all finished. The 5th, his Majesty summoned the place, but the Besieged answered, That though they had but a small Garrison, yet they would endeavor to defend themselves. The Spiffe Cannons have finally obtained the Emperors leave to put Garisons into the four Forts places. From Provence we have advice of the arrival of the Duke de Provence from Messina, and that before he came thence, the Marechal de la Feuillade, his Successor, was marched out upon some great design.
