

The London Gazette.

Published by Authority.

From Tuesday March 24, to Saturday March 28, 1789.

Queen's Palace; March 28.

THE Queen has been pleased to appoint John Griffiths, Esq; to be Surgeon in Extraordinary to Her Majesty's Household.

Carleton-House; March 28.

Mr. John Satchell, of Great Pulteney-street, is appointed Harpmaker in Extraordinary to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

Windsor, March 25.

This Day the Right Honourable Lord North, Chancellor of the University of Oxford, the Earl of Dartmouth, High Steward, the Rev. Dr. Cooke; Vice-Chancellor, Dr. Chapman; President of Trinity College, Dr. Ford, Principal of Magdalen Hall, Dr. Williams, Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Mr. Whitby, Senior Proctor, Mr. Moulding, Junior Proctor. Mr. Demainbray, Fellow of Exeter College, and Mr. Trollope, Fellow of Wadham College, waited on Their Majesties with the following Addresses, being introduced to the Queen by the Earl of Ailesbury, Lord Chamberlain of Her Majesty's Household:

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty:

Most Gracious Sovereign.

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Oxford, humbly intreat your favourable Acceptance of our fervent Congratulations on your Majesty's happy Recovery from your late Indisposition.

In this Hour of general Joy we approach you, Sire, with the most heart-felt Gratitude to the Almighty, for the Mercy which he has vouchsafed to us in your Preservation, and with the strongest Sentiments of Love and Veneration for your Royal Person.

To the Sincerity of these Professions the Moments of our Sorrow bore ample Testimony, when we deplored, before the Throne of God, that severe and awful Visitation with which it had pleased Him to afflict you; and when the same Language of Love, Duty and Affection was mingled with our Prayers and Intercessions.

Duly sensible of those Virtues which so eminently distinguish your Majesty, and which (under God) have endeared to us the inestimable Blessings we enjoy, we can never sufficiently acknowledge your unwearied Attention to the Prosperity and Interests of your Subjects, your mild and legal Exercise of the Authority which is vested in you, and your tender and zealous Protection of our Civil and Religious Liberties.

We most heartily commend your Majesty to the continued Protection of that Great Being, whose merciful Interposition we now adore; humbly beseeching Him to grant you a long and prosperous Reign over a grateful and affectionate People.

Given at our House of Convocation, the 23^d Day of March, in the Year of our Lord, 1789.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious Answer:

I Receive with great Satisfaction this loyal and affectionate Address from the University of Oxford, which may always depend upon My Protection. I need hardly express to you my Solicitude for the Advancement of sound Learning and Science, the best Foundations of our excellent Religion, as well as of our Civil Constitution. I shall only recommend to you a Continuance of your Attention to the Education and Morals of the Youth committed to your Care.

They were all very graciously received, and had the Honour to kiss His Majesty's Hand.

To the QUEEN's Most Excellent Majesty:

MAY it please your Majesty graciously to receive the cordial Congratulations of the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Oxford, on the King's happy Recovery from His late Indisposition.

Amidst the general Consternation at that Period, it was with the deepest Sense of Gratitude and Affection that we observed your Majesty's anxious Concern for the Sufferings of your Royal Consort, and the consequent Distresses of His People; and we ceased not to implore the extraordinary Assurances of God's Grace to support you under so great a Trial.

It has pleased the Almighty to accept the Prayers of an afflicted Nation; and, by raising the King from a Bed of Sickness, to promise us a Continuance of the Happiness we enjoy under His mild and auspicious Government.

Your Majesty's many amiable Qualities justly challenge our admiration and Regard; and we shall incessantly offer up our Petitions to the Almighty, that He would be pleased to continue His Blessings to you, as the Reward of those distinguished Virtues by which you add Lustre to the British Throne.

Given at our House of Convocation, the 23^d Day of March, in the Year of our Lord, 1789.

To which Address Her Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious Answer:

I Should do little Justice to the Sentiments of My Heart, if I did not express, in the strongest Manner, My Thanks for Congratulations so full of Duty to the King, and Attention to Me; and though My Sufferings have been
