Naples, October 5.

Yesterday being the Name-Day of the Hereditary Prince of the Two Sicilies, and an Extraordinary Courier having arrived the Day before with the News of his Royal Highness's Marriage with the Arch-Duchess Maria Clementina having been celebrated by Proxy at Vienna, there was, by Order of his Sicilian Majesty, a Grand Gala and a general Illumination in this City.

The Eruption in Mount Vesuvius still continues, but it's Violence is somewhat abated. As the several Lavas which have taken their Course down the Flanks of the Volcano, for Three Weeks past, have proceeded from it's Crater, they have seldom been able to reach the Vineyards, and have as yet done but little Damage. The Ashes have fallen in great Abundance, even at Naples, and must considerably affect the Vintage of this Year. After the dreadful Eruptions of 1767 and 1779, the present is the most formidable that has happened.
