Whitehall, June 23.

THE following Address of the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, has been presented to the King by the Right Hon. William Pitt, Lord Euston, and the Vice-Chancellor of the University: Which Address His Majesty was pleased to receive very graciously.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty,

The humble Address of the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of your University of Cambridge, in Senate assembled, humbly beg Leave to express our extreme Satisfaction at the salutary Measure now adopted by your Majesty, which we are persuaded is wisely calculated to discourage and disappoint the wicked Attempts of the Enemies of our happy Constitution. We have long, with Grief, observed the Promoters of Anarchy labouring with incessant Industry to establish and spread Principles incompatible with all Civil Government. But we trust that your Majesty's Exertions, seconded by your Two Houses of Parliament, whose Approbation of your Majesty's Proclamation breathes the true Spirit of Constitutional Liberty, will give Confidence and Firmness to your faithful and loyal Subjects, and secure the Obedience of those who might be in Danger of being misled by the fallacious Reasonings of designing Men, or tempted to risque new Revolutions, under the vain and delusive Hope of improving upon the most perfect of all known Political Constitutions.

Sensible of the Happiness we derive from your Majesty's just and mild Government, and convinced that the Peace and Prosperity of these Kingdoms depend, under Divine Providence, upon Obedience to the Laws and due Subordination amongst the various Orders of the Community, we will not fail to infill into the Minds of those committed to our Care the true Principles of Religion and Loyalty, and to offer up to Almighty God our earnest Prayers that He will long continue your Majesty a Blessing to an united, loyal, and free People.

Given under under our Common Seal, this 18:h Day of June, 1792.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious Answer:

I Receive with great Satisfaction this dutiful and loyal Address.

The Principles which the University of Cambridge have always manifested, and their Attachment to My Person and Government, leave Me no Doubt that they will continue diligently to inculcate that Love of Order and of well-regulated Liberty, which must naturally prevail in every enlightened Society, and which lead to a just Sense of the many distinguished Blessings enjoyed by My Subjects under our free and happy Constitution.

The following Address of the President and Fellows of Sion College, has been presented to His Majesty by the Rev. Dr. Kettilby, President, the Rev. Dr. De Salis, Dean, the Rev. Mr. Bromley and the Rev. Mr. Gilbank, Assistants, being introduced by the Lord of His Majesty's Bedchamber in Waiting: Which Address His Majesty was pleased to receive very graciously.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty,

The humble Address of the President and Fellows of Sion College, within the City of London.

Most Gracious Sovereign,
